PREFATORY LETTER.

To my Kinsfolk after the Flesh:

With varying degrees of activity, I have been engaged since 1869 upon the work which follows. The labour that year undertaken has just become of full age. To say a few words to you concerning it seems meet. This volume is principally a record of the life of Thomas Wight of Dedham and Medfield, and of his descendants to the present time. This record occupies the first ten chapters—a chapter for each generation. Chapter XI. is devoted to the Wights in America who are not as yet connected with Thomas Wight, or who are known to be of alien lineage. Chapter XII. considers those Wights in England who are now presumed by me to be the ancestors of said Thomas Wight. Chapter XIII. is concerned with fugitive Wights in Great Britain. Chapter XIV. contains the errors and the data which have been discovered or the events which have happened since the printing advanced too far to incorporate them in their proper places. The indexes and the list of authorities follow.

As to some of these matters more in detail:

The Indexes.

These are four in number.

I.—Index of Christian names of persons surnamed Wight;

II.—Index of names of persons who have intermarried with descendants of Thomas Wight aforesaid, whether of his surname or not;

III.—Index of brief pedigrees of some of the intermarrying families;

IV.—Index of places of residence mentioned in the various chapters.

Please note particularly that the references in these indexes are never to pages but to the full-faced numbers on the left side of the pages, which correspond with the numbers running consecutively through the book under the heading Children. Additional explanations of the indexes immediately precede them.

List of Authorities.

The list of authorities personally consulted in the preparation of this volume closes it. Whatever is herein stated on other than manuscript warrant, I have endeavored to authenticate by a cited volume and page. In the text the citation is abbreviated, but in the list the titles of the books together with the imprints are presented at such length as clearly to indicate the edition used. Register always means New England Historic Genealogical Register.

Plan of the Book.

A sharp distinction is made, in the method of treatment, between sons and daughters. The offspring of the latter are called Descendants and are treated to the most recent generation under the name of that daughter who first changed her name from Wight. Under her name all her descendants whom I mention at all, are gathered and finally disposed of. See for instance 974 where is recorded the history of Margaret Wight, who became Lynde by marriage. Under the title Descendants are clustered not only her children, but her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

In the case of sons of Wights however, the treatment is different. Their children only are grouped at the termination of their fathers' records under the heading Children. Each child of sons is supplied with a number in heavy type —being the same number which is repeated in the succeeding chapter, where the sons' children are each considered in extenso. If, however, any of these children died young or unmarried, or if their history is unknown, or if, as in the case of persons now infants, they have no history to record, the fact is indicated after the birth date by some appropriate phrase, and as to such persons, the record is finally closed with the line giving their birth. Gaps in the orderly consecution of numbers are caused by this dropping out of persons about whom there is no chronicling beyond the birthit em and the brief statement accompanying it. Therefore, after obtaining from Index I., the number of some Wight, if you do not find this number in the proper order among the full-faced side-figures, you must then look back to the preceding chapter under the heading Children, where you will find that brief reference to the person sought which prevented the necessity of longer recital.

Having found, however, a Wight with a history, there are several matters to be noted: Observe the small superior figures after Christian names. These figures indicate the number of generations which the several persons are removed from Thomas Wight, our first New England ancestor, who is always Thomas[1] Wight. These figures are used only with the names of the descendants of Thomas[1] Wight. Observe also in parentheses the italic Christian names, with superior figures, at the beginning of each record. These names show the regular line of ancestry of the person whose name they follow, through father, grandfather and remoter ancestors, back to the original Thomas[1] Wight.

Notes, instead of being placed at the foot of pages, are arranged after the families which they principally concern. These notes frequently relate to the pedigrees of intermarrying families. Where several related persons intermarry with Wights, grouping and cross-referencing permit a compact and clear statement in a single note. See for instance the Fairbanks (36) and Adams (189) notes. Two dates connected by a dash, whether in parenthesis or not, indicate the period of birth and death of the person whose name they follow.

The plan which, however, is by no means original, might well be illustrated for the benefit of those whose minds have not been turned to genealogical matters. Let us suppose you wish to examine this book for the history of a Nathaniel Wight, who lived in Wrentham, Mass., and married Ruth Hawes. Three Indexes (I., II., IV.) are accessible for clues. Looking at Index I. under Nathaniel, you find not less than ten persons of that given name. Disliking the task of examining each reference, you turn to Wrentham in Index IV., and find over forty recurrences of that place of residence. Now consulting Index II. (the most likely one in every case where the marriage is known) you find under Hawes, Ruth, the figure 48, indicating that the marriage of Ruth Hawes is given at 48. Turning to 48 (page 26) you discover what is known of Nathaniel Wight, of Wrentham. The superior figure [4] indicates that he is of the fourth generation from Thomas[1] Wight and the parenthetical characters (Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]) are the chain of his ancestors. Glancing at his children you observe they were six in number, running from 114 through 119. Three of these, Benoni 114, Mary 115, and James 117, are furnished with a birth date, and nothing more. Consequently in the next chapter (the fifth) on page 42, the histories of these three persons are given. The other three of Nathaniel's children are finally disposed of under their father Nathaniel: of Ruth 116, and of Deborah 119, nothing is known, and of Sarah 118, her death unmarried is given after her birth. All of these six children are therefore noted in these various ways.—If you desire to examine Nathaniel's ancestors more carefully, fix first in your mind his number, 48, and look back in the preceding chapter (chapter III.) to where 48 occurs in consecutive order under Children—you find it on page 11. There you note that Nathaniel was the son of Joseph[3] Wight, whose number is 9. In like manner this Joseph's father is discovered.

Again, you are looking for Katherine Brattle Wheelock, who married Edward Doubleday Harris, of New York. Index I. is not available because confined only to Christian names of Thomas[1] Wight's descendants of the surname Wight; Index IV. is practically unavailable because there are so many references to New York. Index II under Harris, Edward Doubleday, gives the number 83. Turning to that number (page 36) you find Katherine Brattle Wheelock is of the seventh generation from Thomas[1] Wight, you find from the indenting of her name that she is the daughter of Hiram[6] Wheelock, and from the indenting of his name that he was the son of Eli[5] Wheelock. He with ten others were children of Martha[4] Wight (83) who married Jonathan Wheelock. Martha having lost the name Wight, her descendants as far as chronicled at all, are chronicled in this one place. Martha[4] Wight's ancestors are given in parentheses (Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), and are examined just as Nathaniel's were, above.

I will be glad to give individual assistance by letter to any to whom my explanations are not clear.

ERRORS AND ADDITIONS.

Chapter XIV. is occupied with these matters. Always consult Chapter XIV. for possible bearing upon any number in the body of the book. As to the errors, I must say of them as the sacred Volume says of offences (Luke xvii. 1): "It is impossible but that offences will come." I have corrected the proof almost entirely alone and subject to many interruptions—a partial excuse for the errata for which I am responsible. For most of the remaining inaccuracies I must blame the carelessness, poor memory, or ill chirography of many a correspondent. I have endeavored by means of Chapter XIV., the Indexes and the notes, to neutralize the noxiousness of the mistakes, and I dare assert that as a whole this book is reliable.

UNCONNECTED WIGHTS.

Some of the Wights in Chapter XI. are descendants—parentage as yet undiscovered—of Thomas[1] Wight; some are Wights of a later emigrating wave: some, extracted mostly from books, are Wights only by the grace of a printer's blunder.

THE BRITISH WIGHTS.

I have but glanced at the subject of Thomas Wight's ancestors and at the English Wights in general. The origin of the name, its connection with the Isle of Wight, the relation of the various British families to each other, and the biographies of each—all these subjects are here but little, if at all, considered. I have picked up a few Wight pebbles on the Albion shores—the great Wight sea is yet unexplored.

I must not omit a word concerning Thomas[1] Wight of Dedham and Medfield. There have been some of you who have disparaged his intelligence because his mark (not his name) authenticates his will (page 4). As to this something must be said:

1. If Thomas[1] Wight could not write he had many companions among the early New England fathers. The average Englishmen studied arms not letters in the days of the Armada; they paid less attention to intellectual pursuits under Elizabeth and the first James in old England, than under the latter's ill-starred successor in the wilds of New England. If our Thomas[1] Wight was not educated, we know to his everlasting renown that he voted to tax himself for the first free school established in Massachusetts, and that he, all his surviving sons and his son-in-law subscribed of their poverty to the building of Harvard College.

2. But it does not follow that Thomas[1] Wight could not write because he did not sign his will. The early settlers had not the aversion to marks which characterizes this era: indeed I have the impression that marks were better form than names to solemn instruments like deeds and wills, even though the signer were in good health and knew how to write: or, if this were not so, that whether a name be actually signed or a mark made, depended much upon caprice.

3. But there is some evidence on this point. Forty-four citizens of Medfield signed a petition in 1664 against a change of government. The original petition which was copied into the New England Historic Genealogical Register, XIII., 346, was owned in 1859 by Mr. Charles H. Morse of Cambridgeport, Mass., who stated in the Register that the original "is signed with the own hands of the signers." Thomas Wight is the fourth of these signers. Again Thomas Wight was one of the committee of Dedham citizens to manage the affairs of Medfield until that town should be fully incorporated. As such committee man his name is certainly not signed by mark. His name is, however, signed by mark to the several estates which he inventoried, mentioned in page 3 of this volume. To these should be added the Medfield estate of Joseph Morse of Dorchester. (Register VIII., 277). We have evidence, therefore, that he did sign his name to documents still in existence.

4. But there is some opportunity for inference. It will be seen that Thomas Wight was selectman for twenty-five years, that he was repeatedly called to do important services where penmanship was required; he was collector of funds; he was a deacon of the Medfield church: he was the wealthiest citizen of Medfield: he married a sister of the Apostle Eliot. I am forced to believe that a man of this standing in his community had the foundation of intellectual capacity and an average education.

Where so many have aided me in collecting material for this work and in forwarding its publication, it seems very difficult to particularize. Yet there are a few to whom I am under especial obligations. These are Gertrude Abbey[9] Wight (2694), of Toledo, Ohio; Henry Kirke[8] Wight (1794), of Indian Orchard, Mass; Joseph Franklin[8] Wight (1629), of Wellesley, Mass.; Nancy Maria[8] Wight (1831), of Detroit, Mich.; Esther Sewell[7] Fellows (1053), of Lawrence, Mass.: Rev. Daniel[7] Wight (1234), of Natick, Mass.: Mary Morse, of Medfield, Mass.; Charles Frederick[9] Farlow (299), of Boston: Mary Hewson[7] Rowland (427), of Chicago, whose pens have always been at my disposal for any service. Delicate attentions savoring of money have flowed hither from Sarah Wight[7] Wheelock (410), of Battle Creek, Mich.; George Alden[7] Wight (988), of Cairo, Geo.; Lewis[8] Wight (1626), of Brookline, Mass. and Joseph Franklin[8] Wight (1629), of Wellesley, Mass. In addition, I cannot forget the kindness of Theresa Hubbell West, of the Milwaukee Public Library, and the long-suffering endurance of Daniel S. Durrie, of the State Historical Society, Madison, Wis. Of these, all survive but Esther Sewell[7] Fellows (1053), whose untimely death, ere she could see the completion of the work to which she so persistently and intelligently contributed, I shall never cease to deplore.

As my pen approaches its weary close, I am reminded of these words of Baron Glenbervie (preface to Douglas' Reports):

> The nature of this undertaking precludes that sort of ambition by which authors are so often animated: and my utmost aim will be attained, if I shall be found to have merited in any degree, the humble praise of useful accuracy: Ubi ingenio non erat locus, curae testimonium promeruisse contentus.

And yet with even this result, I should not be entirely content. I shall hope in addition to stimulate in all your hearts a love for the ties of kindred and for the memory of worthy ancestors. In this age of intense activities, of hard practicality, it pleases me to tender you a volume which will not kindle thoughts of business pursuits, which belongs to the quiet of the evening hour. To interest your leisure moments, to awaken memories of your dear ones gone from your sight during childhood days, to arouse your curiosity concerning the remote authors of your existence, to inspire you to keen study of the character and habits of the founders of this republic as represented in your own ancestry—such results to accomplish is the wish and hope of your kinsman.

William Ward Wight

THE WIGHTS.

CHAPTER I.

FIRST GENERATION—THOMAS WIGHT.

1. I know nothing of Thomas Wight's arrival in New England, or his history there previous to the winter of 1635-6, at which time he seems to have been in Watertown. Over a year later he appears tangibly in Dedham. "The 18th of ye 5th month, comonly called July 1637" Thomas Wight with eleven other persons, having been duly certified by the magistrates, and having subscribed unto the covenant, was admitted an inhabitant of Dedham. At this time his family consisted of his wife Alice or Elsie, and his children Henry, John, Thomas, and, doubtless, Mary. In the distribution of lands for homesteads, Thomas Wight received from the town the portion, twelve acres, allotted to each married man. The boundaries of this early grant to our ancestor, are given in the Town Records as follows:

"Thomas Wight twelve Acres more or lesse made up good by an enlargemt rune in amongst ye Rockes & for woode and timbr as it lyeth ye one side by the highwaye leading into the Rockes for ye most pte & John Luson from that waye upon a lyne Southwest unto ye brooke that compasseth said Wight and soe by that Brooke as that side lyeth next John Luson towards the North. And the other side lyeth by Anthony ffisher throughout wth a c'rteyne p'cell of grounde for a Situacon of a house a yeard Roome & easemt of water by the Brooke within the said Antho. ffishers lyne as by the marks and dooles app'eth. The one head abbutteth upon the waest towards the East and the other upon John Lusons Rockes towards ye west, the high waye leading towards the Ragged playne run'g through the same."

The highway at that time passed over the hill to the southeast of where it now runs and adjoining the residence of Thomas Wight. The outline of this grant will ever be easily traced by the Rockes and Brooke. In addition to the home lot, is a number of subsequent grants of "planting ground," woodland and meadow. His tillage land besides the home lot, consisted of 15 acres on the east side of the present public road, extending from the cross road bounding his home lot nearly to the great common. (Wight's Wight Family, 9, 10.) The history of this home lot I shall advert to in another place, p. 5.

The life, then, which our ancestor had abandoned in England, he begins anew in quiet and seclusion in the New England wilds. Far from the excitement of the contests between Charles I. and his embittered subjects, the career of Thomas Wight was, as I believe, most congenial and adapted to his character. He and his wife were received into the church "ye 6th of ye 7 mo. 1640." On October 8, 1640, he became a freeman (Register, III, 188). For six years, beginning in 1641, he was a selectman of Dedham (Mann's Annals, 79). His name frequently occurs in the early records. He took an active part in the concerns of the town and was repeatedly selected for the performance of various public services (Wight's Wight Family, 11). The earliest mention of his name in the Record of Births, Marriages and Deaths, occurs in 1639, in the following style: "Samuell, the Son of Thomas & Alice Wight, was borne the 5 of the 12 mo." (Hill's Records of Dedham, I., 1; Register, IV, 360). Thomas Wight's name appears fourth on a list of Dedham inhabitants who (first of 11th month 1644), "taking into consideration the great necesitie of providing some meanes for the Education of the youth in ye sd Towne, did with an unanimous consent, declare by voate, their willingnes to promote that worke, promising to put too their hands, to provide maintenance for a free school in our sd Towne." Resolutions follow to raise £20 per annum, and put it with certain set apart lands in the hands of feofees to be improved for the school. This was the first free school in Massachusetts supported by a tax. (Register, XXII, 165). The last recorded instance of his labors for the common weal in Dedham is in 1650, when he, with others, was deputed by the town to attend to the erection of a village for the Indians at Natick. Other instances of his and of his descendants' regard for the aborigines will be noticed in their proper sequence. After 1650 his name does not again appear in connection with Dedham affairs except on the lists made out from time to time of the division of lands among the original proprietors, and on the lists of persons assessed for the payment of the public charges. (Wight's Wight Family, 11.)

As early as 1649 he became interested in the movement for dividing Dedham, which resulted in the formation of Medfield. Under date of November 14, 1649, the following minute appears in the Dedham Records: "Chosen by the inhabitants assembled for the managing and transaction of whatever is or may be needed for the further performing of the erecting, disposing, and government of the said village, the men whose names are hereunder written, who are fully authorized thereunto until there be such a company of men engaged in that plantation and associated together as the town of Dedham shall judge meet for that work and trust. Ralph Wheelock, Thomas Wight, Robert Hinsdell, Henry Chickering, John Dwight, Peter Woodward, Eleazar Lusher." (Tilden's Medfield, 36.) The agreement entered into by all who desired to be accepted as inhabitants of the village, is signed by Thomas Wight and his son John. On May 10, 1650, Thomas Wight was chosen the first of a committee of five—Thomas Wight, Robert Hinsdell, Timothy Dwight, Samuel Bulleyn and John Frairy—to assist and direct the measurer in laying out house lots in Medfield, and inasmuch as every grantee of house lots was directed to pay to the collector of the town one shilling for every acre in payment of the charges that concerned the town, Thomas Wight was chosen such collector. At the same meeting (May 10, 1650), Thomas Wight was named to represent Medfield, to assist and advise in laying out the farm to the heirs of Mr. Edward Alleyne, who had died in 1642. At the same meeting Thomas Wight, Robert Hinsdell and Samuel Bullen, were chosen to be present at the laying of the line betwixt Dedham and Medfield. At the same meeting Thomas Wight, Peter Woodward, John Dwight, Timothy Dwight, Samuel Bullen and Eleazar Lusher were chosen a committee on laying out highways. (Tilden's Medfield, 37–42.) On June 19, 1650, the committee proceeded to lay out thirteen house lots, no portion being more than 12 acres, the chairman of the committee mentioning his own and his son's portion last, as follows:

12.—To Thomas Wight, twelve acres, touching upon Robert Hinsdale at one angle, otherwise upon waste land.

This was on what is now Green Street, a little way from North Street, Medfield.

13.—To John Wight, six acres, abutting on Thomas Wight on the southwest, all else on waste land.

"Wight's Lane" led from North Street to those lots. (Tilden's Medfield, 45.)

All this action for the management of town affairs in Medfield was taken in Dedham. On the first of the eleventh month, 1650 (January 11, 1651, N. S.), Dedham surrendered jurisdiction of Medfield. The date of the removal of Thomas Wight from Dedham to Medfield is not known. Whenever he removed he took with him his entire family, except his eldest son Henry. His family consisted of his wife and the following children: Henry, John, Thomas, Mary, Samuel and Ephraim. From the valuation of the town of Medfield in 1652, it would appear that Thomas Wight was then the wealthiest citizen of the new town. His valuation was £322 and his son John, £88. Thomas Wight had in 1653 a grant "to be laid oute on the North plains, to begine at that end toward natick." There were also later grants to him as well as to other citizens. In 1654 Thomas Wight became selectman of Medfield, and served during the following years, 1654, '55, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74—the last being the year of his death. (Tilden's Medfield, 56, 60 et seq.)

References to our progenitor in the Medfield records show various duties which he was called upon to perform. In 1654 "Brother wight and brother barber are requested and Deputed to pro Cure slepers & planks for the metting House ether by procuring planks sawen or to purchase them for the town." (Tilden's Medfield, 62.) The next year the town settled with Brother Wight for procuring glass for the meeting house. On February 6, 1660, George Fairbanks received a grant of "such timber for fencing as shall make three hundred rails, with posts for it, as shall be set out by brother Wight, and John Medcalf shall appoint him with what he has already fallen to make up three hundred rails." (Jameson's Medway, 26.) In 1660 John Thurston had become the wealthiest citizen, valuation £281; Thomas Wight stood second with a valuation of £266. In 1661 it became his duty to assist in seating people in the meeting house.

In 1664, 8th month, 19th day, Thomas Wight's name was third signed with his sons Samuel and Thomas, and his son-in-law, Thomas Ellis, and 41 other inhabitants of Medfield to a memorial to the general court of the colony, stating that representations had been made to the king that there were divisions and dissatisfaction about the present government of the colony. The signers testify their unanimous satisfaction in adhering to the present government and "earnest desire for the continuance thereof and of all the liberties pertaining thereto, which are contained in the charter granted by King James and King Charles the first of famous memorie, under the encouragement and security of which charter we, or our fathers, ventured over the ocean into this wilderness through great hazards, charges and difficulties." They ask the Court to petition for a continuance of the present establishment, and that they may not be subjected to the arbitrary power of any who are not chosen by the people according to their patent. "So earnestly begging ye sweete presence and blessing of God on all your faithfule Endeauors Wee shall rest full obedience to support the present Government with our Persons and estates." This petition is in full in the Register XIII., 346, where it is stated that the original is signed with the own hands of the signers.

In 1667 Thomas Wight is mentioned as a deacon in the Medfield church.

In 1670 the selectmen paid Thomas Wight "for hemp and bell rope making," 1*s.* 6*d.*

On January 25, 1672, Thomas Wight was chairman of a committee, "To treat and conclud with John of Boggastow, we mene John a Wasameg of Natick for the interest and right he claims in the Lands within our Towne Bownes on the west side of Charlles River"—what was later Medway. (Jameson's Medway, 17.) The business was promptly attended to, and under date of March 1, 1672, the record says: "This day the rate for the Endians pay was Drawen up it being 21£ 7*s.*" Thomas Wight seems to have taken much interest in the future Medway. In 1659 he and his son Thomas had received grants of lots on the west side of Charles River, the former of 15 acres and the latter of 6 acres. This was in the Old Grant; in 1660 the New Grant immediately to the west was divided by lot among the Medfield proprietors. In this division Thomas Wight received 166 acres, the largest except two, of 47 proprietors. I find no specific reference to these tracts in Thomas Wight's will, but all his children (except Henry [2]) and several of his grandchildren held land west of the Charles, for which see their names. No Wights lived there until Nathaniel[3] Wight (41) moved about 1713 to Medway.

We find our ancestor useful in other ways. The inventory of the estate of Samuel Morse of Medfield was taken by Thomas Wight, George Barber and Ralph Wheelock, 10:5: 1654 (Register, IX, 141); of Abraham Harding, by Thomas Weight, Robert Hensdell and Ralph Wheelocke, 6:2: 1655 (Register, IX, 35); of Henery Glover by Thomas Wight, Robert Hensdell and Ralph Wheelocke, 21:5: 1655 (Register, IX, 135); and of John Fisher of Medfield, by Capt. George Barber, William Avery, Peter Woodward, Thomas Wight and Henry Adams, 9:5: 1668. (Register, XIX, 36.)

Thomas Wight and all his surviving sons in Medfield and his son-in-law subscribed for building the new brick college at Cambridge, now known as Harvard University. (Tilden's Medfield, 76; Register, X, 49). Thomas Wight's name occurs immediately after Mr. John Wilson's and Mr. Ralph Wheelock's:

Thomas Wight, Sr, 4 bushelles of Endian corne of which he have payd 3 s in money.
Ephraim Wight 2 bushelles of Endian corne.
Samuell Wight 1 bushell of Endian corne.
Thomas Wight, Jr, 1 bushell of Endian corne.
Thomas Elice, 1 bushell Endian corne and a half. See also 4, 6, 7.
Thomas Wight died in Medfield March 17, 1673–4.

Of his first wife I know but very little. The Dedham records state that Alice, wife of Thomas Wight, was received into the church the 6th day of the 7th month of 1640. The Medfield records give her death July 15, 1665. It is with sincere regret that I am compelled to leave our great mother so meagrely chronicled. On December 7, 1665, Thomas Wight married for his second wife Lydia, widow of James Penniman of Boston, and sister of John Eliot the apostle to the Indians. See a reference to her in Thomas Wight's will. Lydia Eliot was, probably, baptized at Nasing, Eng., July 1, 1610, her father being Bennett Eliot, (Register, XXVIII, 145). She is the Lydia Eliot mentioned by Mr. Wm. H. Whitmore in the Heraldic Journal, Oct. 1868, p. 190, he being then in doubt whether she had crossed the ocean. I have not the date of her marriage to James Penniman, but of her nine children the eldest was baptized March 26, 1633; the youngest was born September 29, 1653. Her first husband died December 26, 1664. (Register, XXXVII, 168.) Lydia Wight's will was made December 2, 1673, and was probated July 27, 1676—the latter act approximating the date of her death. In this instrument she mentions her former husband James Penniman, and speaks of her second husband as then living. She appoints her son Samuel Penniman executor, and her "loving cousin" Jacob Eliot and Theophilus Frary overseers. Inventory £109: 11:04. Children mentioned: Samuel Penniman, Lydia Adams, Sarah Robinson, Bethia Allin, Hanna Hall, Abigail Corie, Mary Penniman. As to the Penniman family, see Bates' Braintree Records. The signature to Lydia Wight's will:

This is not the Lydia Eliot concerning whom Rev. Samuel Danforth, colleague of the Apostle, wrote as follows on page 252 of Roxbury church records: "Anno 1655, 26d, 6m, Lydia Eliot being convict of theft & lying & pride, all wch became famous & notorious, she was cast out of ye Church. Her theift was ye taking away of lace from one shop in Boston, & neer ye space of a year after, stealing away a Tiffany Hood out of another shop, and being charged wth these things by ye Owners, she denyed ym agn & againe, but afterwd was found out & made restitution (she stole also a skaine of yarn of halfe a pound, wch was found out after her excommunication). 2d 9m 1656, Lydia Eliot upon her humiliation was received againe & ye Church confirmed their love to her." Ellsworth Eliot, M. D., of New York, to whom I am indebted for several favors, conjectures that this Lydia may have been the daughter of Philip, the brother of the Apostle, or possibly a servant of one of the brothers who assumed the surname of her employer.

In the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred seventy-two, the seventh day of the twelfth month, I, Thomas Wight, Senior, of Medfield, in the county of Suffolk, in New England, being by the good hand of God in some comfortable measure of health at the present, and sound in my memory and understanding, yet being grown in age and accompanied with the infirmities incident thereunto, and thereby frequently put in mind of my mortality, do, therefore, in the name and fear of God (in preparation to my expected change), make and ordain this my last will and testament for the disposing and settling the things of this life wherewith it hath pleased God to intrust me, in manner and form as followeth :—Wherein, I first give and commit my soul into the

[There is an error in the footing of the inventory, it should be £464 05 01.]

Henry Wight and Ephraim Wight personally appeared April 2, 1674, before John Leverett, Esq., Govr. and Edward Tyng, Assist., and made oath that this paper contains a just and true inventory of the estate of their late father, Thomas Wight, of Medfield, to the best of their knowledge, and that when they know more they will discover the same.—Suffolk County Probate Records, Vol. 7, 447.

In the probate records, the date of the death of Thomas Wight, prefixed to the inventory of his estate, is March 17th, 1673—the year 1674, according to the manner of dating at that time, not commencing till eight days later, March 25. His estate was apprized seven days after his decease, the 24th, 1 mo 1673–4. His death is recorded in the Medfield records under the year 1674, as it should be. (Wight's Wight Family, 105—110)

THE HOMES OF THOMAS WIGHT.

A—IN DEDHAM.

The description of the home lot which Thomas Wight received in 1636 in Dedham has already been given, p. 1. The house erected by him on this lot stood at the foot of a little rise of land on the margin of the plain on the northwest of the brook mentioned in the grant and but a little distance from it. This little house was of slender material and thatched. The frame building which succeeded this was occupied by Henry[2] Wight (2) when his father and the remainder of the family moved to Medfield. Whatever title Henry had to the premises was confirmed to him by his father, by his will probated in 1674. Under date November 25, 1678, occurs the following record: "Granted to Henery Wight so much timber of the Towne comon land as will make a dwelling House for his Son Joseph Wight, and to take also two or three loads of pine timber for bord for the sayd House." This dwelling house was an addition to the frame residence just mentioned. Upon the death intestate in 1680 of Henry [2], the title to these premises vested in his four surviving sons in common but finally settled in the elder of these, Joseph [3], (9), who passed his life there, dying in 1729. His eventual successor in the residence and ownership was his son Ebenezer [4], (49), whose nine children were born there. His eldest surviving son Joseph [5], (124), born 1748, was the last Wight to occupy this aged frame Here he was born, here his twelve children were born, and here he died in 1826. Here in 1774 had died the last of the aborigines in Dedham, Sarah Quabish, whose husband died in another town two years later. During the later life of Joseph [5], (124), and for a short period after his death, there were tenants in the old house—the latest occupant being Joel Stowell. About 1830 the ancient dwelling, the home of six generations of Wights, was taken to pieces. Where the hearth stone was Danforth Phipps[6] Wight, M. D. (267), planted in 1840 an elm tree, which now flourishes,—may it ever flourish!—in remembrance of the common ancestor of us all. Upon the death of Ebenezer[4], the title to the premises passed to his son Rev. Ebenezer[5], (125), and after his death in 1821 it passed to his children in common. In the youngest of these Edward[6], (270), the title finally rested and upon his death and the death of his widow in 1887, it has settled in their children. Thus this sacred little spot has been continuously in the Wight family from 1636 up to this hour. There are now no buildings upon it.

Rev. Ebenezer[5] Wight (125), did not live after manhood upon the old grant. Upon his marriage to Catherine Fuller he resided in the Fuller homestead on the main street in Dedham, about a stone's throw from the old grant. This homestead finally vested in the children of Rev. Ebenezer, and here Danforth Phipps[6] Wight, M. D., (267), passed his long and useful life. Upon the death of the last survivor of these children, the title passed to Danforth Phipps[7] Wight, (570), a son of Rev. Ebenezer's son Edward, in whom it now rests. His title is an estate for life with remainder to his widow and children. The old Fuller house, full of rare and ancient furniture, was inhabited until October, 1884, and stood upon its lot until December, 1884. From April, 1884, it was occupied by its owner Danforth Phipps[7] Wight, (570), who at the time was building upon the same lot a new residence in the colonial style. Some of the wainscoting of the old house was transferred to the lower hall of the new mansion and much of the old furniture ornaments, and gives a quaint flavor to, the recent building. Since October, 1884, the present owner has occupied his new home, and dispenses, as I well know, a genial and abundant hospitality.

B.—IN MEDFIELD.

As already stated, p. 2, the home lot of Thomas[1] Wight in Medfield was twelve acres in quantity, "touching upon Robert Hinsdale's at one angle, otherwise upon waste land." The six acres of John[2] Wight (3) joined his father upon the southwest. The houses upon these lots were a short distance from North street and Wight's lane, now Green street, led from North street thereto. The residence built upon the twelve acres of Thomas[1] was his home the remainder of his life. By consulting the inventory of his estate, p. 4, the reader can form his own conjecture as to the number and arrangement of the rooms in this house, and as to the wealth of its occupant. By his will the home lot, dwelling house, barn and outhouses went to his youngest son, Ephraim[2] Wight, (7). These home buildings escaped the torch of King Philip's Indians in 1676, although structures close by fell victims to the flames. Said Ephraim dwelt upon this spot until his death in 1723, when his youngest son, Daniel[3] Wight, (42), inherited the place. It was his home until his death in 1744. His eldest son, Peter[4] Wight, (108), succeeded to the ownership; but in 1762 he sold the estate to John Hooker of Medway. This Medfield homestead was, therefore; in the family from about 1650 until 1762. The same year said Hooker resold to Nathan Coolidge. During the latter's ownership the house was severed from the lot, and removed by Barachias Mason. The house became a part of the Mason homestead on North street opposite Dale street. This house descended to Johnson Mason, and was the one in which Lowell Mason the musician was born. The Mason house, which thus annexed and absorbed the old Wight homestead, still stands, although itself divided and removed to other lots.

The old Wight lot, after the severance of the dwelling, remained in the Coolidge family until 1797. The Coolidges were neighbors of the Wights, Peter Coolidge, the first of that name in Medfield, having bought in 1732 from John Fisher the old Robert Hinsdale place above mentioned. At the division of the Coolidge estate in 1797, Margaret Ellis, granddaughter of said Peter Coolidge, and niece of said Nathan Coolidge, received this Wight lot as her Coolidge inheritance. In 1810 she and her husband, Obed Ellis, deeded it to Nathan Allen, Jr. He failed in business (butchering) some years after, and his creditors appear to have come into possession of the lot by sheriff's deed. In 1824 they sold the lot to Amos Thayer and his son Otis W. Thayer, who, together carried on the same business there. A few years subsequently the lot and the same business passed into the hands of Elijah Thayer, another son of Amos. About 1854 he sold the place to John and Alson Dyer. After a few years they sold it to a Mr. Brown, who kept a hotel there. He, in turn, sold it to Solomon Cohoon, also a hotel keeper. Still later he sold the same piece of land to Alonzo B. Parker, the present owner. The lot has now no buildings upon it, but traces of the old Wight cellar are still visible.

CHAPTER II.

SECOND GENERATION.

2. HENRY[2] WIGHT (Thomas[1]) born , settled with his parents in Dedham in 1637. He became a member of the church August 14, 1646, and was admitted a freeman May 26, 1647. (Register, III, 191.) In 1652 is recorded the sale of two acres of land which "Thomas Wight doe alienate and grante unto Henery Wight his sonne." About the time of this grant occurred Henry's marriage to Jane Goodenow of Sudbury. Henry Wight remained in Dedham when the remainder of his father's family removed to Medfield. He is first mentioned in Dedham records in connection with town affairs in 1653, having been appointed to the discharge of a town office. In 1658 he was made constable by the General Court. He was selectman for ten years, his first service being in 1661, (Mann's Annals, 79) and he held that office at his death. In 1665 is recorded a grant of 120 acres from the town to Henry Wight. The records furnish few instances of so large a gift and no reason is assigned for a favor so unusual. On February 24, 167$\frac{3}{4}$, Henry Wight was one of three Dedham citizens appointed to lay out a house lot for Rev. Samuel Mann at Wrentham, and to take care about the church lot there. Henry is mentioned in his father's will as "my eldest son," "my well beloved son," and is appointed one of his executors. Henry received by this will all his father's "houses and lands lying and being in Dedham." This devise included the original grant of 12 acres from the town to Thomas Wight.

Henry's children were born in Dedham, and here he died intestate, February 27, 1680, or, as the record puts it, "Sergt. Henery Wight deceased 27:12:80." (Hill's Dedham Records I, 15.) Under March 14, 1680, occurs the following, "At a Generall Meeting it was proposed to the Town whether they would chose another selectman in the room of Sergt. Wight, deceased." Power to administer upon his estate was granted April 26, 1681 "unto Jane, his relict widow and Joseph Wight his eldest son." The inventory, accepted two days later, aggregated £524.1.0. (Suffolk County Probate Records, Vol. 9, 21.)

Jane Wight, who had joined the church June 12, 1653, died in Dedham, May 16, 1684. Her estate inventoried £462.08.03—Joseph Wight and Nathaniel Chickering being administrators.

8.—1. JOHN, born December 13, 1652, died in Dedham, October 28, 1671.
9.—2. JOSEPH, born May 11, 1654.
10.—3. DANIEL, born November 24, 1656, baptised November 30, 1656.

12.—5. JONATHAN, born July 2, 1662, baptised July 13, 1662.

Note 1. Reproductions of the signatures of Henry and Jane Wight, Jane's signature having been made at the time of her husband's death:

Note 2. Jane Goodenow was daughter of John and Jane Goodenow, who in April, 1638, emigrated from Semley, Wiltshire, Eng., in the Confidence, from Southampton, John Jobson, master. John Goodenow was 42 years of age at that time. (Register XIV. 335.) He died March 28, 1654. His will, allowed May 24, 1654, gave one-half of his estate (after a life estate in his wife and certain legacies) to his daughter, Jane Wight, and appointed his "sonne in law Henery Wite" his executor. (Register XIX. 43.) Variation in the orthography of surnames was not uncommon in early New England. See Barry's Framingham, 264, where Henry Wayte or Wight, of Dedham, is mentioned as the husband of Jane.

Note 3. Dates of admission to church membership and to freemanship afford only scant clues to birth dates. On May 18, 1631, the General Court of Massachusetts ordered that none be made freemen except church members, and on May 4, 1634, said Court provided that the oath of freemen should be giveu ouly to men of or above 16 years of age.

3. JOHN[2] WIGHT, (Thomas[1]) born , is mentioned but once in Dedham records—in a transfer of land from Thomas Wight "unto John Wight his sonne" in 1652. He was one of the thirteen original settlers of Medfield, going there with his father. He received as his grant for a house lot "six acres abutting on Thomas Wight on the southwest, all else on waste land." Wight's Lane led from North Street to this place (Tilden's Medfield, 45). John married Anne or Ann or (in Dedham records) An,—surname unknown. John was made a freeman in Medfield May 18, 1653 (Register, III, 192), but died September 28, 1653—the first to die of the thirteen pioneers of Medfield. Administration upon his estate was granted to "Ann late wife of John Wight in behalfe of herselfe & ye childe she goes withall." (Register, VIII, 276.) The inventory of his estate taken October 3, 1653, amounted to £171.02.09, which was ordered equally divided between Ann and her still unborn child. As John's estate in 1652 aggregated only £88, it is presumed that his marriage was the cause of the increase in so short a time.

CHILD.

13.—1. ABIHAILE, born in Medfield, January 1, 1653-4.

Note. The widow, Ann Wight, married April 11, 1655, Isaac, son of William Bullard, of Dedham, and removed to that town. Her date of death is uuknown; her husbaud, "Isaac Bulward, deceased, 11:3:76." See Morse's Sherborn and Holliston, 46, for Ann's descendants of the Bullard marriage

4. THOMAS[2] WIGHT, (Thomas[1]), born , is not mentioned in Dedham records, he having moved to Medfield with the family, doubtless before he was of age. He married Mehetabel Cheney, born June 1, 1643. (Register, V, 334.) Thomas was accepted as a citizen of Medfield in 1658. His home lot there was on Green Street, east of his father's home. Thomas and his brother Ephraim (the latter having inherited his father's place,) were permitted to fence across the roads leading through their home lots, on condition that they make "handy bars." Thomas' name occurs among the Medfield proprietors in 1675. He had also lands in Medway. In 1659 he received six acres in the Old Grant, and, later, 56 acres in the New Grant lying immediately west. In 1702 when the Black swamp in Medway was laid out, Thomas' two sons Joshua and Eleazar received portions—Joshua 3 rods 6 feet and Eleazar 4 rods 2 feet—thereof, doubtless by right of inheriting their father's realty in Medway. (Jameson's Medway, 19, 23, 40.) None of these persons resided in Medway.

In 1675 Thomas Wight subscribed one bushel of "Endian corne" to the fund for the "new brick college" at Cambridge, but on account of his deprivations during the Indian war the next year, his subscription seems to have been remitted.

In the attack upon Medfield by the Indians February 21, 1676, his residence was destroyed and he was reduced to apply with others for a rebate of his "reats." His personal petition for relief is as follows:

THOMAS WIGHT'S PETITION.

To the Houorable Governor, Deputy Governor & Magistrates, with the deputies sitting in general Court at Boston May 8 1678 the petition of Thomas Wight humbly sheweth:

That whereas it pleased God to visit us in our towne of Medfield with the awful and solemn strook by the Indians and bereaving me of my habitation and six cattell being burnt in my barn, my horse taken away and even bereaved of most of the means for my sustenanee. so that I have been exposed to greate sufferings thereby, not having wharwith to get corn for my family but as I went to my dayly labour for it: that had to help others in their want; and have had no way to procure cloathings but as we could by any means procure cotton or sheeps wool and for shous nesity have Inforeed me to run in debt ever senee and have not wharewith to pay yet am earnestly called upon for reats and have not wharewith to pay although I should leve none for my self or famely who are six in all and many other difficulties that doe atend me for want of a habitation and other nesserys, the consideration wharof have put me upon nesity of besiching and emploring this Honored Court to east an aspeet of favour upon the deserted estate of your poor petitioner in passing an order to remit my rats depending, being beetwe three and four pounds, which shall ever oblige me to endeavor to pay with eheerfulnis for the futer to publique charge as god shall enable me as also to pray the god of marey to cast in aboundently upon you who are wilen to extend marcy to the efflieted in a day of thare destress which is and shall be the eonstant prayer of him who is your poor suppliant and humbel sarvent THOMAS WIGHT.

This is indorsed:—

The committee judged meet to hold him in one-half of the rates and extend the time till next Mareh for the other half. The deputies voted to remit all his rates, whieh was eonsented to by the magistrates on the 7 (8) 78. (Tilden's Medfield, 95.)

I do not find the dates of death of Thomas or of his wife. The inventory of Thomas' estate, made September, 25, 1690, amounted to £239.07.08, his brother Samuel and Edward Adams were administrators. His children were born in Medfield.

CHILDREN.

14.—1. MEHETABEL, born June 12, 1663, died doubtless before her father.
15.—2. THOMAS, born Oetober 27, 1665, died doubtless before his father.
16.—3. MARY ('Marie" in records), born February 20, 1667.
17.—4. ELEAZAR, born June 1, 1670.
18.—5. JOSHUA, born July 25, 1679.

Note. Mehetabel Cheney was daughter of William and Margaret Cheney or Cheiney, of Roxbury. William died aged 63, June 30, 1667. See his will Register XVI, 164. His widow married a Burge and died July, 1686. (Savage's Gen. Dict., I, 373.)

5. MARY[2] WIGHT (Thomas[1]) born , probably before her parents' settlement in Dedham. I have thought fit to change the order of birth of Thomas[1] Wight's children, as given in Wight's Wight family, 15, to the extent of making this undated daughter older than at least her brother Samuel. This alteration presumes that their father's will does not mention his children in an exact chronological order. I have made this re-arrangement because the birth of Mary is not contained in the Dedham records, because if born after Samuel she would have been much younger than her husband, and because, as she was married in 1657, the latter event would have occurred quite early in her teens. None of these reasons by itself would suffice to work the innovation, but taken together they determined my mind. Mary's name is not found in the Dedham church or town records. She moved with her parents to Medfield and there married May 21, 1657, Thomas Ellis (Register XIII, 217), who was baptized in Wrentham, England, December 13, 1629, and moved from Dedham to Medfield about 1651-2. His house lot, in "The Bachelor's Roe," on North St., Medfield, has been continuously in the possession of himself and his descendants to the present day (Tilden's Medfield, 61, 378). Thomas died December 12, 1690; his widow died March 7, 1693; both in Medfield. There also all their children were born.

26.—8. THOMAS ELLIS, born July 24, 1674; nothing told.
27.—9. JOANNA ELLIS, born January 17, 1677.

Note 1. Thomas Ellis received by lot nine acres of land in the Old Grant and 77 acres of land in the New Grant, Medway (Jameson's Medway, 19, 23).

Note 2. For the origin of the name Ellis and for an attempt to trace the English Ellises, through one of William the Conqueror's barons, to the early kings of France, see Ellis' Notices of the Ellises.

6. SAMUEL[2] WIGHT (Thomas[1]), born February 5, 1639, is the earliest Wight mentioned in Dedham records: "Samuell ye sone of our brother Thomas wight was baptised ye 15th of ye 7 month, 1640." (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 24.) He moved to Medfield about 1650 with his father. In 1662 "Henirry Smith, John Bowers and Samervell wight ar Chosen to burn the woods in there severall parts of the town as they live." (Tilden's Medfield, 68.) The ancient Bible of Samuel's remote descendant, Martha Gibbs[6] Wight (426) now of Marietta, Geo., thus records his marriage: "Mr. Samuel Wight and Miss Hannah Albee, of Medfield, Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, were married by the Rev. Mr. John Wilson of the town aforesaid, on the 25th day of March, 1663." Samuel was made a freeman October 8, 1672 (Register, III, 242), and as early as 1673 was settled in the north part of the town. The same year he was constable. His name appears in the list of Medfield proprietors, made in 1675 (Tilden's Medfield, 78). His home was burned by King Philip's Indians, February 21, 1676, but was rebuilt, apparently on the same spot, the site of which is still visible near the house of Mr. William C. Allen on the west side of North St. (Tilden's Medfield, 84, 512). On account of his losses by the Indians, Samuel's subscription of one bushel of corn to the "new brick college," at Cambridge, was forgiven. For the same cause he petitioned for relief from his taxes, and the records of the General Court, May 9, 1678, show the following action:

"Samuel Wight of Medfield, having suffered great loss by fire by the indian enemy, brought very low humbly desired the favor of the Court to remit him the rates about three or four pounds already due for the last year, hoping God will enable him to pay rates again for the future."

"The Court granted his request." (Tilden's Medfield, 96.)

The name of Samuel appears in the early lists of Dedham tax-payers; his name and his wife's appear among the members of Medfield parish church in 1697 (Tilden's Medfield, 108, 109); and his name occurs among the proprietors of the "black swamp" Medway in 1702 (Jameson's Medway, 40). His will was made May 19, 1710, appointing his sons Samuel and Joseph executors. He died December 21, 1716; his widow died April 24, 1723; both in Medfield. There also their children were born.

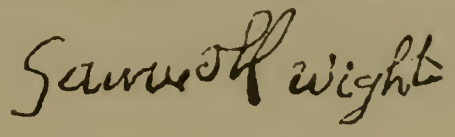
Note 1. Samuel's signature attached to papers relating to the estate of his brother Thomas in 1690:



(But Samuel made his mark to his will.)

Note 2. Hannah Albee, born in Braintree, August 16, 1641 (Register III, 126), was daughter of Benjamin Albee (Albie, Alby), who about 1651,2, moved from Braintree to Medfield, and subsequently to Mendon. (Savage's Gen. Dict., I, 20; Tilden's Medfield, 294.)

7. EPHRAIM[2] WIGHT (Thomas[1]), born January 27, 1645, was baptized in Dedham, February 8, 1645. He moved with the family to Medfield about 1650, but his name occurs on the Dedham tax-lists. He married in Medfield March 2, 1668, Lydia Morse, baptized in Dedham April 13, 1645 (Morse's Memorial of the Morses, 20; Morse's Sherborn and Holliston, 178.). Ephraim was made a freeman October 8, 1672 (Register III., 242.). He and his brother Henry were appointed executors of their father's will, which was probated in 1674. Ephraim was the residuary legatee of his father's estate and received also by special devise the homestead on Green Street. His name appears among the Medfield proprietors in 1675. His house seems to have escaped the ravages of King Philip's Indians in February, 1676, although the residence of Thomas[2] Wight (4) adjoining was burned. Ephraim's subscription of "2 bushelles of Endian corne" for building the "new brick college" at Cambridge occurs with many others. In 1697 he and his wife appear among the members of the parish church, Medfield (Tilden's Medfield, 108, 109). Ephraim was also interested in Medway property. He was one of twelve citizens of Medfield who accepted the offer of that town "to give fifty acres of land where it may be most convenient for the encouragement of any that would adventure to build a gristmill upon Charles River." This was the first mill built at Rockville, in Medway. When the Black Swamp of Medway was laid out in 1702, 7 rods and 4 feet fell to Ephraim. (Jameson's Medway, 37, 40.) He never resided in Medway, his son Nathaniel[3] (41) being the first Wight to reside within the limits of that town. Ephraim's mental condition late in life is to be inferred from the fact that Nathaniel Partridge and Thomas Boyden, husbands of his daughters Lydia (37) and Deborah (44) "protested against the so-called will of our honored father, knowing him to be a religious, good man, but not capable to make a will these seven years last past." (Tilden's Medfield, 512.) Notwithstanding this protest the will which was made September 27, 1717, was probated March 11, 1722-3. The original Wight homestead went to his son Daniel (42).

Ephraim died February 26, 1722-3, his wife had died July 14, 1722—both in Medfield. Their children had been born there.

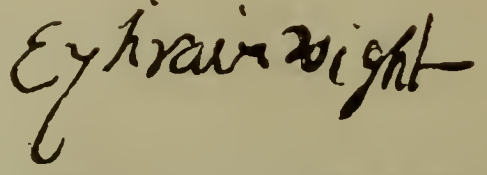
Note 1. Copy of Ephraim's signature to his will:



Note 2. The early Morses: Rev. Thomas Morse of Foxearth, Essex, England, made his will November 10, 1596, which is set out at length, Register XIX. 264. Rev. Abner Morse there states that Rev. Thomas was undoubtedly the father of Samuel Morse, who April 15, 1635, emigrated in the Increase to Watertown. He was then 50 years of age and his wife Elizabeth 48 (Register XIV, 311; Hotten's Original Lists, 64). In 1636 Samuel removed to Dedham and about 1650 to Medfield, where he and two of his sons were of the thirteen first families. He died December 5, 1654, and his widow June 20, 1655—both in Medfield (Register XIII, 217). See his will Register V, 299, and the inventory, Register IX, 141. Children of Samuel were:

1. JOHN MORSE, (1611—1657,) wife Annis, who died in Dedham September 1, 1693. Lived in Dedham, where are many descendants. In 1655, John, being a tailor, became an inhabitant of Boston (Drake's Boston, 341). Among his children were Joseph Morse (30:12:1640-1689) of Dedham, who November 12, 1668, married Priscilla Colburn, born April 1, 1646, sister of the wife of Joseph[3] Wight (9); and Ezra Morse (5:12:1643-1697), of Dedham, who, February 18, 1670, married Joanna Houre.
2. DANIEL MORSE, (1613—June 5, 1688,) was one of the founders of Medfield and of Sherborn. He married Lydia Fisher (who died aged 70, January 29, 1690), daughter of Anthony and Mary Fisher. Anthony, who died intestate in his 80th year, April 18, 1671, in Dorchester, Mass., was son of Anthony of Syleham, Eng. Among Daniel Morse's children were Lieut. Jonathan Morse, (1643—August 30, 1727) of Sherborn, who married Mary Barber; Lydia Morse, who married Ephraim Wight (7); Nathaniel Morse (1657—October 17, 1728) of Sherborn, wife Mary; and Samuel Morse (1661—March 2, 1704,) of Sherborn, wife Deborah, who died October 5 1719.
3. JOSEPH MORSE (1615—1654) married 1638 Hannah Phillips of Watertown, who died 1676 in Boston. Among their children were Samuel Morse (1639—February 28, 1717-18), of Medfield, who, February 10, 1664-5, married Elizabeth Wood (died June 26, 1682); Sarah Morse, born 1643, wife of Nathaniel Lawrence, of Groton, and ancestress of Amos and Abbott Lawrence; Doreas Morse, born 1645, who married, 1665, Benjamin Clark (1644-1724), of Medfield; Joseph Morse, (1649—February 19, 1717-18), of Sherborn, who, October 17, 1671, married first Mehetabel (July 22, 1655–November 12, 1681) daughter of Nicholas and Anna (Babcock) Wood, and, second, April 11, 1683, Hannah Babcock, of Milton (died November 9, 1711); and Jeremiah Morse (1651-1716), of Medfield, who married Elizabeth Hamant.
4. ABIGAIL MORSE, wife of Daniel Fisher, of Dedham, and great-great-grandmother of Fisher Ames.
5. SAMUEL MORSE married Mary Bullen. Returned to England and served as a colouel under Cromwell. (Register XIX, 265.)
6. JEREMIAH MORSE settled in Boston.
7. MARY MORSE died February 14, 1691; married 1641 Deacon Samuel Bullen, of Medfield. Many deseendants there.

CHAPTER III.

THIRD GENERATION.

9. JOSEPH[3] WIGHT (Henry,[2] Thomas[1]), born May 11, 1654, became a freeman May 8, 1678. (Register III., 245.) "Joseph Wite and Deborath Colborne marryed 15:11:1679." (Hill's Dedham Records I., 17.) Deborah died in Dedham, August 30, 1684, and Joseph married, April 22, 1685, Mary Stearns. He was selectman eighteen years, first in 1690, and town clerk thirteen years, first in 1709. (Mann's Annals, 79, 80.) During the last thirty-three years of his life he was deacon in the First Church, Dedham—in the pastorates of Rev. Joseph Belcher and Rev. Samuel Dexter. Joseph "was a man of superior judgment and of an excellent understanding; and was eminent for piety and sanctity of life. It is illustrative of the opinions and usages of his time, and proof of the high estimation in which he was held, that in his old age, many parents carried their young children to him that he might implore for them the favor of Heaven. In my youth I was acquainted with a venerable matron of this parish, who well remembered him and had received his blessing. She described with much feeling the impression made upon her mind by the solemnity of the scene, when in her childhood she stood before this good old man who, leaning upon his staff, laid his hand on her head and, in prayer, craved for her the blessing of God. . . . His creed was after the faith of his fathers, and he was of the straitest sect. He was exceedingly tenacious of all the forms and observances of religion practiced by the first settlers of New England, and zealously opposed all innovations in doctrine, and usages of worship. When he became the head of a family he failed not in the daily performance of family devotion; and such was his reverence for the Christian Sabbath that it was his uniform practice on that day to assemble his household together in family prayer, morning, noon and evening. Heaven gave him length of life, and those who knew him said of him that he passed it in the conscientious performance of his duties to God and to man." (Wight's Wight Family, 61, 62.)

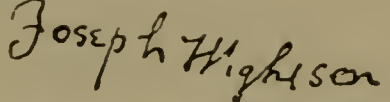
Deacon Joseph's will was made January 2, 1724–5, he died June 23, 1729, and his will was approved November 29, 1731. His widow died in Dedham December 25, 1733. His children were born in Dedham.

CHILDREN.

46.—1. JOSEPH, born December 10, 1681.
47.—2. DEBORAH, born August 25, 1684.
48.—3. NATHANIEL, born September 13, 1688.
49.—4. EBENEZER, born January 22, 1696.
50. 5 JABEZ, born July 12, 1701.

Note 1. The original gravestones of Joseph and Mary Wight were visible in the old Dedham cemetery in 1882. New stones with the former simple inscriptions have since succeeded upon the same site.

Note 2. Reproduction of the signature to the will of Joseph Wight:



Note 3. Nathaniel Colburn, one of the early settlers in Dedham, married there July 25, 1639, Priscilla Clark. Their daughter Deborah, born January 2[8], 1656, married Joseph Wight. Mary Stearns second wife of Joseph Wight, was daughter of Lieutenant Nathaniel and Mary (Stone) Stearns, and was born in Dedham, August 22, 1661. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 126, 6. 8; see 55, Note.)

Note 4. In the early church services in Dedham, the deacons read and tuned the psalms. Rev. Mr. Dexter records under date. October 24, 1724: "Voted that Mr. Jabez Pond shall for the future read the psalm and tune it, deacon Wight not being able." (Worthington's Dedham, 107.) As deacon Wight was then over 70 years of age, his voice had earned a rest.

10. DANIEL[3] WIGHT (Henry,[2] Thomas[1]), born November 24, 1656, married February 17, 1686 Anne (Annah, Hannah), baptized May 6, 1666, daughter of Andrew and Ann Dewing (Deuing, Dewen, Duin, Duein), of Dedham. Daniel became a freeman May 15, 1690 (Register III., 347), and was selectman of Dedham two years, first in 1712. (Mann's Annals, 80). His will made April 28, 1719 (probated July 6, 1719), describes his son John as "now in college." Daniel died in Dedham May 1, 1719. "Anne, the relict widow of Daniell Wight, died May 10, 1725." (Hill's Dedham Records, I., 51.) Her will made April 24, 1724, probated May 31, 1725, favors the youngest child, John, "to whom she wills everything." The children were born in Dedham.

CHILDREN.

51.—1. DAVID born December 19, 1686.
52.—2. DANIEL, born January 25, 1690.
53.—3. JOHN, born April 22, 1699.

Note. Signature to Daniel Wight's will:

11. BENJAMIN[3] WIGHT (Henry,[2] Thomas[1]), born June 18, 1659, was a member of the company of Captain John Jacob, of Hingham, in King Philip's war, and was doubtless on duty at Medfield in February, 1676–7, when the Indians wrought havoc among the homes of his uncles. (Register XLII., 102.) Subsequently to his military service he removed from Dedham to his mother's home in Sudbury, in the manuscript records of which town he and his family are traced under various disguises of spelling. He married April 10, 1690, Elizabeth Newell, of Boston. (Register XVIII., 140.) His line seems to have run entirely to the distaff. He died March 10, 1739; his widow died January 6, 1743—both in Sudbury. There were at least the following children—all born in Sudbury:

CHILDREN.

54.—1. JANE, born April 6, 1691. (Register XVIII, 141.)
55.—2. SARAH, born
56.—3. HANNAH, born December 6, 1702, not traceable further.
57.—4. EXPERIENCE, born March 10, 1705.

Note 1. Abraham Newell came to New England and settled in Roxbury in 1634 (Register XXXV, 244; Ellis' Roxbury, 124), aged 50. He was buried June 15, 1672. His son Isaac, aged 2 years at emigration, married December 14, 1658, Eliza or Elizabeth, daughter of William Curtis. Their fifth child, Elizabeth, born in Roxbury, January 6, 1669, married Benjamin Wight. The marriage date of Benjamin above given is from Sudbury records. Roxbury records say: "Elizabeth Newell maryed the same day as her sister Hannah." Her sister Hannah married John Holmes, April 9, 1690.

Note 2. This family of Benjamin Wight is the one improperly spelled in Barry's Framingham, 428.

12. JONATHAN[3] WIGHT (Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born July 2, 1662, removed from Dedham to Wrentham where August (not April as in Register IV., 85) 19, 1687, he married Elizabeth Hawes, of that place. He died in Wrentham intestate March 20, 1718–19, and administration upon his estate was granted January 14 thereafter. Elizabeth Wight married February 20, 1721–2, Samuel Bullard, of Dedham. (Register IV., 86.) She must have lived to an extreme old age as a deed (Suffolk Records, vol. 102, folio 247) bearing her signature releasing her dower estate in all the landed property belonging to her first husband, was dated April 2, 1764, 77 years after her first marriage. Jonathan by this deed is called "late of Wrentham, yeoman, deceased," and the parties to the deed, called his "children and heirs," are Elizabeth Ware, widow, Mary Whiting, widow, Jonathan Whiting, Jabez Ware and Michael Ware, yeomen, Jane Fairbanks, widow, Ezra Pond, yeoman, and Margaret Pond, his wife, Leonard Fisher, yeoman, and Hephzibah Fisher, his wife, Ezra Blake, gentleman, and Esther Blake, his wife, Elisha Pond, yeoman, and Phebe Pond, his wife, Elizabeth Bullard, living in Wrentham and formerly the wife of said deceased, grantors, and Jonathan Wight, of Wrentham aforesaid, yeoman, son to the deceased, grantee. The children of Jonathan and Elizabeth were born in Wrentham. (Register IV., 83.)

CHILDREN.

58.—1. JEANE, born September 6, 1688.
59.—2. ELIZABETH, born June 28, 1692.
60.—3. MEHETABEL, born September 6, 1694, died in Wrentham, September 3, 1704 (Register III, 32.)
61.—4. MARAH, born October 13, 1696.
62.—5. JONATHAN, born January 6, 1700.
63.—6. SARAH, born July 19, 1703.

Note 1. Following the record in Wrentham of the birth of Jonathan (62) is the statement "and another son they being twins born att ye same time." There is no further reference to this remarkable twin.

Note 2. Perhaps Jonathan[3] was attracted to Wrentham because his father Henry[2] Wight (2) purchased there in April, 1675, the house lot of John Littlefield. (Barry's Framingham, 317; Morse's Sherborn and Holliston, 46.)

Note 3. Probably Samuel Bullard, who married the widow Wight, was the Samuel born December 22, 1659, who married first Hannah Thorp. He was son of Isaac and Ann (Wight) Bullard (3, Note). (Hill's Dedham Records I, 7, 17.)

Note 4. Wrentham, like Medfield and Medway, was carved out of Dedham. Dedham was incorporated in 1636. The territory which was included in the original grant now forms the whole or part of 18 different towns: Dedham, 1636; Medfield, 1651; Wrentham, 1673; Sherborn, 1674; Needham, 1711; Medway (from Medfield) 1713; Bellingham, 1719; Walpole, 1724; Foxboro and Franklin (from Wrentham), 1778; Natick, 1781; Dover, 1784; Hyde Park, 1868; Norfolk, 1870; Norwood, 1872; Wellesley (from Needham), 1881; Millis, 1885, and West Roxbury. (Register XLI, 21; Dedham 250th Anniversary, 209.)

13. ABIHAILE[3] WIGHT (John,[2] Thomas[1]), born January 1, 1653–4, was but an infant when her mother married Isaac Bullard and moved to Dedham. The little child figures in 1657 as one of the forty-one proprietors of Medfield, in right of her father. (Tilden's Medfield, 63), and she received thirty-eight acres when the New Grant in the present town of Medway was divided among Medfield proprietors in 1660. (Jameson's Medway, 23.) But her name is not found among Medfield proprietors in the list made in 1675, and record of her marriage or death has been sought in vain. Thus early the line of one of Thomas Wight's sons drops out of our history.

16. MARY[3] WIGHT (Thomas,[2] Thomas[1]), born February 20, 1667, married in Medfield, April 8, 1686, Captain Joseph Clark, a cordwainer by trade, born 1664, oldest child of Joseph and Mary (Allen) Clark, of Medfield, oldest child of Joseph and Alice (Pepper) Clark, of Dedham. Captain Joseph settled in the north part of Medfield, but upon the death of his father in 1702, Captain Joseph received the old homestead in the south part of the town and removed thither. He was one of the prominent men of Medfield, built the grist-mill, and manufactured malt in an adjacent building. In 1695 he held the office of sealer of leather. Upon the death of Mary, December 16, 1705, he married the widow Abigail Smith, and died in 1731. The marriage of this Mary was the first recorded marriage in Medfield by the minister. Before this all marriages were solemnized by commissioners, no clergyman except of the established church having had the right to unite persons in wedlock. (Tilden's Medfield 349, 101; Jameson's Medway, 462.)

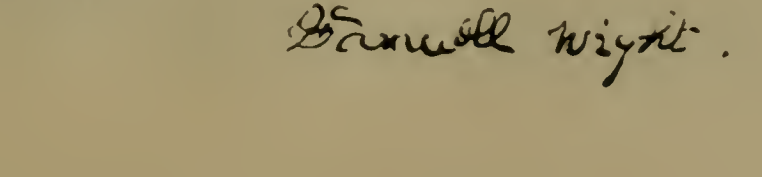
Note. The statement above that James Phipps had twenty-six children is upon the authority of Mather (Magnalia I, 167), who adds that they were all the offspring of one mother. The statement is accepted unquestioned in Bowen's Life of Sir William Phipps, 7, (in series of Sparks' Library of Am. Biog.); in American Cyclopædia, XIII, 448; in Appleton's Cyclopædia of Am. Biog., IV, 765; in Drake's Dict. of Am. Biog., 715, and in Allen's Am. Biog. Dict., 660. The statement is doubted by Savage (Gen. Dict., III, 419), who was always suspicious of Mather.

29. SAMUEL[3] WIGHT (Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born November 11, 1665, was a weaver by trade, and is known in Medfield records as Sergeant. He built opposite his father, near the present residence of Mr. William C. Allen, North St., Medfield, His proportion of the Black Swamp, Medway, upon its division in 1702, was 4 rods, 12 feet. He was selectman of Medfield in 1707 and 1728. (Tilden's Medfield, 513). He married May 10 (or 12, record obscure) 1687, Mary Pratt of Medfield, born January 24, 1663. She died September 5, 1743, Samuel died August 20, 1745,—both in Medfield. His will, made April 17, 1743, giving his homestead to his two daughters, was probated September 10, 1745, his daughter Mary being executrix.

CHILDREN.

68.—1. MARY, born in Medfield, May 19, 1689.
69.—2. HANNAH, born in Medfield, December 6, 1691.

Note 1. Reproduction of the signature to his will:



Note 2. The Pratts: John Pratt of Dorchester, made his will 3:1:1646; and died before 27:11:1647. See his will Register VII, 36. His son, John Pratt, moved to Medfield in 1655, and married, in 1661, Rebecca Colburn of Dedham, sister of the wife of Joseph[3] Wight (9). John died in 1707. His second child Mary, married Samuel Wight, as above. His third child John (1665—1711) married in 1691, Sarah Batchelder, and had a son, also John, a joiner by trade, and deacon of the Medfield church. This last John (1692—May 22, 1753) married first Mehetabel Mason, who died in 1745, and second Hannah[4] (Wight) Ellis (69). Of the first marriage was a daughter Sarah, who married Seth[4] Wight (97).

30. HANNAH[3] WIGHT (Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born February 4, 1667, married a Thompson, as her father's will discloses. Nothing further known.

33. BENJAMIN[3] WIGHT (Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born January 30, 1674, was a resident of Providence, R. I., on October 26, 1715, at which date he purchased from James Clarke of Newport, R. I., a farm in what afterwards became Scituate, R. I. Here Benjamin passed his life. On January 8, 1719, he bought for £30 from Thomas King a half share of land, apparently in Providence. He owned other lands also, some of which he deeded to his son Beniamin, April 17, 1727. A part or all of his homestead he deeded to his sons Silvanus and Samuel, in 1733. He and his brother-in-law, Peter Barnes, sold to Thomas Angell, for £250, 198 acres in Providence. His date of marriage to Sarah Barnes and the birth dates of his children are not found. The descendants of this family are often disguised as Whites and have cost me infinite trouble to find. Benjamin's will was made February 9, 1743, and he died in Scituate, July 28, 1755. His will was probated August 25, 1752, the estate inventorying £246. The widow was then living. The children are mentioned in the order of the will:

CHILDREN.

70.—1. BENJAMIN, born
71.—2. JABEZ, born
72.—3. SILVANUS, born
73.—4. JEMIMA, born , was living unmarried in 1719.
74.—5. ANNE, born
75.—6. SARAH, born
76.—7, SAMUEL, born

Note 1. Scituate was set off from Providence in 1730. (Beaman's Scituate, 10).

Note 2. Rev. Thomas Barnes was minister of the Second Baptist Church, Swanzey, Mass., from 1698 until his death, June 8, 1706. His will, proved July 3, 1706, gives "to daughter Sarah, wife to Benjamin Wight, at Providenee, 10 s, they having had part." Sarah was born in Swanzey, August 27, 1672. See Austin's Gen. Dict. of R. I., at word Barnes.

34. ABIGAIL[3] WIGHT (Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born November 8, 1676, married a Randall, as is shown by her father's will. She probably was the as yet unknown wife of Stephen Randall, of Westerly, R. I., and Stonington, Conn., who was born at Westerly about 1668. Stephen's first child Abigail was born December 20, 1698; and his second child Samuel was born May 19, 1701. (Randall's Randall genealogy, 16). This family does not seem to have been traced later than Stephen's grandchildren.

35. JOSEPH[3] WIGHT (Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), born September 7, 1679, inherited his father's homestead and buildings on North St., Medfield. His portion of the Black Swamp, Medway, upon its division in 1702, was 3 rods, 3 feet. (Jameson's Medway, 40). The surname of his wife Mercy has thus far eluded most diligent search. She died January 31, 1724, in Medfield, where her children were born. Joseph was married in Boston, February 15, 1725, by Samuel Checkley, Esq., to Mrs. Martha Thayer of Bellingham, Mass. To this town he removed in 1729, selling his Medfield estate. His name appears, November 23, 1737, in the first list of members of Bellingham Baptist church, of which he was one of the deacons. He died October 25, 1758, his widow died October 14, 1759—both in Bellingham. The administration upon Mrs. Wight's estate, granted March 15, 1760, discloses that she had a daughter who was married to Jonathan Thompson.

36. JONATHAN[3] WIGHT (Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born September 11, 1682, married December 14, 1704, Margaret Fairbanks of Medfield, born January 5, 1685. They settled in the northwest part of Medfield on the road to Death's Bridge. The cellar of their house is still visible near the railroad crossing. (Tilden's Medfield, 513). Jonathan was selectman of Medfield in 1740. His will was made May 1, 1770, he died February 19, 1779, and his will was approved April 9, 1779. He appointed his son Benjamin, and son-in-law Eleazar Allen, his executors. His estate inventoried £823. His children were born in Medfield. His widow died in Dover, Mass., October 31, 1787, in her 103d year. This couple had lived in the married state almost 75 years.

CHILDREN.

85.—1. JONATHAN, born October 11, 1705.

Note. The Dedham Fairbanks family: The early progenitors came probably from Sowerby, Yorkshire, England (Register VII, 303). John and Jonathan Fairbanks were brothers.

1. JOHN FAIRBANKS, brought from England, it is said, only a daughter, Mary, who April 2, 1644, married Michael Metcalf. Nothing more is heard of this John. (Savage's Gen. Dict. II, 136; Hill's Dedham Records I, 126). The house built by him in Dedham with materials brought from England, which house still remains, is pictured in Appleton's Cyclopaedia of Am. Biog., II., 400. See also an article by B. J. Lossing in Potter's American Monthly, VII, 241. Michael and Mary had a daughter Mary Metcalf, born August 15, 1646, who, December 10, 1668, married Capt John Ware, of Dedham. (153, Note 1.) This last had a son John Ware, father of Rebecca Ware. Rebecca married William Poffer, whose son William Poffer had a daughter Molly Puffer, wife of Daniel[5] Wight (234).
2. JONATHAN FAIRBANKS, with his wife Grace, was of Dedham, where he died December 5, 1668. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 11). See his will Register XIX, 32. Their oldest son John married 16:1:1641, Sarah Fiske, who died November 26, 1683. John died November 13, 1684. John's son Benjamin, born February 17, 1661, had by wife Mary, a son Benjamin, born July 6, 1695, who married in Dorchester February 8 1721-2, Abigail Ellis, of Dedham. This last Benjamin had a son Captain David Fairbanks, who married Anna[6] Wight (239). The second son of Jonathan and Grace, George Fairbanks by name, moved about 1657 to Medfield. He married 26:8:1646, Mary Adams of Dedham, and he died January 10, 1682. His oldest son also a George was born May 26, 1650, and was one of the founders of Medway. By his wife Susanna he was father of Margaret Fairbanks, above. A brother of Margaret, George Fairbanks, born October 2, 1694, married Sarah Harding, and had a son Jonas, of Medway, who married 1745, Experience Leland, of Sherborn. Their oldest child Miriam Fairbanks, married Daniel[5] Wight (234). Jonas, the third son of Jonathan and Grace Fairbanks, was prosecuted in 1652 for wearing great boots, he not being worth £200. (Register VI, 30).

37. LYDIA WIGHT[3] (Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born March 14, 1669, married November 24, 1686, Nathaniel Partridge (39, Note). He was a weaver and seems to have lived, in 1692, not far from where the North School house, Medfield, now stands. He was selectman 1708, 1713; town treasurer 1709, 1710, and kept school in 1713 and 1722. He willed his estate to his son Edward (Tilden's Medfield, 449). He died March 25, 1741, his widow died October 30, 1741—both in Medfield.

Note. The Partridges: The ancestry of the brothers William and John Partridge of Medfield, is not ascertained.

1. WILLIAM PARTRIDGE had a house lot on North St., Medfield. He married November 19, 1656, Sarah Colburn, born in Dedham, April 15, 1640, sister of the wife of Joseph[3] Wight, (9). Their son Nathaniel, born November 18, 1660, married Lydia[3] Wight (37); their daughter Sarah, born January 21, 1674, married Ephraim[3] Wight, above; and their son William (1669—1750) married Hannah Fisher. William and Hannah had a son Seth Partridge (1706—1768) who married Sarah[4] Ellis (22).
2. JOHN PARTRIDGE was in Medfield as early as 1653. He married December 18, 1655, Magdalen Bullard. Their oldest child John (September 21, 1656—December 9, 1743) married, 1678, Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas and Margaret (Holbrook) Rockwood (18, Note 1). John and Elizabeth had a son Benoni Partridge (1687—December 26, 1769), who married Mehetabel, daughter of Samuel, son of Ralph Wheelock (17, Note). Benoni lived in West Medway, and had among others Timothy Partridge, who married Abigail[5] Barber (21) and Moses Partridge (August 28, 1733—October 6, 1804) Moses, who lived in Medway, married September 9, 1755, Rachel Thayer, and was the father of Simeon Partridge (February 28, 1760—January 9, 1832). Upon the death of Elizabeth (Rockwood) Partridge, John married Elizabeth Adams, and had a son James Partridge (October, 1700—March 9, 1769), of Medway, husband of Keziah[4] Bullard (43).

Authorities: Register XIII, 217; Tilden's Medfield, 449; Jameson's Medway, 506; Morse's Sherborn and Hollis-ton, 187.

The elder Joseph was brother of the Mary Allen who married Joseph Clark (16). For a view of the early Allen homestead see Tilden's Medfield, 296. Joseph and Miriam settled on North St., Medfield, near the Dover line. Miriam died in Sturbridge April 15, 1746; her husband died in Medfield, May 25, 1727.

DESCENDANTS.

1. Joseph[4] Allen, born August 17, 1702, succeeded to his father's estate, but sold it in 1738, and removed to Sturbridge. He married Abigail Gold, who died in 1727, and Sarah Parker. Abigail[5], the eldest of his five children, married in Sturbridge, November 1, 1743, John Stacy, Jr. (Southbridge Journal, July 3, 1879). They had a daughter Sarah[6], born May 26, 1747, in Sturbridge, who married there, January 25, 1770, Peter Belknap. Peter and Miriam had a daughter Miriam[7], who married Alpheus[6] Wight (391).
2. Miriam[4] Allen, born May 27, 1704, married, 1732, Daniel Thurston, of Marlboro and Sturbridge.
3. Moses[4] Allen, born September 20, 1708, was one of the first town officers of Sturbridge. (Davis' Sturbridge and Southbridge, 12.)
4. Lydia[4] Allen, born September 25, 1714, history in doubt.
5. Aaron[4] Allen (February 13, 1716—May 3, 1794), had wife Hannah and lived in Dedham. In 1740 he was in Sturbridge. On January 4, 1779, he married Deborah[5] (Smith) Plimpton, (37). His son, Ithamar[5] Allen, born October 9, 1751, married September 30, 1773, Dolly Pyncheon.

41. NATHANIEL[3] WIGHT (Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born September 12, 1678, married March 31, 1704, Sarah, born March 7, 1687, daughter of John and Mary (Herring) Ellis, of Medfield. She died childless October 30, 1705. Nathaniel married in Medfield December 30, 1706, Mehetabel Hinsdale (86, Note 1), born 1681, granddaughter of Robert Hinsdale, killed at Bloody Brook in 1675. Nathaniel was one of the founders of the town of Medway in 1713, and was a selectman in 1715, and 1717. He resided in the southern part of the Old Grant, on the Old Mendon road, not far from the Charles River. In 1721 he purchased a large tract of land in what is now Thompson, a portion of the first land laid out in Northeastern Connecticut in 1684. He was the first purchaser of land in the neighborhood of Killingly, Conn. He sold one or two small parcels but must have retained the larger portion many years. This land was then debatable ground but was claimed as a part of Killingly. Nathaniel is believed to have removed to this land about the time of his purchase. In 1728 when Thompson parish of Killingly was erected, Nathaniel was one of the 16 residents whose standing allowed them to be voted as pew owners of the meeting house. (Larned's Windham County, I, 317.) He does not appear to have been prominent in the affairs of the parish, and perhaps was at this time, and before, a Baptist, as no baptism of Wights appears on the church records.

In 1735 and again in 1743 Nathaniel and wife deeded Killingly land to their son Levi, and in 1743 Nathaniel and wife and their sons Eliphalet, Levi and John, quit claimed by deed (in which they were all said to be of Killingly, Conn.) to Ephraim Wheelock, of Medfield, all interest in certain Medfield lands. Between 1743 and 1768, Nathaniel and his wife both died. In 1768 an agreement among the Wight heirs about a division of their father's farm appears upon Killingly records. Levi having previously received his share of the estate takes no part, and the contracting parties are simply Eliphalet, Sarah and Deborah. Mehetabel, the daughter, was perhaps dead in 1768, Israel probably died young, John's absence from the agreement is unexplained. Eliphalet renounced all right to the north half of the farm and the dwelling house. Owing to meagre and ill preserved records and other causes, my search for complete data of this family has been difficult and doubtful.

Nathaniel's four eldest children were born in Medfield, the remainder in Medway. John's date of birth, does not, however, appear in either town's records.

42. DANIEL[3] WIGHT (Ephraim[2]. Thomas[1]), born November 19, 1680, married April 18, 1721, Lydia Eastee. Lydia's ancestry is as yet unascertained. There are evidences of a family of Estes and Estey in Stoughton and Dedham in the last century, but I cannot trace Lydia Eastee to them. Daniel inherited the original Wight homestead on Green St., which descended from his grandfather Thomas to his father Ephraim. Daniel died in Medfield, September 19, 1744. The inventory of his estate accepted June 11, 1745, aggregated £237.2. A pair of silver sleeve buttons, belonging to him, has been handed down through five generations, and is now owned by his descendant Daniel Porter[8] Wight (2301), of Chicago, Ill. Lydia Wight died in Medfield, January 16, 1748. The children were born there. Daniel and Lydia were married in Medfield.

CHAPTER IV.

FOURTH GENERATION.

46. Joseph[4] Wight (Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born December 10, 1681, resided in Dedham. He married there April 6, 1709, Sarah, born Avery, widow of Thomas Metcalf, of Dedham. Close upon the death of his father, Joseph was chosen deacon of the church and continued in this office 29 years, until his own death. Thus these two Josephs were deacons of the first church in Dedham almost a round sixty years. The records of South Parish Church, Dedham, contain a resolution passed February 18, 1742–3, "That the thanks of this Chh be given to Deacon Weight for the Lot of Land He had given the Church." (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 140.) For fourteen years, first in 1741, Deacon Joseph was selectman of Dedham. (Mann's Annals, 80.) His wife died in Dedham, June 28, 1748 (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 78). Deacon Joseph married April 24, 1750, Mary, born Smith, widow of Henry Plimpton, of Medfield, and of Lieut. Jabez Pond, of Dedham. She was received into the Dedham church from Medfield April 18, 1742. She died June 21, 1774 (Chase's Plimpton Family, 75). Deacon Joseph died in Dedham July 14, 1756.

CHILDREN.

112.—1. Joseph, born in Dedham, January 7, 1710.
113.—2. Henry (Henery, in record), born in Dedham, April 6, 1713, nothing known.

Note 1. Sarah Avery was born October 9, 1675, in Dedham; her parents were William Avery and Mary, daughter of Job Lane of Malden. William was son of William and Margaret Avery of Dedham. The elder William was physician or apothecary in Dedham, and in 1669 was representative for Springfield, non-resident representation being then permissible. He died in Boston aged 65, March 18, 1687; his wife Margaret died September 28, 1678. (Savage's Gen. Dict. I, 83). Sarah Avery married Thomas Metcalf, November 24, 1696. Thomas died September 22, 1704. (Hill's Dedham Records I, 27, 28).

Note 2. Mary Smith: Henry Smith came from England in 1637, with his wife Elizabeth and two sons. His fourth son Samuel, born in Dedham, October 13, 1641, married, in 1677, Sarah (Clark) Bowers—both Samuel and Sarah having been relicts of consorts killed by the Indians in 1676. Their child Mary was born in Medfield, November 22, 1688. The woof of her life is curiously interwoven with the warp of the Wights. Her brother, Henry Smith, married, in 1708, Mary[4] Adams (20), daughter of Mary[3] Ellis, daughter of Mary[2] Wight (5); and in 1730, Ruth[4] Barber (21), daughter of Abielle[3] Ellis, daughter of Mary[2] Wight (5). Mary Smith's brother, Nathaniel, married, in 1705, Mary[4] Clark, daughter of Mary[3] Wight (16); and in 1717 Lydia[4] Partridge (37), daughter of Lydia[3] Wight. Mary Smith herself, in 1706, married Henry Plimpton (86, Note), and became the mother of Sarah Plimpton, who married Jonathan[4] Wight (85), of Mary Plimpton who married John[4] Wight (86), and of Henry Plimpton who married Anne Pond, sister of Mary Pond, wife of Rev. John[4] Wight (53). Henry's son, David Plimpton, married Sarah[5] Wight (186). Mary Smith's husband Henry Plimpton, having died in 1731, the widow on November 22, 1732 (the day that her daughter Sarah married Jonathan[4] Wight (85) as above stated) married Lieut. Jabez Pond, whose daughter Mary, of a former marriage, was the wife of Rev. John[4] Wight (53), and whose daughter Anne, of a former marriage, was the wife of Henry Plimpton, Mary Smith's son. As if these indirect relations with the Wights stimulated her to a nearer alliance, Mary Smith, who by the death of Lieut. Jabez, November 6, 1749, became Widow Pond, was wedded in her declining years to the declining years of Deacon Joseph[4] Wight (46).

Note 3. A note made by Rev. Jason Haven to his commemoration sermon in 1796, on the celebration of the 40th anniversary of his pastorate (Dedham Pulpit, 485), mentioned the dwelling of "Joseph Wight and his son" as having been one of seven consumed by fire during his pastorate. As his pastorate began February 5, 1756, and Joseph Wight died July 14, 1756, the fire probably occurred between these dates. I know nothing further about it. The wording "and his son," would seem to imply that the Henry (113), concerning whom I have printed "nothing known," was not then living. He doubtless died young.

47. Deborah[4] Wight (Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born August 25, 1684, married in Dedham, July 26, 1716, Nathaniel Chickering, born March 28, 1677. He had previously, August 14, 1700, married Mary Thorpe, who had died September 1, 1715. He was selectman five years, first in 1731. (Mann's Annals, 80.) The record of his death, January 16, 1746–7 calls him Deacn Nathenil Chickring. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 72.) Deborah died January 16, 1749, in Dedham, where her children were born.

DESCENDANTS.

1. Joseph[5] Chickering (May 5, 1717—November 28, 1754), of Dedham, married February 7, 1743, Rebecca Newell. Their youngest child was:
   5. Jabez[6] Chickering (November 4, 1753—March 12, 1812), Harvard 1774, was ordained July 3, 1776, over the South Parish, Dedham, where he was pastor until his death. The sermon at his funeral, March 16, 1812, was preached by Rev. Thomas Thacher, of the Third Parish, Dedham, and was published. Jabez married April 22, 1777, Hannah (December 10, 1755—April 17, 1839), daughter of his clerical predecessor Rev. Thomas Balch, who had married Mrs. Mary Sumner of Roxbury. Six children including:
      2. Joseph[7] Chickering (April 30, 1780—January 27, 1844), Harvard 1799, was settled in the Woburn church, March 28, 1804, resigned April 11, 1821; was installed at Phillipston, Mass., July 10, 1822, and resigned from ill health July 15, 1835. He was a zealous, faithful minister, and the earnest supporter of charitable societies, to some of which he made bequests. He published some pamphlets on education. (Christian Mirror, February 29, 1844.) He married Elizabeth White, of Concord, Mass., and Sarah A. Holt, of Andover.
         1. John W.[8] Chickering (1808—December 9, 1888), Middlebury Coll. 1826, D. D., installed at Bolton, Mass., April 14, 1830, resigned March 16, 1835; was installed pastor of High St., Congregational Church, Portland, Me., April 2, 1835, and was released from his charge March 29, 1865. He died while visiting in Brooklyn, N. Y.
      3. Jabez[7] Chickering (August 28, 1782—October 20, 1826), Harvard 1804, lawyer and cashier of Dedham Bank. He married July 3, 1805, Dorothy Dehorah Forster Alleyne, daughter of Abel Alleyne, of Dedham. He removed in 1823 to Monroe, Mich.

2. Daniel[5] Chickering, born December 30, 1718, married 1745, Kezia[5] Ellis (22), of Medfield. Eight children; the second, Kezia[6], born April 24, 1748, married October 14, 1772, Jacob Morse of Natick.
3. Deborah[5] Chickering, born April 9, 1722.
4. Lydia[5] Chickering, born September 12, 1723.

Note. Nathaniel Chickering, husband of Deborah, was son of Nathaniel of Dedham, who December 3, 1674, married Lydia, daughter of Captain Daniel Fisher (Farmer's Gen. Reg...106). Captain Daniel, who was brother of Lydia Fisher (7, Note 2), married November 17, 1641, Abigail Marrett, of Cambridge. Lydia, daughter of Captain Daniel, was born in Dedham, July 14, 1652, and died in Needham, July 17, 1737. In 1671, three years before her marriage, she went to Hadley and attended for about a year upon the regicides Goffe and Whalley (Register VI, 101; XVI, 316; Dedham 250th Anniversary, 66, 209). For the romantic career of these regicides, see Howell's State Trials V, 1359; Hutchinson's Massachusetts I, 197; Stiles' History of the judges, 109; Holmes' Annals of America I, 315, 372; Holland's *History of W. 48. NATHANIEL[4] WIGHT (Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 13, 1688, removed from Dedham to Wrentham, where, June 29, 1720, he married Ruth, born July 9, 1691, daughter of Daniel and Abigail Hawes. (Register, IV, 83.) Ruth died October 6, 1721, and Nathaniel married January 9, 1722-3, in Wrentham, Hannah Pond (752, Note), born March 16, 1693-4. (Register, IV, 86.) She died October 3, 1754; Nathaniel died April 3, 1755, both in Wrentham. There also were born their 119.—6. DEBORAH, born February 3. 1735, nothing known.

49. EBENEZER[3] WIGHT (Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 22, 1696, married September 3, 1740, Subiah Hall. She was of Stoughton and united with the Dedham church January 15, 1764. Their children were born in Dedham. Ebenezer Wight passed his life in the cultivation of his paternal acres. As he was of retired habits, his temperament well fitted him for the secluded labours which husbandry requires. Though he was fond of agriculture as the means of sustaining himself and family and was happily occupied in the management of his herds and his fields, he was not indifferent to the stirring events in the opening scene of the eventful drama of American Independence and lived to deplore the death of his two youngest sons, both of whom died in defence of liberty and their country among the earliest victims in the War of Independence. He was an honest and industrious man, a worthy and exemplary citizen, a patriot and a christian. His children always spoke of him with reverence and affection, as a parent who had performed his duties to them, and to whom they were greatly indebted for much good counsel and instruction. Religious teaching entered largely into his family discipline. The principles and opinions of the Puritan Fathers, which had been taught him, he taught them, that they might hold fast to what he believed to be "the faith once delivered to the saints." (Wight's Wight Family, 80, 81.)

Subiah Wight "possessed great mildness of disposition, kindness of feeling and gentleness of manner. Her heart overflowed with love to all with whom she was in any way associated. She died when I was young but her goodness engraved her image upon my memory." (Wight's Wight Family, 81.) Ebenezer's will, appointing his son Ebenezer and son-in-law, John Healy, executors, was made December 11, 1772; he died in Dedham, December 20, 1776, and his will was approved January 31, 1777. Subiah died aged 85, August 18, 1802. For Ebenezer's relation to the old home of Thomas Wight, see page 5.

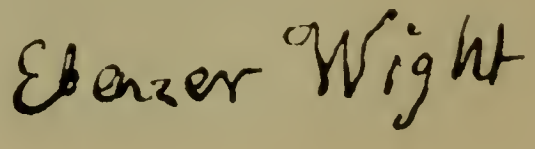
128.—9. NATHANIEL, born January 22, 1756, baptized February 1, 1756.

Note 1. Signature to Ebenezer's will:



Note 2. According to the church records, Mary Wight (122) was baptized January 27, 1745, and Deborah, May 24, 1752. (Hill's Dedham Records II, 54, 59). These inconsistencies are inexplicable. I am assured by Mr. Don G. Hill, of Dedham, whose courtesies I have several times received, that the baptism record, having been made by the minister at the time of the ceremony, is more likely to be correct.

50. JABEZ[4] WIGHT (Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born July 12, 1701, was dedicated by his parents in his early years to the gospel ministry. He entered Harvard University 1717 and graduated 1721 (correct Allen's Amer. Gen. Dict., 856), in the same class with his cousin John (53). These were the first Wights graduates of that institution. While this cousin John was a schoolmaster in Dedham, Jabez occupied a similar position in Medfield, as appears by the following paper found among the State archives, dated March 26, 1723:

"These may certifie the honored his majesties justices in their session of the peace for the County of Suffolk at Boston, March the 27th, 1723. That the subscribers, being selectmen of Medfield, have procured a grammar schoolmaster within our town, being one Mr. Jabez Wight, who is approved by the ministers as the law directs, who is now for some time engaged in that work in Medfield, but not to trouble your honours with anything now at this time as to the number of families in our town. We remain your honours humble servants with submission to your wise determination." (Tilden's Medfield, 126.)

"Mr. Jabez Wight" united with Dedham church, April 11, 1725. The records of this church contain this notice of Rev. Jabez' settlement in the ministry:

"Upon the desire of the Church of Christ in East Norwich in conjunction with Mr. Wight, the church voted to give Mr. Wight letters of recommendation (and desired the pastor to write them) in order to his embodying with the church and becoming their pastor."

The letter mentioned, preserved by Emilia[7] Wight (588), is as follows:

To the Chh of Ct in East Norwich, ye Chh of Ct in Dedham sendeth Greeting.

Dedham October 17th 1726.

Over this church, called also the Fifth Church of Norwich, and the church at Long Society, Rev. Jabez was ordained October 27, 1726. The ordination sermon, which was published, was preached by Rev. Benjamin Lord, D. D., of Norwich, Conn. (Sprague's Annals, I, 299.) This church was constituted under Rev. Jabez, and he was its first and only pastor. After his death no regular public worship was held and the church was allowed to decay and fall to pieces. (Caulkins' Norwich, 447.)

Jabez married March 15, 1768, Ruth Swan, of Stonington, Conn. She died March 15, 1768. Upon the unimpeachable authority of ancient letters I note the later marriage of Rev. Jabez to Miss Holdridge, of Groton, Conn. Nothing further is known of this marriage. Rev. Jabez died at Norwich, September 11, 1782, with which date his tombstone does not agree. The opinion of one of his parishioners has been preserved:

"He was a faithful servant in the Vineyard of his Lord, as long as his health and strength permitted. He was an Orthodox Divine, a good Preacher, and believed the doctrines he taught; a man much in prayer. The doctrines of free, rich and sovereign grace, and the divine atonement and satisfaction were his darling theme and delightful tople. He taught and believed that there is no name given among men save Jesus of Nazareth, whereby we must be saved. He was much endued with the true Christian graces and virtues, nor did he lack charity."

An obituary of him records: "Fond of retirement from the bustling world he was apparently never so happy as when traveling the road of an unnoticed humility."

The following is the inscription upon his tomb in the graveyard at Long Society:

Sacred to the memory of Rev. Jabez Wight late Pastor of the Church of Christ in the 2nd Society in Preston who in the 56th year of his ministry and 82nd of his age on the 15th day of Sept. 1782
entered into the joy of his Lord.
Zion may in his fall bemoan
A Beauty and a pillar gone.
—(Caulkins' Norwich, 448; Hurd's New London County, 602.)

The Norwich Records give these births of his

Note 1. A long and narrow strip of land adjoining the Shetucket River on the east, called Long Society, also East Norwich, was set off in 1786 from Norwich to Preston, Conn. (Caulkins' Norwich, 447).

Note 2. Thomas Wood and Susanna Eastman married and lived in Haverhill, Mass. The husband and a daughter Susanna were slain by the Indians March 16, 1696. The widow married John Swan, August 1, 1699, and their daughter Ruth, born in Haverhill, December 31, 1703, was wife of Rev. Jabez Wight. Her mother Susanna Swan died aged above 100 years, December 20, 1772, and is buried in North Stonington, Conn. John Swan, born August 1, 1668, was son of Robert Swan, born in England, who married Elizabeth Aeie of Rowley, Mass., and settled in Haverhill in 1650. She died in 1689, and her husband died February 11, 1697-8. He was son of Richard Swan, who joined the church in Boston, January 6, 1639, moved with his wife Ann to Rowley in 1640, and died in 1678. (Register XXXIII, 403).

Note 3. Rev. Mr. Wight assisted at the formation of the 2nd Congregational church, Norwich, in 1760, and at the installation of its first two ministers. (Bond's Historical Discourse, 7, 8, 14; Caulkins' Norwich, 461.)

51. DAVID WIGHT (Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born December 19, 1686, must have been a man of resources, as his estate at his decease aggregated £2579. 7. 2., an unusual sum in his day. He married in Dedham, January 17, 1716-7, Sarah Day, born there April 1, 1689. The family lived in Dedham, where the children were born. David died in Dedham January 28, 1742-3. His wife's date of death is not found.

CHILDREN.

136.—1. DAVID, born March 28, 1718.
137.—2. ANNA, born July 27, 1720.
138.—3. JOHN, born May 11, 1723, died in Dedham October 4, 1734.
139.—4. SARAH, born March 27, 1730.

Note. Sarah Day was daughter of Ralph and Sarah (Fuller) Day. Her parents were married in Dedham, December 6, 1682. Ralph died October 21, 1694 and the widow became the wife of John Carpenter and of Samuel Ware. Her will dated July 12, 1735, discloses that her daughter Sarah Wight was then living. Sarah Fuller was daughter of Thomas and Hannah Fuller, and was born in Dedham May 7, 1659. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 17, 24, 7; Register XLI, 28, 396).

52. DANIEL[4] WIGHT (Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 25, 1690, moved from Dedham to Needham, where he was married November 14, 1751, "by Mr. Jonathan Townsend, our gosepel minister," to Susanna Kinch. Her name is excusably miscopied Kepeh in Hill's Dedham Records, I, 118. Daniel Wight's will was made February 20, 1769; he died in Needham, February 28, 1773, and his will was approved March 19, 1773.

CHILDREN.

140.—1. BENJAMIN, born
141.—2. ANN, born in Needham February 26, 1754.
142.—3. DANIEL, born in Needham March 22, 1756.

Note. Susanna Kineh was the widow of Thomas Kineh, whom she married in 1734, and who died in 1750. She was the daughter of Henry and Deborah Alden of Needham, and the presumed great grand daughter of John Alden of Plymouth.

53. JOHN[4] WIGHT (Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born April 22, 1699, graduated at Harvard University in 1721, a classmate of his cousin Jabez[4], (50). The same year his name occurs as Sir Wight in the Dedham Records, a title supposed to arise out of his occupation as a schoolmaster there. (Worthington's Dedham, 47; Wight's Wight Family, 54.) (For a different explanation of the prefix Sir, see Hall's College Words and Customs, 424; Sibley's Harvard Graduates, I, 17; Register, XLII, 91.) After several years interruption Sir John taught again in Dedham in 1740. He united with the Dedham church June 5, 1726. The date of his ordination is not shown. He preached in several places in New England, only two of which are certainly known to me, Bristol, R. I. (then in Massachusetts), and New Marblehead in the "Eastern country," now Windham, Maine. In Bristol he seems to have been settled in 1728, and to have continued there until as late as July, 1740. His intention of marriage, in which he is styled Mr. John Wight, of Bristol, was filed there May 25, 1728. He married in Dedham July 3, 1728, Mary Pond, born there November 22, 1706. (752, Note; 46, Note 2.) Mary Wight died in Bristol, June 19, 1735. Her father's will, dated August 15, 1746, fixes the number of her then living children: "I give and bequeath to my grandchildren, viz.: John Wight, Daniel Wight, Mary Wight and Ann Wight, the children of my eldest daughter, Mary Wight, late deceased," etc. (Harris' Pond Genealogy, 17.) Bristol records fix the dates of birth of three of these children. Rev. John married second (date wanting, intention filed in Bristol October 22, 1737) Mrs. Deliverance Carpenter, of Rehoboth. It is not quite certain what removed our preacher from Bristol to so remote a place as New Marblehead. It has been suggested (Register, XLII, 93) that as some of the settlers of this place came from Rhode Island and the South Shore, they may have known him and influenced his removal. It is possible also that Rev. John may have preached in Old Marblehead before he went to the New. It is certain there was a warm feeling between the First church in Marblehead and the First church in New Marblehead, which was Rev. John's last charge. It is certain also that his children were in Marblehead after he died, and one, at least, married there. Whatever the reason may be he went, preaching there some six months before his settlement. In the Dedham First church records, October 16, 1743, we find: "Upon the Desire of Mr. John Wight the Chh voted his Dismission and Letters Testimonial in order to his Regular Imbodying with those who purpose (God willing) to lay in the foundaton of a Chh in New Marblehead in the Eastern country." (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 90.) Rev. John was installed at New Marblehead, December, 14, 1743. "Much of his pastorate was spent with his people, shut up, together with their families, in the old 'Block House,' or 'Province Fort.' He, as first minister, drew a full right in the township, and his heirs received this afterwards." (Register, XLII, 93.) In the records of the First church, Marblehead (kept in 1885 in the office of Mr. Daniel Appleton, Boston), I discovered the following:

"May 7
"At a Chh meeting
"Voted that the Ch'h make a Present of two Pewter Flagons to the Church of which the "Rev'd Mr. John Wight is Pastor in the Place called New Marblehead.
"John Barnard Pastor."

Rev. John continued his labors in New Marblehead until his death, May 8, 1753. His ordination and death are noticed in the Centennial address delivered in Windham, July 4, 1839, by Thomas L. Smith.

"Rev. John Wight, M. A.," was one of the subscribers to Prince's Chronology (Register, VI, 199). These subscribers are said by Mr. S. G. Drake to compose the principal literati in New England in the early part of the last century.

Rev. John Wight was the first person buried in what is now known as "Anderson's burying ground," Windham. His wife, Deliverance, and one or more children lie beside him. The inscription on his tombstone is a modest one:

In memory of ye
Rev. Mr. John Wight

In the 55 year of his Age.

Joan was daughter of William Clark. The Mary Stone who married Nathaniel Stearns (9, Note 3) was daughter of the earliest Simon Stone. (Register X, 229; Barry's Framingham, 409). "The Stone family of Watertown is highly respectable." (Vinton's Richardson Memorial, 95).

His widow, March 31, 1772, married Abishai Crossman, of Sudbury. The births of her three children are recorded in Sudbury. (Sudbury Manuscript Records.)

61. MARAH[4] WIGHT (Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born October 13, 1696, married February 24, 1719–20, John Whiting (62, Note 2) of Wrentham, born January 16, 1695. He died in Wrentham, February 13, 1755. Marah is called "Mary Whiting, widow," in the deed, in 1764, at 12. She seems then to have had but one child, Jonathan[5] Whiting.

62. JONATHAN[4] WIGHT (Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 6, 1700, resided in Wrentham, where all his children were born. He married there February 13, 1720–1, Jemima Whiting. She died June 24, 1754, the mother of ten children. Jonathan married December 5, 1754, Mrs. Jerusha George. He is called yeoman in the deed at 12. His will was made March 11, 1773, he died March 26, 1773, and his will was approved April 9, 1773. Jerusha's will was made May 22, 1792; its probate February 5, 1793, approximates the date of her death. She mentions in her will the following persons, all descendants of her former marriage: her daughters Hannah Ware, and Jerusha Cox, her grandson George Farrington, her sons Thomas and John George.

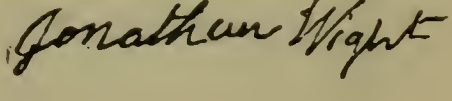
Note 1. Signature to Jonathan's will:



Note 2. The Whitings: As to Nathaniel Whiting, of Dedham, his English antecedents, and probable connection with other Whitings in this country, see Whiting's Rev. Samuel Whiting, 282. Nathaniel married in Dedham, November 4, 1643, Hannah Dwight. Among other children were two sons:

1. TIMOTHY WHITING, born January 5, 1653, by wife Sarah, had a son Nathaniel, born in Dedham, September 23, 1688. He married April 6, 1712, Joanna Ellis, and became the father of John Whiting, born in Dedham, May 17, 1716. This last married in Dedham, April 20, 1738, Abigail White, and had a daughter Mary born March 13, 1752, who married Thomas[6] Wight (244).
2. JOHN WHITING, born July 19, 1665, moved to Wrentham; he married at Milton December 25, 1688, Mary Billings of Dorchester (Register, XXXVI, 20). They had at least John Whiting, who married Marah[4] Wight (61), and Jemima Whiting, who married Jonathan[4] Wight, above.

63. SARAH[4] WIGHT (Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born July 19, 1703, chose Samuel Metcalf as her guardian in 1720, her father being then dead. She married in Wrentham, May 8, 1721, Thomas Dunham (Register, IV, 86). She, and any children she may have had, were doubtless dead in 1764, when the deed mentioned at 12 was made.

64. THOMAS[4] WIGHT (Eleazar[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born February 26, 1697, lived in the paternal homestead on Green street, Medfield. He married in Medfield May 23, 1745, Mary Richardson (399, Note), born in Medfield, August 15, 1708. Thomas died in Medfield January 26, 1757, and on March 11, 1757, his widow was appointed administratrix of his estate. His property included the homestead, the Warren homestead mentioned at 17, and other lands. Mary died in 1774.

CHILD.

162.—1. LEMUEL, born in Medfield, September 16, 1746.

Note. Thomas and his brother Eleazar were bondsmen of their kinsman Peter[4] Wight (108) in matters relating to the estate of Peter's father, in 1747. Thomas' signature as such bondsman was:

65. ELEAZAR[4] WIGHT (Eleazar[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born December 18, 1701, married Mary, daughter of Nathaniel (1682—May 23, 1756) and Mary (Lovet) Morse, of Mendon, and grand-daughter of Nathaniel and Mary Morse of Sherborn (7, Note 2; Morse's Sherborn and Holliston, 179). Eleazar removed to Mendon, nevertheless he resided much of his life in Medway, as the births of his children and his own death are recorded in Medway. He is also included among the sixty-five citizens of Medway, who, June 17, 1745, in the French and Indian war were "impressed by Capt. Whiting and done service for his Majesty" (Jameson's Medway, 212). He died October 2, 1754.

CHILDREN.

163.—1. JAMES, born March 25, 1732.
164.—2. RELIEF, born January 5, 1734.
165.—3. ELEAZAR, born December 1, 1735.
166.—4. THOMAS, born April 12, 1738, died in Medway June 14, 1749.
166*a*. 5. MARY, born November 25, 1743, died in Medway May 14, 1749.

Note. His signature to the bond mentioned at 64, Note:

67. JOSHUA[4] WIGHT (Joshua[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born October 20, 1708, lived in Windham, Conn. There seems no escaping the plain figures in Windham records which disclose the birth of his children when he was quite old. Perhaps owing to the extreme age and consequent helplessness of his parents, his marriage was deferred until his father's death. However that may be, the records show that Joshua Wight, Jr., married Mary Smith, November 16, 1762. They would seem to have moved to Vermont after the birth in Windham of their five eldest children. That Harvey Wight was their child is conjectured on fair evidence, but must be taken tentatively.

CHILDREN.

167.—1. WILLIAM, born November 3, 1763.
167 a. 2. ELIZABETH, born November 1, 1765, nothing known.
167 b. 3. SUSANNA, born September 25, 1767, nothing known.
168.—4. JOHN, born March 12, 1770.
169.—5. EBENEZER, born October 28, 1772.
170.—6. HARVEY, born probably in Vermont, October 1779.

Note. The aged fatherhood of Joshua Wight is not anomalous. Observe the instance, punctuated with many exclamation points, in Vinton's Vinton Memorial, 425, 426. In this case Josiah Green had a daughter born when he was over 75 years of age. She was 56 years younger than her oldest sister. Josiah Green had no less than 12 great grandchildren who were older than some of his children. Josiah had in all 11 children, of two marriages. He lived in Stoneham, Mass.

68. MARY[4] WIGHT (Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]) born May 19, 1689, never married. She bought out her sister's interest in their father's home in Medfield, and occupied it. She died January 13, 1753. By her will probated February 16, 1753, she gives plates that were her mother's, to her friends Captain Joseph Williams of Roxbury and Jonathan Mason of Sturbridge, and devises her father's place to her "beloved friend, Jonathan Allen," husband of her remote kinswoman Sarah[5] Ellis (22). The place is now owned by Mr. William C. Allen. (Tilden's Medfield, 513, 299).

69. HANNAH[4] WIGHT, (Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born December 6, 1691, relinquished to her sister her interest in their father's estate. She married June 30, 1718, John (1678–June 27, 1745), son of John Ellis of Medfield. Hannah's husband owned a place a short distance south of Pound street, formerly Thomas Thurston's homestead. The cellar of the house is still visible. The lot fronted on the common or training field. Her husband dying without surviving children, Hannah gave the land where the house stood, to Medfield church on certain conditions. It is still called the "church lot" Hannah's only child John[5] Ellis, born June 30, 1721, died July 11, 1721. Hannah Ellis married November 17, 1746, John Pratt (29, Note 2), and died in Medfield September 13, 1760.

70. BENJAMIN[4] WIGHT (Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married Ruth, daughter of Moses Potter, of Scituate, R. I. Benjamin was a carpenter in Scituate; he built the first bridge over the north branch of the Pawtuxet, two miles above Hope, ever since known, by common mispronunciation, as White's Bridge. He lived and died about a quarter of a mile southwest of the bridge, in a house standing in 1810. He deeded land to his sons, John and William, in 1746, to his son Peter in 1757, to John again in 1761, and to his son Benjamin in 1772. "Benjamin Wight, yeoman," died in Scituate, June 2, 1772. His oldest son John was appointed administrator, John Fiske and Benjamin Wight being his bondsmen. The inventory of his estate was £30.19.5. On January 23, 1779, "William Wight, Benjamin Wight, Peter Wight and Peter Colvin received of John Wight, administrator of estate of Benjamin Wight, deceased, their honored father, their share in said estate." The children of Benjamin and Ruth were doubtless born in Scituate. All birth dates are lacking, but William was more than 80 years old in July, 1807.

CHILDREN.

171.—1. JOHN, born
172.—2. WILLIAM, born
173.—3. PETER, born
174.—4. BENJAMIN, born
175.—5. RUTH, born

Note. Moses Potter had another daughter Mary, who married Benjamin Bennett, of Scituate. Benjamin and Mary had, among 12 children, a daughter Albetheny, who married William[5] Wight (172).

71. JABEZ[4] WIGHT (Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born . His will, dated December 18, 1784, mentions neither wife nor child, but refers to his friend Lurana Wilbur and to his sister Anne Berry. He names his "cousins," i. e., nephews, John[5], Benjamin[5] and Peter[5] (see 70), as among those to whom he gives all his wearing apparel. He died February 16, 1790, and his will was probated March 22, 1790; the inventory of his estate footed up £9.17.0. He lived in Scituate, R. I.

72. SILVANUS[4] WIGHT (Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born . His will, dated October 8, 1749, mentions his wife Abigail but no children. He died February 15, 1755, and his will was probated March 31, 1755. His brother Benjamin was one of the appraisers of his estate which inventoried £764. He lived in Scituate, R. I. His widow and Jeremiah Angell, both of Scituate, intermarried July 16, 1769.

74. ANNE[4] WIGHT (Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married December 24, 1738, Joseph Berry, probably in Scituate.

75. SARAH[4] WIGHT (Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married May 20, 1724, Thomas Barnes—the event being recorded in Providence. Her father Benjamin[3], in his will in 1749, mentions his granddaughter Sarah[5] Barnes, but not her mother, from which I infer the death of the mother prior to 1749. This Thomas Barnes, born December 8, 1699, was own consin of his wife, being the son of Thomas and Sarah (Stone) Barnes—the senior Thomas being brother of Sarah Barnes, who married Benjamin[3] Wight (33). (Austin's Gen. Dict. of R. I., at word Barnes.)

76. SAMUEL[4] WIGHT (Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , is mentioned in his father's will in 1749 and received a conveyance of land from him in 1733, from which I infer that Samuel was of age at the latter date. He seems to have deeded land in Scituate by mark in 1761, with no wife's signature. Samuel Wight died September 30, 1763. Benjamin, his eldest brother, was appointed administrator. Inventory £502.17.10.

77. MERCY[4] WIGHT (Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born November 6, 1702, married November 15, 1745, Edward, born 1688, son of John and Sarah (Adams) Turner, of Medfield. Edward was a very prominent man in Medfield affairs for many years—constable (or collector) in 1733, on the board of selectmen for 11 years and moderator at the town meetings. Upon his death, childless, December 21, 1774, his estate was given to his nephew Seth[5], son of his brother Ebenezer by Esther[4] Clark (16). Mercy died in Medfield January 4, 1783. (Tilden's Medfield, 500.)

78. JOSEPH[4] WIGHT (Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born January 14, 1704, married October 22, 1729, in Boston (Samuel Checkley, Esq., officiating), Martha Thompson of Bellingham, at which place he lived and his children were born. Joseph was chosen deacon of the Baptist church February 14, 1755, and is known in Bellingham records as Deacon Joseph Wight, Jr. He is last mentioned in church records July 2, 1773, when at a regular meeting it was voted to dismiss him from serving as "principal member to signe certifiticks." Martha died in Bellingham December 5, 1781, aged 76 years; Joseph died there April 25, 1792.

CHILDREN.

176.—1. SAMUEL, born December 25, 1730 (surname spelled Wite).
177.—2. ABIGAIL, born March 3, 1735.
178.—3. PETER, born February 14, 1737, died in Bellingham, August 12, 1749.
179.—4. MERCY, born July 8, 1740, died in Bellingham, December 26, 1741.
180.—5. NATHAN, born January 26, 1743, died in Bellingham, February 5, 1743.
181.—6. JOSEPH, born June 8, 1749, died in Bellingham, August 25, 1749.

82. ELNATHAN[4] WIGHT (Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born December 23, 1715, moved to Bellingham with his father, and on December 30, 1743, he bought 16 acres there from Deacon Joseph Holbrook for £49. "It appears from the town records that he had a part assigned him in the transaction of publick business before his preparations for the ministry commenced. Being convinced of the necessity of education to the minister of the gospel, he thought it his duty to devote himself to study previous to his entering on the work. In contemplating this subject he had many discouragements to meet. He knew that money must be expended with little hope of receiving anything like a remuneration for his expenditures. He knew also that the prospect of being supported by his labors as a preacher were very small. In these trials he sought advice from ministers in the vicinity, but they refused to give him the direction and encouragement he desired and needed, because he did not agree with them on the mode and subjects of baptism. This was particularly afflicting to him, as he had none of his own denomination with whom he could consult. He commenced his studies some time this year (1746) under the Rev. Mr. Graham of Southbury, Connect., where he pursued them for more than three years. The languages and theology seem to have occupied most of the time. Mr. Graham was to him a friend and a father. Towards the close of the year 1749 he wished to obtain a license to preach. This he sought from Presbyterian or Congregational ministers, but they refused to license him. When he found he could not be licensed in this way, he, by the advice of Mr. Graham and others, set out on a journey to New Jersey, to obtain his desire from Baptist ministers, but he found obstructions in the way and finally returned without reaching the place of his destination. Soon after his return he succeeded in obtaining from Pedobaptist ministers what he had before sought in vain. This was probably through the kindness of Mr. Graham, who had for a long time been his friend. After he was licensed he delayed to commence preaching for some time; and when he approached the time that he was to begin, his feelings were much depressed and his fears very great. He preached his first sermon March 4, 1750, and, notwithstanding his previous fears, when he came to preach he found much composure and satisfaction. May 28, 1750, he was requested by the church of this place (Bellingham) to supply them one month as a candidate. At the end of that term they gave him a call to become their pastor. August 27, same year, Mr. Wight accepted the call of this church and proceeded to preach to them. The small number of Baptists in this quarter at that time rendered it difficult to obtain assistance in ordaining Mr. Wight from his own denomination, in consequence of which application was made for the purpose to Presbyterian ministers; but they did not choose to ordain him. As Mr. Wight held to open communion he seems to have preferred being ordained by Congregational ministers, but he found that his catholicism was not reciprocated. By these attempts Mr. Wight's ordination was deferred till 1755. On the 14th day of January of this year a council was convened from two Baptist churches. The council was organized and proceeded to examine the candidate, and finding satisfaction they unanimously agreed to go forward with his ordination. From this time he continued to discharge his duty as a pastor with fidelity and acceptance till his death, which took place November 6, 1761. Thus he was suddenly cut off in the midst of his days in the 46th year of his age. Over his temper, which was naturally quick and irascible, he gained an ascendency which made him a pleasant and instructive companion. He was a studious man. Most, if not all, of his sermons were written out and he generally read them. They were full of good sense and very doctrinal. But, notwithstanding his studiousness, he laboured much with his own hands. His support was always small amounting at the most to about $40 or $50 annually. His views of doctrine were highly Calvinistick, though not Antinomian. On the subject of addressing the calls of the gospel to sinners in general, he agreed with those who hold what has been called general atonement. In regard to the mode and subjects of baptism he was a Baptist. It is necessary, however, to observe that he held to open communion especially in the fore part of his ministry. He tried much to unite the Congregationalists and Baptists, thinking, as he says, that the Baptists were uncharitable in refusing to commune with those who were members of Congregational churches. But his exertions were unavailing. Mr. Wight was a very conscientious man, and of distinguished piety, as is evident from his diary and from the inscription placed over his door, "I know that thou wilt bring me to death and to the house appointed for all living.' In his day Mr. Wight sustained the character of a steadfast, able, enlightened and evangelical preacher." (Fisher's Centennial Discourse.) The sermon at his ordination Rev. Elnathan himself preached and it was published. He was, especially in the early part of his ministry, an open communion Baptist. He was a man of eminently devout feelings, and his preaching was of a strictly evangelical type. He generally wrote his sermons and delivered them with the manuscript before him. (Sprague's Annals VI, 68.) An original sermon of Rev. Elnathan, owned by his descendant Gertrude Abbey[9] Wight, daughter of Charles Leonard[8] Wight (1798), of Chicago, is now lying before me. It is in the customary manner of the early New England discourses and has many subdivisions, in the last of which the preacher says he "shall endeavour some suitable improvement by way of application." The text is Isaiah L, 10. The sermon was preached July 20 1755. Rev. Elnathan married August 13, 1754, Abigail Blood. After his death his widow married August 15, 1764, Nathan Mann, of Wrentham, who the same year was appointed guardian of Elnathan's children. Upon the death of Mr. Mann she returned from Wrentham and resided with her son Eliab in Bellingham, where she died aged 84, February 26, 1802. "She was a woman of more than usual power and excellence."

The same year Jonathan Wight bought from David Ellis the old Partridge estate at the corner of North and Railroad streets, Medfield, and 1746 he bought from Edward[4] Partridge (37) the portion of the Partridge estate adjoining him on the north and the buildings thereupon (Tilden's Medfield, 515). Jonathan was a carpenter by trade, and a thrifty man he must have been, for he brought up a family of twelve children and sent at least three of them to college. He was selectman in 1747 and 1752. In 1746 he purchased a portion of the Edward Partridge homestead lying near him.

In 1762 he bought the saw mill which stood near the present railroad junction. (Tilden's Medfield, 515, 516.) This last married July 11, 1734, Anne Pond (July 6, 1713—February 4, 1750) and had David Plimpton, who married Sarah[5] Wight (186).

Their eldest son Joseph (1677-1740) married Priscilla Partridge and had with others, Simon (February 10, 1706-7—1798) and Joseph (March 8, 1712-3—1773) Plimpton. He was a deacon in the Orthodox church.

100. MARY[4] WIGHT (Ephraim[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]) born November 10, 1717, married September 29, 1742, Ebenezer, son of Ebenezer Bullard. The marriage is given in the Medway records, where the parties are said to be of Medfield. They are later said to be of North Ipswich, Mass. Ebenezer Bullard, Jr., was brother of Susanna Bullard who married William[4] Wight (92).

101. MEHETABEL[4] WIGHT (Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born October 4, 1707, removed with her father from Medway to Killingly, Conn., where as the church records show, she married Barsom Stone, March 22, 1738. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Marston Cabot of Thompson. Mehetabel's future history is obscure. She was probably dead in 1768, see 41. She had at least one child Mehetabel[5] Stone, who, April 29, 1770, married her cousin Jacob[5] Wight (232).

102. ELIPHALET[4] WIGHT (Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born April 16, 1711, removed with his father from Medway to Killingly, Conn. His first wife Lydia was the mother of the children named below. In 1761 Dr. James Gleason, a physician of Killingly, sold Eliphalet twenty acres of land with dwelling house. The records of Thompson parish church contain the marriage of Eliphalet to Abigail Plummer, August 24, 1763. Eliphalet Wight, with his brothers Levi and John, took an active part in the movements in northern Connecticut, which resulted in the formation of Baptist churches. Jeremiah Barstow of Sturbridge, was probably the first to proclaim in Thompson the doctrine of believer's baptism by immersion. Arising in Rev. Mr. Cabot's church one Sunday in 1748, after the sermon, he desired liberty to relate his experience. Mr. Cabot promptly denied the request and the presumptuous intruder was "turned out of the meeting-house." He persisted in exhorting the people before the doors, was arrested and endured a month's imprisonment. This treatment aroused sympathy and called public attention to Barstow's principles. Other Baptist exhorters appeared in Thompson. Meetings were held, principles discussed, and soon a considerable number declared themselves Baptists and probably united with the Baptist church of Leicester, Mass., as they refused to pay rates for Mr. Cabot's support. These Baptists being arrested for holding unlawful meetings retaliated by bringing actions against the civil authority for rioting, and being "strained upon for rates," they claimed the benefit of the Toleration Act, and appealed to the County Court at Windham. Their plea was allowed and exemption granted. The defeated party, the regular society, was obliged "to pay the Baptists the charges they were put to for being strained on for rates," and "for traveling to Windham," and appointed a committee to make the best terms they could with the victors. The rates of several Baptists, including Eliphalet, Levi and John Wight, were then formally abated. Having thus gained a footing the Baptists were organized as a distinct church in Thompson, in 1750, upon the six principles of Christ's doctrine (Hebrews VI, 1, 2), and were known as Six-Principles Baptists. This body after many trials and struggles became extinct about 1770, upon the removal of the pastor and some leading brethren to Royalston, Mass. (Larned's Windham County I, 464; II, 84). Eliphalet is not traceable further. He may have removed to Royalston or elsewhere, or he may have died. His name does not appear with his brothers Levi and John among the petitioners for a new Baptist church in 1773.

CHILDREN.

220.—1. EUNICE, born September 21, 1746, nothing known.
221.—2. JACOB, born November 8, 1748.

103. LEVI[4] WIGHT (Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born October 24, 1712, is traceable by means of an ancient and dilapidated record sent me by Miles Wight[7] Weaver (496). I discover from this document the following: "Killingly December the 1 day, 1742. Levi Wight and Susannah Bastow was married together." I am informed that this name is still found in Killingly, but spelled without the final w. Levi's name occurs frequently in the record of Killingly land transactions. In 1755 he sold his residence to Jacob Wightman. For Levi's connection with the secession of the Baptists from the Parish church, see 102. He was one of the petitioners, who in the summer of 1773, asked the church in Leicester, Mass., for permission to embody as a distinct Baptist church, not however the Six-Principles Church. Leave was granted and on September 9, 1773, "Levy White" and others signed the covenant of the new church. (Larned's Windham County II, 85.) The date of Levi's removal to Oxford, Mass., is not known, but it was probably before the erection in 1785, of the town of Thompson, which had hitherto been a parish of Killingly. Levi and his wife both died in Oxford; "Susannah died June 29 day, 1787, aged 64 years in the month of July following," (Weaver Manuscript), and "Levi Wight died ———— 16 day, 1797, in the eighty-fifth year of his age," (Weaver Manuscript, the month being torn off). The births of six of their children are given in the Killingly town records. I indicate the discrepancies between these records and the Weaver Manuscript.

CHILDREN.

222.— 1. UZZIEL, born September 23, 1743, died November 25, 1745: "lived 2 years, 2 months, 2 days."
223.— 2. UZZIEL (Oziel, in town record), born November 6, 1745, died in November, 1762.
224.— 3. OLIVE, born July 9 (in town record, 8), 1748.
225.— 4. HULDAH, born November 16, 1750.
226.— 5. JOHN, born November 2, 1752.
227.— 6. LYDIA, born October 25 (in town record, 17), 1754.
228.— 7. ABIGAIL, born January 30, 1757.
229.— 8. LEVI, born March 24, 1759, died next day.
230.— 9. LEVI, born in Thompson, July 3, 1761.
231.—10. CALEB, born September 14, 1763.

Note. The children of the above four daughters are not all known. Their nephew, Lyman[6] Wight (493), states that his four aunts had 46 children.

104. JOHN[4] WIGHT (Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born , removed with his father's family to Killingly, Conn. His connection with the Six-Principles Baptist Church in Thompson is related at 102. His name appears as John White among the members of the new Baptist Church in Thompson, established in 1773. He doubtless removed from the town before 1785, the year of the organization of the town of Thompson. No Wights or Whites appear in the town in that year. (Larned's Windham County, II, 344.) The statistics of this family are very meager. I have heard John had another son besides Jacob, but the name even is wanting. I provide for him a number in case he should ever be discovered.

CHILDREN.

232.—1. JACOB, born
233.—2.

106. SARAH[4] WIGHT (Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born August 29, 1718, was living an unmarried woman in Killingly in 1768, in which year she entered into the agreement mentioned at 41. In 1769 she and her sister Deborah sold land to their nephew Jacob[5] Wight (221). As Sarah White she assisted in forming the new Baptist church in 1773; see 103. She then fades from our view.

107. DEBORAH[4] WIGHT (Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born September 8, 1720, married in Killingly November 30, 1757, Joseph Davis, a widower. She was a widow in 1768 when she entered into the agreement mentioned at 41. She joined her sister Sarah in 1769 in a sale of land to their nephew Jacob[5] Wight (221). The widow Deborah Davis appears as one of the members of the new Baptist church formed in 1773; see 103.

108. PETER[4] WIGHT (Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born May 21, 1722, married October 12, 1752 his remote cousin Mary[5] Barber (21), of Medfield. He was the last Wight to own and occupy the Medfield homestead of his ancestor Thomas[1] Wight. For the facts see page 6, ante. Peter moved to Medway in 1762 and lived upon the place which he obtained by exchange from John Hooker. He was a member of Captain Josiah Fuller's company, in Colonel Wheelock's regiment, which marched from Medway to Providence, R. I., on the alarm December 8, 1776. (Jameson's Medway, 217.) By trade Peter was a blacksmith. He died March 16, 1800. Mary, his wife, was living in 1798; her death is not found.

CHILDREN.

234.—1. DANIEL, born October 4, 1753.
235.—2. DINAH, born April 15, 1758.

Note. Peter's name signed to papers relative to his father's estate in 1747:

110. EPHRAIM[4] WIGHT (Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born June 26, 1729, removed from Medfield to Sturbridge and married Abigail Upham in the latter town December 21, 1752. (Sturbridge Printed Records, 66.) In 1755, under the name of Wite, he was one of the Brimfield volunteers in Captain Burt's company in the French and Indian war. (Hyde's Brimfield, 339.) In the Crown Point Expedition of 1756 he was a corporal in Capt. Tristram Davis' company from Brimfield. (Hyde's Brimfield, 340.) On January 6, 1759, his wife died in Sturbridge, and September 11, 1759, he married Eunice Howard of the same place. (Sturbridge Printed Records, 86, 67.) On February 21, 1764, he mortgaged to Comfort, daughter of Peter Domo, a tract described as in "ye northwest part of ye Great Meadow," perhaps a part of the Peter Domo estate in South Hadley. (Judd and Boltwood's Hadley, 297.) How the title to this tract vested in Ephraim does not appear. This mortgage, recorded in Springfield, is not yet satisfied of record. In 1774 Ephraim was living in Wilbraham, where he and his son Ephraim signed the non-consumption pledge, dated June 23, 1774, agreeing not to purchase or consume goods arriving from Great Britain. (History of the Conn. Valley in Mass.; Stebbins' Wilbraham, 232.) In 1775 he and the same son were eight month's men in Capt. Paul Langdon's Company (Register XXX, 34), from Wilbraham engaged in the siege of Boston after the Lexington alarm. (Stebbins' Wilbraham, 234.) On February 7, 1776, Ephraim and his wife Eunice conveyed to Charles Eddy (all the parties being of Wilbraham) certain land and buildings in Wilbraham, near Monson, perhaps now in Hampden. This is our last reference to Eunice. On July 30, 1780, Ephraim Wight, yeoman, conveyed to his son Ephraim, both of Monson, in consideration of the love he bore him, a tract of land and interest in mills known as the Gates property, now in the south part of Wilbraham. This property was for several years the Ephraim Wight homestead. Until recently a woolen mill and shops with water power were operated there. On January 5, 1786, Ephraim quitted to his son all interest in the Gates property. This is the last known of Ephraim. His death and that of Eunice, his wife, have been sought in vain. The births of Ephraim's three children are recorded in Sturbridge as Whites. (Sturbridge Printed Records, 10, 11, 14.)

CHILDREN.

236.—1. EPHRAIM, born February 25, 1754.
237.—2. LYDIA, born January 27, 1756, died in Sturbridge May 16, 1759.
238.—3. LYDIA, born May 2, 1760; thus Ephraim showed his love for Lydia, his mother.

Note. Benjamin Wight, who appears in Stebbins' Wilbraham, 199, and in other places as a settler in Wilbraham in 1740, before its incorporation, and Henry Wight, who appears once in the records and in Stebbins' Wilbraham, 222, as the father of an unnamed son born in March, 1763, are both misspellings of Wrights.

CHAPTER V.

FIFTH GENERATION.

112. JOSEPH[5] WIGHT (Joseph[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 7, 1710, married in Dedham January 13, 1734, Miriam Stanley. Joseph resided in Dedham and his children were born there. His will, naming his sons, Thomas and Henry, executors, was made April 10, 1780, and proved February 28, 1786, but the date of Joseph's death does not appear in the records. Miriam, who united with the Dedham church August 10, 1735, died in Dedham, aged 86, "of old age," January 3, 1797. (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 81, 101.)

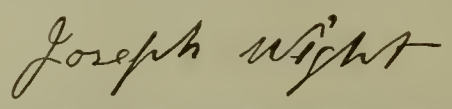
247.—9. SARAH, born October 1, 1753, baptized October 7, 1753.

Note 1. Signature to Joseph Wight's will:



Note 2. The record of Miriam Stanley's marriage (Hill's Dedham records, I, 61,) states that she was of Dedham. I do not find any Stanley family in the records, however. The only other Stanley mentioned in either church or town records is a Sarah Stanley, a member of the south parish church, who died in 1744.

114. BENONI[5] WIGHT (Nathaniel[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 18, 1721, married in Wrentham, April 19, 1750, Sarah Thayer, of that place. They resided in Wrentham, where it is presumed all their children were born, although there is record only of the three youngest. Benoni died in 1775. His estate amounted to £400.11.7. His daughter Ruth chose James Metcalf her guardian, March 4, 1775. The widow was appointed guardian of her son David in 1776. Her death is not found.

CHILDREN.

248.—1. NATHANIEL, born August 20, 1753.
249.—2. ELIZABETH, born January 24, 1755, died in Wrentham November 14, 1756.
250.—3. JABEZ, born December 1, 1756.
251.—4. JONATHAN, born September 7, 1758.
252.—5. DAVID, born March 25, 1761, was living in Barnard, Vt., in 1824.
253.—6. ELIAS, born April 25, 1764. seems to have died young.
254.—7. RUTH, born October 17, 1765, nothing known after 1788, see 117.

115. MARY[5] WIGHT (Nathaniel[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 11, 1726, married in Dedham, June 17, 1746, William Everden (Everdon), of Dedham, and had a daughter Mary[6] Everden, born October 24, 1749. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 75, 79.) William may have belonged to the Dorchester or Charlestown families of that name (Register XVI, 80; XXVI, 249), but his paternity and the subsequent history of himself, his wife and his daughter are unknown to me.

117. JAMES[5] WIGHT (Nathaniel[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 9, 1730, married in Wrentham, March 31, 1779, Esther, widow of Samuel Hancock. His will, made May 10, 1788, mentions no children. He died June 8, 1788, and his widow died October 29, 1794—both in Wrentham. His will names his son-in-law (stepson), Joel Hancock, and his cousins (nephews and niece), Nathaniel, Jabez, Jonathan, David and Ruth Wight and Hephzibeh Ware. His estate inventoried £212.0.4. The signature to his will:

121. SUBIAH[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born March 26, 1743, married March 9, 1768, Zaccheus Hawes, of Sherborn and Dedham. The family resided in Dedham, and Subiah died January 16, 1835. There are such discrepancies between the birth dates of her children, as given in the Dedham records and in Wight's Wight Family that I print both lists without attempting to reconcile them:

CHILDREN (Wight's Wight Family, 82).

1. LUCY[6] HAWES, born January 10, 1769.
2. SALLY[6] HAWES, born May 3, 1776.
3. EBENEZER[6] HAWES, born May 14, 1778.
4. CHLOE[6] HAWES, born June 5, 1780.
5. JOAB[6] HAWES, born April 17, 1782.

CHILDREN (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 133).

1. LUCY[6] HAWES, born January 10—(in Sherborn).
2. SALLEY[6] HAWES, born January 9 1777.
3. CLOE[6] HAWES, born November 4, 1779.
4. EBENEZER[6] HAWES, born October 10, 1781.
(No Joab printed.)

The Dedham records show the filing of the intentions of marriage of Eleazar Perry and Sally Hawes, both of Dedham, on July 29, 1801, and the marriage of the same parties as having taken place September 30, 1800—ten months before the filing. The ceremony was by "Ebenezer Wight, Esqulre," (125), (Hill's Dedham records, I, 169, 208.)

122. MARY[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born February 2, 1745, married May 13, 1762, John, son of John and Hannah Healy. "John, son of John & Hannah Hely, of Roxbury" was baptized in the Dedham church January 6, 1733–4. (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 47.) Mary's eldest child was born in Dedham and the eldest nine were all baptized there. On July 27, 1780, John and his wife Mary were dismissed "to church soon to be gathered in a town called Washington." This was in New Hampshire whither the family removed in 1778 and continued to reside. John died aged 76, August 19, 1810. His widow died August 18, 1827. (History of Washington, N. H., 471.)

He was state senator of New Hampshire in 1824, and a member of the 19th and 20th Congresses of the United States, 1825-1829. He was elected to the 19th Congress as a democrat by 4,000 majority over Ezekiel Webster, federalist. He was the only descendant of Thomas[1] Wight, to my knowledge, who has been in Cougress. He was a councilor of New Hampshire in 1829-32. He died October 10, 1861, in Washington N. H. His portrait is the frontispiece of the History of Washington, N. H.

   3. John Plummer[7] Healy, born December 28, 1810, Dartmouth, 1835, removed to Boston where he resided with Jedediah Barker in Province Court, rooming nearly ten years with Oliver Ditson. In December, 1847, he married Mary Stickney Barker, only daughter of his host; she is still living. On removing to Boston John Plummer studied law in the office of Daniel Webster and was admitted to the bar in 1838. He assisted Webster in preparing and trying his great cases and followed also his political faith and fortunes. Soon after 1838 he became Webster's partner, attending to the affairs of the firm while Webster was in Washington. Mr. Healy was elected to the Massachusetts legislature as a Whig in 1840 and again in 1849-50. In 1854 he was in the state senate from Boston, serving as chairman of the committee on railroads and canals, and as a member of the committee on towns and on education. When Webster became Secretary of State under Fillmore, Mr. Healy was appointed Judge of the United States District Court for the district of California, which he declined with other judicial honors. After Webster's death Mr. Healy, by himself, practiced law at the corner of Court and Tremont streets. In 1856 he was chosen city solicitor, and was constantly reelected until 1881, when the office of corporation counsel was created for him. He died January 4, 1882, at his home, 51 Temple St, and is buried in Mt. Auburn. Appropriate action upon his death was taken by the city government and the Suffolk Bar. A memoir of Mr. Healy, prepared by Godfrey Morse was printed by order of the city council of Boston in 1882. He was a member of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society and a sketch of him will be found in the Register, XXXVI, 338. His portrait appears in the History of Washington, N. H. See also Boston Advertiser, January 5, 1882. His only child was
      1. Joseph[8] Healy, born in Boston August 6, 1849, entered the Boston Latin School in 1860, and remained six years. During his course he received 21 Lawrence prizes, and graduated at the head of his class with first prize for declamation and first Franklin medal. He entered Harvard unconditioned, and graduated in 1870. He studied law with his father for a time, but took his degree of bachelor of laws at the Harvard law school in 1873. He was admitted to the bar September 16, 1873, and formed with Otis Norcross, Jr., the firm of Healy & Norcross, which entered upon a lucrative and important practice. Mr. Healy held several honorable positions in benevolent and literary societies and in social clubs. In 1878 he delivered the Fourth of July oration in Boston Music Hall. At his death he was serving his second term in the common council. He died April 18, 1880, and was buried from King's Chapel, April 22. See an obituary in the Advertiser April 23, 1880. Joseph was a son in whom all his father's hopes centered and when this bright light went out so prematurely the father changed greatly. Joseph Healy's wife was Alice Hale Bird, daughter of William Bird, of Brookline, and he was married September 26, 1877. His only child, Helen Richards[9] Healy, born May 26, 1878, is living with her mother.
   4. Louisa[7] Healy, December 24, 1812—March 14, 1832.
   5. Langdon[7] Healy, born July 28, 1815, married July 28, 1837, Josephine Richards of Washington. He was treasurer of Sullivan County, N. H., in 1863, 4, and moved to Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1866. Among his five children are Sarah C.[8] Healy, born September 6, 1839, who January 7, 1863, married Samuel H. Scripture, and resides in Brooklyn; and Joseph[8] Healy, born May 6, 1852, a physician in Brooklyn.
   6. Sullivan Wight[7] Healy (June 30, 1817—June 29, 1877,), married March 1, 1848, Helen Richards, of Claremont. He was a man of much influence in his native town. See his portrait in the History of Washington, N. H.

Richardson, of Rumford, Me.; Loraine[7], wife of Rev. 124. JOSEPH[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 8, 1748, married July 1, 1772, Miriam Lyscomb, of Stoughton, who united with the Dedham church November 6, 1774. For Joseph's relation to the old Dedham home of Thomas[1] Wight see page 5. See the same page for an account of the Indian who died there in 1774—a statement printed on the authority of Barber's Historical Collections, 460, and Mann's Annals, 66. Among those furnishing supplies for the Continental army in 1781-2 was Joseph Wight who, January 22, 1782, received 12 shillings for two pairs of stocking. (Mann's Annals, 58.) Miriam Wight died in Dedham April 15, 1818; Joseph died March 23, 1826 (Wight's Wight Family, 84), or April 21, 1826 (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 132). Joseph died in the old home of his great ancestor Thomas[1] Wight. He was its last Wight occupant. Soon after his death it was removed and the ground is unused; see pages 5 and 6. In Dedham were born the following

125. EBENEZER[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 24, 1750, was brought up in his father's family and in the employment of agriculture till quite the verge of manhood. At this time the public schools of Dedham furnished but little aid in the acquisition of learning; they were open only a short period during the year and the branches taught scarcely extended beyond the rudiments of an English education. Such as they were, however, he improved them. But his desire extended to a collegiate education. He commenced the study of the classics under great disadvantage, devoting his nights to books and his days to manual labor. To add to his pecuniary resources he taught school during the winter months and subjected all his expenses to the rules of a rigid economy. He completed his preparatory studies under a clergyman in Uxbridge and graduated at Harvard University in 1776. (Wight's Wight Family, 85-87.) It would seem, however, that he was a student at Brown University before entering Harvard, for upon his uniting with the Dedham church, October 15, 1775, he is called "Ebenezer Wight Junr Student at ye College at Providence." (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 87.) He studied divinity under the instruction of Rev. Jason Haven, of Dedham. Soon after passing through the usual studies, he received an unanimous invitation from the Congregational Church and Society in Hollis Street, Boston, to become their pastor as successor to Rev. Dr. Mather Byles. He accepted the call and was ordained February 25, 1778 (Drake's Boston, 590), receiving his dismission from Dedham church February 15, 1778. He was a popular preacher. He had a melodious voice, a distinct enunciation, graceful gestures, an impressive manner and great gifts in prayer. The composition of his sermons was good, according to the standard of the times. His labors among his people were greatly blessed and numbers were added to his church and society. Over-exertion in ecclesiastical labor and study impaired his sight and produced a general debility, from which he received but little relief by vacation and rest. The burning of his church edifice, April 20, 1787, and the acceptance by his Society of the invitation of the Old South Church to worship with them brought him some relief, as the stated service was divided between him and Dr. Eckley, of the Old South. But in 1788 perceiving no permanent improvement he asked his dismissal, which with great reluctance was granted, and his connection with the Hollis Street Church was dissolved September 7, 1788. (Wight's Wight Family, 88-93.) He was re-admitted to the Dedham church by letter from Hollis Street February 24, 1811.

He opened a private academy and continued it a few years. In his government of his pupils he was decided, but mild. He preferred to retain his authority by kindness rather than by fear, by persuasion rather than by compulsion, by appealing to the understanding rather than by inflicting pain. (Wight's Wight Family, 94.) I quote as follows:

"A gentleman of respectable learning and abilities, Ebenezer Wight, Esq., hath opened an academy in the parish and hath devoted his time to the instruction of youths of both sexes in various branches of science. The institution, though new and of a private kind, bids fair to be useful." (Note by Rev. Jason Haven to his sermon preached February 7, 1796, Dedham Pulpit, 485.)

Mr. Wight's income was at no time large, but the practice of economy had enabled him to preserve a competence. This proper regard to his means in his expenditures, with the property he received by his second marriage, placed him in easy circumstances in the evening of life. (Wight's Wight Family, 94.)

Consult page 6 of this book as to the house which came to him upon his second marriage. Mr. Wight married first about 1779, Sarah Brown, born September 28, 1758, who died, childless, March 4, 1781. He married, second, December 13, 1785, Catharine Fuller, of Dedham, born July 12, 1764.

The Dedham records contain the following notices of this Catharine Fuller: Intentions of marriage of "Revd. Thomas Thacher and Miss Catharine Fuller, both of Dedham, November 26, 1783." Intentions of marriage of "The Rev. Mr. Ebenezer Wight, of Boston, and Miss Catharine Fuller, both of Dedham, October 22nd, 1785." (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 162, 163.) Rev. Mr. Thacher was the irascible and eccentric minister in the Clapboard Trees or Third Parish in Dedham, and the author (Geo. Willis Cooke) of The Clapboard Trees Parish expresses the opinion that the oddities of her reverend lover may have frightened her. He adds: "It is said, by way of tradition in the parish, that she visited Mr. Thacher's house just before the marriage was to have taken place, that she carelessly soiled her dress on some fresh paint and that he became very angry with her, so much so that she discarded him." (Cooke's Clapboard Trees, 101.) Mr. Thacher never married.

Mrs. Catharine Wight was a woman of amiable and excellent disposition and of good understanding. She was a most affectionate and devoted woman and a loyal and loving wife. She was charitable to the poor and sympathetic with the distressed. Her character was aptly described by a poor person in Dedham who, lamenting her death, said of her: "She was a friend to man and to beast." "Few ladies in advanced age are more acceptable in the social circle than was Mrs. Wight. Her good understanding, uniform cheerfulness and long acquaintance with the best society, gave interest and instruction to her conversation. In the performance of her domestic duties she was an example of industry, neatness and frugality." "The Sunday before her decease she remarked she was not well, but should attend public worship, as the sacrament was to be administered. This was always to her an occasion of peculiar interest and a more than ordinarily solemn exercise of devotion. She attended church and closed her worship of God in public, in commemorating the death of His Son—a fitting close of a long and exemplary life." (Wight's Wight Family, 103.)

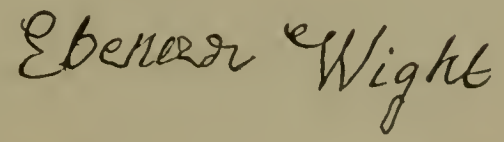
Mr. Wight's last sickness was long and painful. In this hour of trial, as in all the trials of life, he was supported by his faith in the hopes and promises of the gospel. Not a word of complaint or disquiet escaped him. He resigned himself to the disposal of his heavenly Father, hoping to be accepted of Him through the merits and mediation of His Son. (Wight's Wight Family, 94.)

Ebenezer made his will June 20, 1821; he died in Dedham September 25, 1821, and his will was approved October 2, 1821. Catharine's will was made July 1, 1833; she died in Dedham August 29, 1840, and her will was approved December 1, 1840. Their children were born in Dedham.

CHILDREN.

267.—1. DANFORTH PHIPPS, born February 8, 1792, baptized February 12, 1792.
268.—2. CATHARINE, born August 28, 1798, baptized September 2, 1798.
269.—3. EBENEZER, born October 8, 1803, baptized October 23, 1803.
270—4. EDWARD, born July 8, 1805, baptized July 21, 1805.

Note 1. The autograph of Ebenezer Wight:



Note 2. Sarah Brown, who married Rev. Mr. Wight, descended from John Browne, alderman of Stamford, England, in 1376-7. For the links between him and the first settler in New England, see Bond's Watertown, 116. Abraham Browne was of Waltham, Mass., and by wife Lydia had a son Jonathan, born May 15, 1635, who in 1661 married Mary Shattuck. Their son William Brown (September 3, 1684—1756), married December 11, 1718, Sarah Bond, who died, aged 88, June 10, 1777. They had a son, Josiah Brown (August 2, 1724—March 16, 1776) who married April 20, 1749, Hannah Flagg. She died June 22, 1800. Their daughter Sarah married Ebenezer Wight.

Note 3. Catharine Fuller was daughter of Hezekiah Fuller (December 9, 1721—February 3, 1776), who married Anna Draper December 28, 1760. Anna died January 11, 1766. Hezekiah was son of Hezekiah (August 5, 1687—July 8, 1756), who, February 26, 1718, married Elizabeth Fisher. She died September 23, 1788. The elder Hezekiah was son of John Fuller (December 28, 1645—January 15, 1718-9), who January 8, 1672, married Judith Gay. She died November 19, 1718. John's parents were Lieut. Thomas Fuller and Hannah Flower, who were married November 22, 1643. Hannah died April 11, 1672; her husband died September 28, 1690. All these Fullers lived in Dedham.

126. DEBORAH[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 19, 1752, married Peter Niles, of Washington, N. H. They removed to Claremont, N. H., where she died, childless, August 29, 1840.

127. SAMUEL[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born December 15, 1753, was in the revolutionary service. His name is found on the roll of the Dedham company of minute men assembled on the alarm, April 19, 1775, under command of Captain Joseph Guild in Col. Greaton's regiment. Samuel is credited at that time with thirteen days' service. On June 6, 1775 he enlisted as a private for eight months in Captain Thomas Pierce's artillery company in Col. Richard Gridley's regiment at Roxbury camp. Samuel's name also appears as a private on the roll of Captain Robert Smith's company of Needham—"four days' service assisting in taking possession of Dorchester Hill in March, 1776.". Samuel's name also appears as a private on the roll (dated at Medway) of Captain Joseph Lovell's company for twenty days' service in Rhode Island to December 29, 1776. The above information is extracted from the Revolutionary rolls in the office of the secretary of state, Boston. There is no information about Samuel's death. Wight's Wight Family, 84, states that Samuel died in the service of his country in 1776.

128. NATHANIEL[5] WIGHT (Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 22, 1756, was in the Revolutionary service in the same company with his brother Samuel at the alarm, April 19, 1775, and is credited with the same term of service. On April 30, 1775, he enlisted as a private in Captain Joseph Guild's company, in Gen. William Heath's regiment, encamped in Fort No. 2. He was discharged September 14, 1775. Nothing further is found in the Revolutionary rolls in the office of the secretary of state, Boston. He died in the service of his country in 1776. (Wight's Wight Family, 84.)

129. JOSEPH[5] WIGHT (Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born January 6, 1727, married in Norwich, Conn., April 17, 1750, Hannah Kirtland, of Norwich. Joseph was one of the captains in Major Zabdiel Rogers' regiment of militia which did frequent service in the revolution. (Caulkins' Norwich, 382.) Joseph was a member of the Sixth or Chelsea (now the Second) Church society of Norwich and when new pews were builded in 1771 one was assigned to him. The Norwich records give the death of Mrs. Hannah Wight as June 10, 1756—the date of her child's birth. Joseph died in 1798.

CHILDREN.

271.—1. JOSEPH, born January 23, 1755, died August 1, 1756.
272.—2. HANNAH, born June 10, 1756, nothing known, but probably died young.

Note 1. Hannah Kirtland, born July 6, 1729, was daughter of Rev. Daniel Kirtland, pastor of the Third or Newent Church, Norwich, by his wife Mary Perkins. Rev. Daniel's son, Rev. Samuel, who began to spell his surname Kirkland, was the missionary to the Oneida Indians, and the father of John Thornton Kirkland, president of Harvard college. (Register XIV, 242; Caulkins' Norwich, 440, 590.)

Note 2. Among the pew owners in the Chelsea church in 1771 is Hannah Wight (Caulkins' Norwich, 467). I cannot imagine who she is. Joseph's daughter Hannah, even if living in 1771, would have been but 15 years old—too young to be a pew holder. I have supposed the pew holder might be the second wife of Rev. Jabez Wight (50), born Holdridge, but Rev. Jabez was the minister of a different church in 1771, and she would probably attend his church.

130. JABEZ[5] WIGHT (Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born April 2, 1730, married Sarah Lord, of Preston, Conn., where he lived and his children were born. He died August 9, 1787, and is buried in Preston; his widow died, aged 60, October 3, 1788.

CHILDREN.

273.—1. SARAH, born July 28, 1759.
274.—2. RUTH, born May 18, 1762.
275.—3. HEZEKIAH LORD, born April 14, 1765.
276.—4. MARY, born 1767, died in Richmond, Va., in 1891, unmarried.
277.—5. JABEZ, born about 1769.
278.—6. BENJAMIN, born about 1769.
279.—7. LYDIA, born May 28, 1770.
280.—8. NATHANIEL, born 1774, died at Preston in 1789.

Note. I presume Sarah Lord to have been the daughter of Rev. Hezekiah Lord, a pastor in Preston (Caulkins' Norwich, 245). Certainly one of her sons was named for this minister.

131. JOHN[5] WIGHT (Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born February 2, 1732, married, October 11, 1759, Alice Fitch, of Windham, Conn., and lived in Preston. The birth of their son is found in the Norwich records. I know nothing further of John or Alice.

CHILD.

281.—1. JOHN FITCH, born in Preston, May 19, 1761.

133. MARY[5] WIGHT (Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born May 23, 1737, married Amos Geer, of Groton, Conn. They resided in Groton, where their children were born, where he died aged 85, May 19, 1821, and where she died July 18, 1822.

For his portrait and a sketch of his life see Hurd's New London County, 543. Ten children. Three of his sons, John Wight[7] Bill, James A.[7] Bill and Benajah P.[7] Bill, have been members of the legislature of Connecticut.

136. DAVID[5] WIGHT (David[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born March 28, 1718, married in Wrentham, October 22, 1745, Sarah Scott. The records of the church in Natick, kept by Rev. Oliver Peabody, pastor thereof, between 1721–1752, contain the name of David Wight, Jr., as having been received into that church September 13, 1741. He is not mentioned, however, in the Natick town records. His children were born in Dedham. David died April 1, 1752 and administration was granted May 1, 1752. His widow Sarah, son John and daughter Esther Caryl are mentioned in the papers.

CHILDREN.

282.—1. DAVID, born July 13, 1746.
283.—2. JOHN, born November 17, 1748.
284.—3. ESTHER, born September 21, 1750.

Note 1. His widow Sarah married, May 4, 1763, John Griggs, of Dedham.
Note 2. David's handwriting in 1744:

137. ANNA[5] WIGHT (David[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born July 27, 1720, is mentioned in the Rev. Mr. Peabody's records (see 136) as having been received into the Natick church August 2, 1741. She is not mentioned in the Natick records. She married, as the Needham records show, May 8, 1744, Jonathan Parker.

139. SARAH[5] WIGHT (David[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born March 27, 1730, chose her uncle, Hezekiah Allen, her guardian, soon after her father's death. Her intentions of marriage with William Gay, of Dedham, were entered March 21, 1751, and "William Gay and Sary Wight, both of Dedham" were married June 20, 1751. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 82.) William, born December 3, 1730, was son of Hezekiah and Elizabeth Gay. (Register, XXXIII, 49.) Sarah died May 23, 1758, and William married, second, May 8, 1759, Margaret Lewis.

DESCENDANTS.

1. Samuel[6] Gay, born December 1, 1752, married, Dedham, January 18, 1781, Grace, born February 7, 1756 daughter of Benjamin and Sarah White.
2. Rebecca[6] Gay, born March 9, 1756.
3. William[6] Gay, born March 18, 1758.

140. BENJAMIN[5] WIGHT (Daniel[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born , is known by a statement in the will of his father Daniel, of Needham in 1769, where he is called "first born son of my wife after my marriage to her." Otherwise he is nomen et præterea nil.

141. ANN[5] WIGHT (Daniel[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born February 26, 1754, married December 22, 1774, Philip Mills, of Roxbury. They moved to Maine. Philip was living in New Hampshire when his namesake, Philip Mills[7] Wight (611) was young. This last believes there were no children of Philip's marriage with Ann Wight. He married, second, Mehetabel Barker whose posterity lived in Newry, Maine.

142. DANIEL[5] WIGHT (Daniel[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born March 22, 1756, enlisted in April, 1775, with Captain Whiting in Colonel Greaton's Massachusetts regiment to serve eight months, but in the ensuing October being too ill for duty he was furloughed. In April, 1778 he sent a substitute. In June, 1778, he re-enlisted for nine months with Captain Watson, same colonel. On April 10, 1780, he married Hannah Lyon in Needham where he lived until at least three of his children were born. He then removed to New Hampshire, and about 1798 to Maine. In April, 1818, he was living in Newry, Oxford County, Me. In September, 1820, he was living in Portland, Me., and then stated in an application to the United States government for a pension for his services in the war of the Revolution that his wife, then 64 years of age, his son Thomas, then 21 years of age, and his daughter Hannah Hibbard were living with him. Hannah, his wife, died in Bethel, Me., date unknown. Subsequently, after 1824, Daniel married Mary Wight, born Mower, the widow of Joel[5] Wight (214). Daniel removed to Milan, N. H., where some of his children lived, and where he died. His widow lived in the houses of her step-sons Philip and Aaron in Milan, and when Aaron removed to Dummer, N. H., she went with him. Her date of death has been forgotten.

CHILDREN.

285.—1. DANIEL, born November 26, 1780.
286.—2. NATHANIEL, born April 17, 1782.
287.—3. HANNAH, born September 15, 1783.
288.—4. ANNA, born in Jaffray, Cheshire Co., N. H., September 23, 1784.
289.—5. WILLIAM, born , an ensign in the war of 1812; died unmarried.
290.—6. PHILIP, born in Dublin, N. H., about 1792.
291.—7. AARON, born in Dublin, May 20, 1794.
292.—8. THOMAS, born about 1799.

143. JOHN[5] WIGHT (John[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born July 15, 1729, was living in Providence, R. I., at his father's death in 1753. Being the executor mentioned in his father's will, he became a proprietor of the township of New Marblehead, now Windham, Me., and was quite prominent on the proprietor's committee. He married in Marblehead (Rev. Simon Bradstreet officiating), January 6, 1756, Abigail, daughter of Nathaniel Bowen, of Marblehead, a lawyer of much influence there. He spent his early married life in Marblehead. In deeds of his Windham lands in 1763–4 he is called "Joiner." John's future history is uncertain, but he would seem to have moved to Maine after the birth of some of his children, and it is claimed that his son Edward was born in Penobscot, Me. Further search for details of this family has been unavailing. He pre-deceased his wife who, as his widow and administratrix, gave quit-claim deeds of his Windham lands.

CHILDREN.

293.—1. JOHN, born 1757, doubtless in Marblehead.
294.—2. MARY ("Polly" by her relatives), born
295.—3. DANIEL, born in Marblehead, 1761.
296.—4. SARAH, } twins, born
297.—5. ABIGAIL, }
298.—6. NATHAN, born , died a young man, probably in Marblehead.
299.—7. NANCY, born February 6, 1768.
300.—8. EDWARD, born 1774.

Note. These children may not be arranged in order of their birth. Of these children, John, Mary and Nancy (all disguised as Whites), were married in Andover, Mass.; Sarah and Abigail were married in Marblehead—circumstances which show that their father resided in Andover and Marblehead, which, indeed, has been claimed by some of his descendants.

144. MARY[5] WIGHT (John[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born , married in Dedham late in 1751, Daniel, born February 23, 1729–30, son of John and Patience (Mars) Baker, of Dedham. Daniel died March 4, 1753, and his widow married in Dedham, January 2, 1753–4, Joseph Dean. The family lived in Dedham where all Mary's children were born. In 1774 she conveyed with her husband her title to "the one-fifth part of the lands of our honored father, John Wight, clerk, deceased, late of Windham." This fraction indicates either that there were other children of John[4] than those given under 53, or that there were living of his children in 1774 John, Mary, Ann, Eunice and Benjamin—presuming the death of the widow of John[4]. Of Ann, Eunice and Benjamin I know nothing further. "The Widdow, Mary Dean, Relict of Joseph Dean, Dec'd Octo'r 5th, 1791." (Hill's Dedham Town Records, I, 229.)

DESCENDANTS.

3. Jonathan[6] Dean, baptized October 14, 1759.
4. Eliphalet[6] Dean, baptized April 4, 1762.

151. JEMIMA[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born October 22, 1725, married in Wrentham, June 24, 1745, Benjamin Blackington (Blackinton), presumed to be the Benjamin who was the son of Penticost and Mary Blackinton, inhabitants before 1702 of Attleboro. Penticost died September 24, 1715 (Daggett's Attleboro, 89). Jemima's husband died in Wrentham, April 13, 1753. The will of Jonathan Wight, her father, made in 1773, mentions as then living Jemima and her son Benjamin. I do not find her death.

DESCENDANTS.

1. Jonathan[6] Blackington, born in Attleboro, November 17, 1745.
2. Benjamin[6] Blackington, born in Wrentham, January 4, 1746–7. Eaton's Thomaston, II, 148, gives date of Benjamin's birth January 28, 1750, which I think an error. Benjamin was the ancestor of the Blackingtons of Rockland, Maine
3. Eliphalet[6] Blackington, born in Wrentham, October 7, 1751, died February 22, 1757.
4. Elizabeth[6] Blackington, born in Wrentham, December 16, 1753, died May 20, 1754—a posthumous child, recorded as daughter of "widow Jemima Blackington."

153. JOSEPH[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born December 29, 1729, married in Wrentham September 22, 1755, Abigail Farrington of the same place, who died there aged 22 August 25, 1758. On June 9, 1763, Joseph married in Wrentham Abigail Ware, born December 15, 1740. A notice of this marriage mentions Joseph as "of a place called Otice Field in the county of Cumberland, yeoman." (Register XLI, 34.) This notice must have been written long after the event as all of Joseph's children were born in Wrentham. In 1781 Joseph with perhaps some of his sons prospected at New Marblehead (Windham), Maine, where long before his remote cousin Rev. John[4] Wight (53) had settled. Joseph's movements from 1781 until the fall of 1783 are variously reported. It is certain however that in November, 1783, he removed with all his family, except his son James, to Otisfield, where he settled upon "a beautiful ridge of land near the centre of the town," a portion of which is still owned by his posterity. His account book, owned by his descendant Joseph Franklin[5] Wight (1629) and now upon my table, shows that he was ready to turn his hand to many things required in new settlements, such as making surtouts, waistcoats, bearskin muffs, boots and shoes. He was also a farmer and part proprietor of a saw mill upon Saturday Pond. The dates in his account book extend from 1785 to 1794. Abigail Wight died March 29, 1799, Joseph died October 20, 1804, both in Otisfield. Mr. William A. Emery ("Mark Tapley"), of Oxford, Me., has written me a long and entertaining account of Joseph Wight and his sons, which I would gladly print if space permitted. He characterizes the family as an uncommonly hardy athletic race. Although school privileges were scant in the days of Joseph's children they all contrived to acquire a fair education and to accumulate good estates. They were influential in the community where they resided and were always respected and trusted. In some of the children, notably in Thomas (306), were developed eccentricities of character to this day remembered and recited, which, however, never interfered with the usefulness of their lives or lessened the regard of their neighbors.

Note 1. The Wares: Robert Ware, of Dedham, whose English home is not defined (Register, XLI, 21), married in Dedham, March 24, 1644–5, Margaret Hunting, daughter of John, the first ruling elder of Dedham church, by his wife Esther. Robert died April 19, 1699; his wife died August 26, 1670—both in Dedham. The will of "Robert Ware, the aged," names as overseers his "loveing friends" Deacons Thomas Metcalf, William Avery and Joseph[3] Wight (9). Robert's children were born in Dedham. The three sons, below named, assisted in settling Wrentham in 1671 and died there:

1. JOHN WARE (October 6, 1646—April 7 1718), "Captain" and Indian warrior (Norfolk County History, 632), married December 10, 1668, Mary Metcalf (August 15, 1646—March 22, 1676–7), of Dedham (182, Note 2; 36, Note). Their son John (June 17, 1670—March 29, 1751), married, January 14, 1695–6, Mehetabel (February 22, 1674–5—March 25, 1750), daughter of William Chapen, of Dorchester. The younger John also lived in Wrentham where his daughter Rebecca was born, about 1717. She married, August 30, 1733, William Poffer, Jr., of Wrentham, and had a son William, born April 24, 1734, father of Molly Poffer, or Puffer, wife of Daniel[5] Wight (234).—Another son of John and Mary Ware, Lieutenant Eliezer, by name (October 2, 1676—July 23, 1750), lived in Wrentham and married, February 13, 1701, Mary (September 17, 1679—April 2, 1768), daughter of Daniel and Abigail (Gay) Hawes Their son, Eliezer Ware (November 11, 1701—July 8, 1751), married May 20, 1736, Hannah, born May 3, 1711, daughter of Thomas Man, of Wrentham (Register, XIII, 326). They lived in that part of Wrentham now West Franklin. Their son, Eli Ware, born May 31, 1748, was husband of Tamar[5] Wight (206).
2. NATHANIEL WARE (October 7, 1648—July 10, 1724), married, October 12, 1696, Mary Wheelock (Wheelak, in record), who died March 25, 1750. Their son, Captain Nathaniel Ware (August 6, 1697—March 4, 1781), married, January 25, 1726–7, Priscilla Grant, who died aged 86, May 3, 1788. The captain was born and died in Wrentham. His daughter Abigail married Joseph Wight, above.
3. ROBERT WARE (August 1, 1653—September 16, 1721), married June 4, 1677 Sarah (December 7, 1648—April 13, 1718), sister of Mary Metcalf, who married John Ware. A son, Ebenezer (March 15, 1677–8—April 26, 1750), of Wrentham, was father of Eliphalet Ware (March 25, 1711—November 28, 1779), who married August 16, 1733, Experience Garnsey, of Medway. Eliphalet's daughter Elizabeth, born in Wrentham, July 2, 1741, married Lemuel[5] Wight (162).—Robert and Sarah Ware had two other sons, Robert, who married Elizabeth[4] Wight (59), and Michael, who married Jeane[4] Wight (58).

4. ESTHER WARE (September 28, 1655—September 3, 1734), married, May 13, 1673, Rev. Samuel Man, of Wrentham (19, 22).

Note 2. Autograph of Joseph Wight, as found in his account book:

155. ELIZABETH[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born July 14, 1735, married at Wrentham April 2, 1754, Ebenezer Cox, whom the Wrentham records designate as plain Ebenezer at the birth of his first child, Lieutenant at the birth of his second and Captain when the third was born. In her father's will Elizabeth is called Elizabeth Cox of Hardwick to which place the family moved about 1760. Ebenezer, who died aged 41, March 2, 1768, in Hardwick, was a distinguished officer in the French and Indian war. (Paige's Hardwick, 355.)

In 1773, when her father's will was made, she was dead, having had a son John[6] Barker, born in Wrentham, June 2, 1763, and perhaps other children.

157. TIMOTHY[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born November 10, 1741, was a soldier in the war of the revolution. He married in Wrentham December 24, 1767, Mary Boyden of that place. The date of her death is as yet undiscovered. He married in Wrentham January 30, 1777, Sarah Fisher. Not long after, he removed with his family to Monmouth, Maine, where upon his farm he raised his large family and where he passed the remainder of his life. The date of death of his wife Sarah is unknown. She died after July 17, 1799. Timothy in his old age married the widow Curtifer (Curtiford, Crediford, orthography variously given), of Vienna, Maine. She was the mother of his two youngest children. Of the following children the first four were born in Wrentham, the remainder in Monmouth. Timothy died on his Monmouth farm in 1824 or 1825.

324.—15. HENRY, born . See Note.
325.—16. MARY, born . See Note.

Note. The two youngest children are supposed to have been born about 1807–10. Henry died when 7 or 8 years of age. He had been helpless from infancy, sound neither in body nor mind. Mary never married, and died, it is supposed, about 1844-5. Of the adult sons of Timothy Wight, one who knew most of them personally writes: "They were all moral, honest, conscientious, temperate and religious men. They had perhaps too much of what is called in Windsor, Maine, the Wight temper, but if they were quick to resent an affront or insult, they were quick to forgive if they thought no real injury intended. They lived peaceably with their neighbors, and were respected and trusted implicitly by them. They were much more particular to pay their debts than to exact their due, but were nevertheless perfectly capable of maintaining their rights."

159. OLIVE[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born November 29, 1745, married in Wrentham September 21, 1763, Lemuel Ashley. Olive is called in her father's will Olive Ashley of Oakham. She had Lucinda[6] Ashley, born February 13, 1764; Olive[6] Ashley, born May 2, 1766; and Betty[6] Ashley, born January 3, 1769, all in Wrentham.

162. LEMUEL[5] WIGHT (Thomas[4], Eleazar[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born September 16, 1746, married May 16, 1765, Elizabeth Ware (153, Note 1), of Wrentham. Four years later Lemuel sold the paternal homestead in Medfield (ever since known as the Wight piece) to Moses Hartshorn and removed to Wrentham. Lemuel entered the patriot service in March, 1781, for three years in Captain Trotter's company, Col. Rufus Putnam's regiment, and was discharged at West Point, N. Y., in December, 1783. His wife died November 7, 1813. In March, 1818, he was living in Foxboro (which was carved out of Wrentham in 1778, 12, Note 4), and died there June 21, 1821. His daughter Hannah was then living with him. Lemuel's five eldest children were born in Wrentham.

CHILDREN.

331.—6. JAMES, born
332.—7. SIMON, born ; nothing known.

163. JAMES[5] WIGHT (Eleazar[4], Eleazar[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born March 25, 1732, married in Medway May 2, 1759, Ruth[4] Harding (45). This is the James Wight who with other Medway citizens "did Have turns to Crown forte" in 1754. Two years later he was again on similar service, dubbed as Jeams Wite. (Jameson's Medway, 212, 213). James' name was in the list of qualified voters of Medway in 1804. (Jameson's Medway, 65). He died November 2, 1808, in Medway, his wife had died there June 22, 1796. See 164.

CHILD.

333.—1. THOMAS, born in Medway, January 1, 1760.

164. RELIEF[5] WIGHT (Eleazar[4], Eleazar[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born January 5, 1734, is called a "spinster" of Mendon, in a deed in 1756 made by her uncle Thomas[4] (64) to James Wight, husbandman, Relief Wight, spinster, and Eleazar Wight, husbandman." By this deed the grantor quitclaimed to the surviving children of his brother Eleazar[4] (65) all his interest in Mendon lands that had been the property of Eleazar Wight of Medfield, late deceased. These might have been lands which descended from Eleazar[3] Wight (17), who died in Medfield March 18, 1747. In 1762 Relief Wight married Ebenezer Wood, son of Samuel, son of Thomas Wood.

165. ELEAZAR[5] WIGHT (Eleazar[4], Eleazar[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born December 1, 1735, is called husbandman in the deed at 164. He married December 3, 1761, Ruth, born February 30 (so in the record), 1739, daughter of William and Hannah (Nelson) Legg of Milford, Mass. Eleazar resided in Milford and he and his wife were members of the Congregational church there. They lived in the house formerly the property in whole or in part of Nathaniel Morse. It descended to Abner[6] Wight (336) and then passed out of the family. (Ballou's Milford, 1121). Eleazar died December 3, 1775; his widow became the second wife of Lieut. Jesse Whitney, and died October 21, 1785. Eleazar's children were born in Milford.

167. WILLIAM[5] WIGHT (Joshua[4], Joshua[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born November 3, 1763, is doubtless, despite the discrepancies, the William Wight of Tunbridge, Vt., who stated in April, 1818, that he was aged 62 years, that while living in East Windsor, now Ellington, Conn., he volunteered for one year in June 1779 with Captain Grant in Col. Enos' Connecticut regiment going to White Plains, West Point and Horse Neck. He was enrolled for one year as a minute man but the duty required was to turn out upon alarms. He served 6 months from June 1781 as a substitute in Capt. Ten Eyck's Company, Col. Butler's regiment, at White Plains and West Point. He served one year from June 1779 with Captain Allen in Col. Wells' regiment which went to New London and was discharged in March 1780. He also served three months under Col. Ripley in 1778. He was born, he stated, in Windham, Conn., in 1762, but this does not correspond with his former statement that he was 62 in 1818.

There are Wights in or near Tunbridge, but I cannot learn whether or not they are his descendants.

168. JOHN[5] WIGHT (Joshua[4], Joshua[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born March 12, 1770, is but indefinitely traced, if at all. There was a John Wight who was highway surveyor in Windham, Vermont, in 1804. He then fades from view. Whether he was the son of Joshua or not I cannot say. See 170.

169. EBENEZER[5] WIGHT (Joshua[4], Joshua[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born October 28, 1772, is said to have had quite a family and perhaps Mrs. John Mead of Roxbury, Delaware county, N. Y., is his daughter. See 170.

170. HARVEY[5] WIGHT (Joshua[4], Joshua[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]), born October , 1779, was one of the first settlers on the Beaver Dam Creek in Delaware County, N. Y. He married , Juda Jenkins, and their children were all born in Roxbury said Delaware County. Harvey died March 21, 1852, aged 72½ years and Juda died March 28, 1852, aged 70 years, 8 months, 25 days, both at Taylor, Cortland Co., N. Y. Of Harvey's father, Betsey[6] Elmer (340) says she remembers seeing him and he died when she was small. Of Harvey's brothers Eben and John, Mrs. Elmer says, "One was supposed to go to Ohio." Mrs. John Mead, Roxbury, N. Y., was a niece of Harvey. Harvey's children may not all be arranged chronologically.

350.—13. MARIA, born July 6, 1821.

Note. In Delaware County N. Y. History, 274, I find that a Joshua Wight was elected an overseer of highways in Roxbury in that county in April 1800. This circumstance lends additional confirmation to the belief that Harvey Wight is properly placed, but it brings another difficulty. Inasmuch as Joshua[4] Wight (67) could not have been an overseer of highways in 1800, I am forced to suppose he had another son Josbua not named, or that all the children from William (167) through Harvey (170) are a generation too early, being the children of a parent not found in Windham, Conn., who would be the son of Joshua (67). The latter supposition is confirmed by the statement of Mrs Elmer, above, that she bad seen her grandfather. Tbis, which is the only doubtful affiliation in my book, I must leave for others to investigate.

171. JOHN[5] WIGHT (Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married in Scituate, R. I., May 2, 1746 Mary Fiske. The same year his father deeded him land. In 1759 John deeded his interest in a farm to his brother Benjamin, reciting "it being the farm which our uncle Silvanus Wight late of Scituate died possessed of." John and his wife deeded land to their son David in 1770. John's life was passed in Scituate where his children were born. He lived on Burnt Hill, half a mile southwest from his father. He was a member of the Six Principles Baptist Church (102), and is mentioned by his descendants as Deacon John. He deeded a farm to his son Aaron in Scituate, and here he and his wife were supported by Aaron during their old age. John died September 23, 1808, and his widow died October 8, 1809—both in Scituate. His will, dated June 20, 1803, probated October 22, 1808, mentions his wife Mary, his daughters Mary Franklin, Elizabeth Colvin, Silence Potter and Chloe Hines, his grandson Hopkins Fiske, son of his daughter Dorcas Fiske, deceased, his sons David and Aaron, his granddaughter Ellis Wight, daughter of Dorcas Fiske, deceased, his grandchildren John, Deliverance and Lucy Wight, children of his son John Wight, Jr., deceased. It is impossible to arrange the children chronologically.

His first wife Albethany Bennett (70, Note), was the mother of his eldest ten children. She died in 1773. His second wife Elizabeth was daughter of Tenty Potter (357) of Cranston, and bore him two children. William lived in Scituate. He was "more than 80 years of age" at his death in July 1807. He was 5 ft. 7 or 8 inches in height. He was never a church member, yet was one of the most peaceable, honest and upright of men, and was never known to use a profane word. His will is dated January 7, 1807, and was probated August 15, 1807. His widow died May 17, 1821, in her 86th year. Her last expression was a great desire for longer life.

182. NATHAN[5] WIGHT (Elnathan[4], Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born August 15, 1757, was brought up at his stepfather's home in Wrentham (Franklin) under the ministry of the venerable Dr. N. Emmons. Upon reaching his majority he, with his brother Eliab entered into the possession of their father's Bellingham estate, where they lived for sometime together. Nathan ultimately resigned the entire possession to his brother. As Captain Nathan he married in Franklin November 6, 1780, Jerusha Metcalf, born there in 1760. Their five children were born in Bellingham. There is recorded in Springfield a deed dated November 11, 1796, of a farm in South Brimfield (now Wales) for $1600 from Daniel Munger to "Eliab and Nathan Wight, gentlemen." The next year Eliab conveyed his share in this farm to his brother and Nathan removed to Wales. He was a prominent man in business and town affairs in Wales and was selectman in 1799, 1800 and 1802. Nathan was a farmer and drover and eventually became a shipper to Holland Purchase, N. Y., which latter circumstance turned his attention to that state as a place of residence. He moved to Attica soon after the death of his wife which occurred April 8, 1817. Here he had a saw mill. He died of apoplexy in Attica December 1, 1832 "very much lamented by all his acquaintances." So writes his son Theron to his brother Pliny December 9, 1832. The writer further states that Nathan, their father, had been at work in his mill the Thursday previous to his death and had been out of doors half an hour before he died.

Note 2. The Metcalfs: For an account of the origin of this name see Jameson's Medway, 502. Rev. Leonard Metcalf was born in 1545 and was rector of Tatterford, Norfolk, Eng. (Jameson's Medway, 502.) His son Michael was born in Tatterford, 1586, and was a dornix weaver in Norwich, of which city he was made freeman June 21, 1618. His wife Sarah was born June 17, 1593, and was married October 13, 1616. Their seven eldest children were born in St. Benedict's, Norwich, and four later at St. Edmondsbury. He was a man of much prominence in Norwich and was the object of the persecutions of Bishop Wren and his chancelor Corbet. See the statement of his reasons for emigrating made by Michael Metcalf in a letter "to all the true professors of Christ's Gospel within the city of Norwich," written from Plymouth, Eng., on the eve of his departure for America, Register, XVI, 279. He sailed in April, 1637, with his wife, eight children and his servant Thomas Comberbach (Hotten's Original Lists, 289.) He was admitted a townsman of Dedham, July 14, 1637. His wife died November 30, 1644; he died December 24, 1664. (Hill's Dedham Records, I, 127, 9.) Three of his children are of present interest:

1. MICHAEL METCALF (August 29, 1620—December 24, 1654), of Dedham, married April 2, 1644, Mary Fairbanks (36, Note). Their daughter Mary, born August 15, 1646, married, December 10, 1668, John Ware (153, Note 1), of Dedham. Another daughter Sarah, born December 7, 1648, married June 4, 1677, Robert Ware (153, Note 1), of Wrentham. The youngest child of Michael and Mary Metcalf was Eleazar, born March 20, 1653, deacon of the Wrentham church. He married, April 9, 1684, Milletiah Fisher. The oldest surviving son of Deacon Eleazar was Michael, born May 21, 1687, elder of the Wrentham church. He married Abiel Colburn, of Dedham, and had twelve children. The seventh child was Col. James Metcalf, born 1728, died 1803, deacon of Dr. Emmons' church in Wrentham. He married, January 3, 1754, Abial Haven (Note 3) and had a daughter Jerusha, who married Nathan[5] Wight above. Abiel, the eleventh child of Michael and Abiel Metcalf, married Michael[5] Ware (58). Eleazar and Milletiah Metcalf had a younger son, Eleazar, born November 21, 1710, who married Margaret[5] Ware (58).
2. JOHN METCALF (September 5, 1622—November 27, 1675), of Dedham, married March 22, 1647, Mary Chickering and had a son, Eleazar Metcalf, father of Michael, father of Peletiah, father of Benjamin Metcalf, who married Eunice[6] Ware (59). (Register, XLI, 48.)
3. Deacon THOMAS METCALF (December 27, 1629—November 16, 1702), of Dedham, married, September 12, 1656, Sarah Paige. Their son, Thomas Metcalf, born May 7, 1671, married Sarah Avery (46).

Note 3. Haven: Richard Haven, with his wife Susanna, came from the west of England and settled in Lynn in 1645. There Susanna died February 7, 1682, and there Richard died in 1703. Among twelve children were:

1. NATHANIEL HAVEN (June 30, 1664—1746) of Framingham; wife, Elizabeth. Their oldest child, Martha, born April 7, 1690, married, first, Samuel Wesson, and, second, January 12, 1714, Isaac Cozzens. Isaac and Martha had Rebecca Cozzens (March 24, 1730—November 19, 1807), who, May 22, 1750, married Ezekiel Morse. Their son, Abner Morse, was father of Betsy Morse, who married Seneca[6] Wight (380).
2. Deacon MOSES HAVEN (May 20, 1667—November 14, 1747), of Lynn, married Mary Ballord. Their youngest child, Daniel Haven, born June 16, 1708, an octogenarian, lived in Framingham and Dover, and had, by wife Mehetabel, a daughter, Abial Haven, born July 1, 1732. She was the wife of Col. James Metcalf (Note 2). (Adams' Haven Genealogy.)

183. ELIAB[5] WIGHT (Elnathan[4], Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born June 29, 1760, was brought up in Franklin with his step-father Mann, where he imbibed the doctrines of the venerable Dr. N. Emmons, and received religious influences, which controlled his whole life. The same views of doctrine held by his parents and Mr. Mann were received by him, and were held also by his wife Jemima Hawes of Franklin, whom he married November 23, 1782. She was a woman of great excellence. The farm belonging to his father was at first occupied by Nathan and Eliab together, but came eventually into the entire ownership of Eliab, who dwelt there until his death. After Mr. Mann's death Eliab's mother came to the farm to live. Eliab was a warm friend of Rev. Mr. Alden of the Baptist church Bellingham, and was a deacon in his church. He enjoyed also the intimate friendship of Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Kendrick of Hamilton, N. Y., who spent two years of his early ministry in Bellingham. Eliab held until old age the office of justice of the peace. His wife who had been born January 28, 1761, died April 26, 1835. He survived until October 4, 1855. His children were born in Bellingham.

184. DAVID[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born August 16, 1733, married in Medway June 19, 1760, Catharine Morse who was born in Medfield March 5, 1737. Immediately after the marriage David began housekeeping "on the great public road in Medway." In 1766 he erected a new house there and opened it for public entertainment. (Davis' Sturbridge and Southbridge, 26). Earlier than this however he was licensed to sell liquor, for from the settlement of the Henry Harding estate in 1764 we learn that Asa Boyden made the coffin for Mr. Harding, Amos Plimpton dug the grave, Benjamin Hews "toled the bell," and David Wight furnished three pints of rum for the funeral. (Tilden's Medfield, 406). About 1773 David sold out his business as innkeeper and removed westward with his family, making the pioneer settlement upon the banks of the Quinebaug river in Sturbridge. He purchased 1000 acres of wild land, from the heirs of Governor Saltonstall of Connecticut for $4500. During the negotiation for this purchase, Mr. Wight visited Sturbridge to view this tract of wild land, and at the same time went farther up the river and looked over a tract now within the limits of Holland, and known as the Church place, and which included a portion of the land now occupied by the reservoir of the Hamilton Woolen Co. Mr. Wight returned to Medway undecided which purchase would prove the better bargain. It was finally arranged that Mrs. Wight should make a tour of inspection and decide which tract to take. Accordingly preparations were made and Mrs. Wight made the journey solitary and alone on horseback, taking along with her, in a pair of saddle-bags, provision sufficient to supply need between the points of public accommodation, which, at that time, were not very abundant, for the road, a portion of the way, was a mere path, indicated by a line of marked trees, and therefore was not very inviting to hotel-keepers. At length Mrs. Wight reached the Quinebaug and took a careful survey, with the eye, of both tracts, and decided at once to locate in Sturbridge and make that their future home. She returned without mishap to Medway after an absence of four weeks and the contract of purchase was immediately closed. On May 10, 1774, the family started for their new home. The first night their teams rested in Uxbridge and the second in Oxford plains. On the third day in passing through the Charlton woods, one load was upset whereon was the young son Alpheus. From beneath many moveables the child was extricated unhurt and the journey finished that night—May 12, 1774. Their first night in Sturbridge was spent in a little hut near the residence of the late Alpheus Wight[8] Prouty (929). The tract purchased embraced all the territory of Wight Village and included the premises of George[8] Wight (1818), and the Worcester South Agricultural Grounds. Work was immediately begun in clearing the land and before winter a comfortable house was built upon the spot of the first encampment, which was occupied until 1787 when the home was finished in which David lived until his death. This is the house later occupied by Caroline[7] (Wight) Prouty (929). The former house was converted into a shop where David worked at his trade as a cabinetmaker. (Southbridge Journal, May 23, 1873.)

The improvement of this Sturbridge farm was made during the period of high war prices. This fact with his large land purchase and the depreciation of paper money rendered David's circumstances embarrassing for a few years. William Brattle (Note 2) from whom the thousand acres were purchased, and who held David's note for a considerable sum departed for Halifax during the war and never returned. After his departure David received payment for his inn in Medway in paper money, but could not find Mr. Brattle to redeem his own paper. As a result the paper money depreciated in his hands to his loss $2000. In 1796, however, while in Boston with his son David to effect a settlement with William Brattle's son Thomas (then in America to arrange the affairs of his deceased father) the younger David bought for $10 a ticket in the Harvard College lottery. It drew a prize of $5000. The elder David took $2000 from his son in exchange for Sturbridge land, and with the aid of this money all foreign claims upon the farm were removed. (Davis' Sturbridge and Southbridge 26–30).

The children and grandchildren of David in goodly numbers settled closely around their ancestor, so that "Wight village" grew up. David died September 8, 1822, and his widow died February 18, 1827—both in Sturbridge. Their children were born in Medway.

390.—3. OLIVER, born September 27, 1765.

Note 1. Catharine Morse was daughter of Joshua Morse (December 28, 1710—June 24, 1773), of Medfield, who, in 1733, married Mary Partridge. Joshua was the son of Hon. Joshua Morse (April 2, 1679—April 26, 1749), by his second wife, widow Mary Paine, of Braintree. Hon. Joshua's parents were Samuel and Elizabeth (Wood) Morse (7, Note 2).

Note 2. David Wight moved to Sturbridge forty years after the first settlers and thirty-six years after the incorporation of the town. Its population in 1774 was about 1,200 or 1,300. Yet David and his sons wrought their homesteads from new land at that date and in a comparative wilderness. David's title ran as follows: Early in the history of Massachusetts Bay that colony gave to Sir Richard Saltonstall 2,000 acres on the banks of the Connecticut river. In 1713 the title thereto had vested in his great-grandson, Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall, of New London, Conn. The new boundary line between Massachusetts and Connecticut, established in 1713, placed these acres, as well as many other grants from Massachusetts, south of the division line. According to the agreement between the two colonies, Massachusetts paid for these lands found to be in Connecticut by other lands in the now undisputed territory of Massachusetts. These lands were known as equivalent lands. In May, 1714, Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall, then governor of Connecticut, accepted of the General Assembly of the colony the right to "take up to his own use the said quantity of acres, among the equivalents allowed to this colony, where it shall best suit him, provided the tract be taken up in one entire piece." It suited him to select the central valley of Sturbridge, which was surveyed November 24, 1714, and called Pine land. Gov. Saltonstall's daughters, to whom this property went, were Elizabeth, wife of Richard Christophers; Mary, wife of Jeremiah Miller; Sarah, wife of Samuel Davis, all of New London; and Katherine, wife of William Brattle, of Cambridge. (Register, XXV, 81.) William Brattle was a descendant of Thomas Brattle (83). See Harris' Brattle Family, 3. The eastern half of the 2,000 acres, vested in Mrs. Christophers and Mrs. Miller, who sold it to William Ward in 1732. The western half fell to the other sisters, but eventually settled in the Brattles and remained in them until sold to David Wight in 1774. (Private letter from Levi B. Chase, Esq, 37.)

185. JONATHAN[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born November 9, 1734, married in Boston July 29, 1760, Lois Clark of Medfield, born November 26, 1735. Jonathan built the house in Medfield, now owned by his descendant, George Horatio[8] Wight (1851). Jonathan was one of the eleven citizens of Medfield drafted to fill that town's quota in 1781, for the continental army. The officer warned these citizens of their selection, but he complained that they "payd no Regard to my warning." (Tilden's Medfield 517, 176). Jonathan was however in the service of his country at some time during the revolutionary war. He was selectman of Medfield in 1777, 1787, 1794, 1795. In 1804 he was chosen deacon of the old church of which he had been a member since 1761. His wife died September 6, 1801; he died June 12, 1830—both in Medfield. There also were born their

Note. Adams: The English ancestry of Henry Adams of Braintree, is as yet undetermined. As to the forgery of a long English line extending into Wales in the 14th century, see Register VII, 39; XXXI, 333; XXXVII, 159. Henry Adams "who took his flight from the dragon persecution in Devonshire" (Register VII, 40), emigrated in 1632, with at least eight sons, to America and settled in that part of Braintree which later became Quincy. Four of the sons, Henry, Peter, Edward and Jonathan, were among the proprietors of Medfield.

1. HENRY ADAMS, born in England about 1604, principal military officer and first town clerk of Medfield, was killed in his doorway by the Indians February 21, 1676. His wife Elizabeth, whom he married October 17, 1643 was daughter of Moses Paine, of Braintree, and was wounded by the accidental discharge of a gun on the same day her husband was slain, and died the next day. Their son Moses (October 26, 1654-1729), of Sherborn, by wife Lydia Whitney had a son James Adams of Sherborn. James married Abigail Hill and had a daughter Elizabeth Adams, wife of Elisha[4] Rockwood (27).—Henry Adams (November 19, 1657—1733), a younger brother of Moses, married Prudence Frary (August 20, 1662—February 20, 1750), daughter of John Frary and his wife Elizabeth Harding (Morse's Frary family, 179). Henry and Prudence had a son Jeremiah (January 14, 1691—October 8, 1772), who was dismissed from the Medfield to the Medway church in 1749. Jeremiah by wife Rebecca had a son Elisha Adams (February 19, 1719—March 23, 1781). Elisha married November 26, 1741, Rachael Daniell of Medway, and they were the parents of Rev. Daniel Adams who married Silence[5] Wight (192).—Henry and Prudence (Frary) Adams had another son Henry (March 26, 1702—November 3, 1782), of Medfield, who married Jemima (March 16, 1709—1785), daughter of Hon. Joshua Morse and granddaughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Wood) Morse (7, Note 2). Henry and Jemima had a son Enoch Adams who married Eunice[5] Wight, above; a daughter Elizabeth (August 1, 1736—December 11, 1822), who married Oliver Adams, below; a daughter Jemima (April 11, 1740—October 27, 1814), who, September 27, 1764, married Joseph Lovell, of Medway, and had Jemima Lovell, wife of Ezra[6] Richardson (21); and a son Elijah (1743-1823). This last married Abigail Chenery of Medfield, and had a daughter Abigail, wife of Nathan[6] Wight (396).
2. PETER ADAMS, moved to Medfield about 1652 and died 1690. By wife Rachel he had a son Samuel (1671-1731), a cordwainer of Medfield, whose only child Sarah Adams married Samuel[4] Ellis (22).

3. EDWARD ADAMS, settled in Medfield about 1652, and had, by wife Lydia, a son Jonathan Adams, who married Mary[3] Ellis (20). Edward had also a son John (1657—March 1, 1751), who married in 1682 Deborah Partridge. John and Deborah were parents of Daniel Adams, born in 1686, of Medway. Daniel, by wife Sarah, had a daughter Abigail Adams, wife of Abraham[4] Harding (45). Another son ascribed to John Adams, born 1657, although not included in the Adams Genealogy in Tilden's Medfield, 280, was Jonathan of Medway, who died May 12, 1744. By wife Dorcas he had a son Jonathan (August 30, 1737—March 21, 1818), who married Catharine Boyden (1738—December 10, 1819). These last had a son Micah Adams (1762—April 1, 1842), of Medway, whose wife was Mercy Penniman (1765—April 23, 1829). Micah and Mercy were parents of Edward Adams (May 4, 1798—September 23, 1870), who married October 4, 1829, Keziah Lovell Clark, born in Milford, October 30, 1804. Their daughter Mary Richardson Adams, was wife of George Horatio[5] Wight (1851).—A daughter of John Adams born 1657, Hannah by name, born in 1707, married Timothy[4] Ellis (22).—Edward and Lydia Adams had also a son Henry Adams, who married Patience[3] Ellis (24).
4. JONATHAN ADAMS, went to Medfield. He married Elizabeth Fussell and lived in Medway (now Millis). They had a son Deacon Jonathan Adams (1679—January 24, 1718), who married Thamezin Sheffield, who was born in Holliston May 25, 1673. These last had a son Ezekiel (1705–1777), who removed from Medway to Medfield. He married in 1740 Lydia Lovell, and had a son Gershom Adams (1745–1834), who married Prudence Bullen. They were parents of Prudence Adams, wife of Charles[6] Wight (411). —A younger son of Deacon Jonathan and Thamezin was also named Jonathan (1709—November 4, 1804), of East Medway. He married April 30, 1732, Patience Clark (May 3, 1710—July 11, 1801), and had a son Oliver Adams, born June 30, 1738, of Medway, who married Elizabeth Adams, above. Oliver and Elizabeth had a son Jasper Adams (February 23, 1767—March 6, 1820), who married November 22, 1792, Amy Rounds of Rehoboth (July 27, 1764—February 5, 1827). The oldest child of Jasper and Elizabeth, Rev. Jasper Adams, D. D., married Mercy Daniels[5] Wheeler (21). As to Dr Jasper Adams, see American Quarterly Register XII, 169; Thomas Dict. of Biog., 45; Jameson's Medway, 335.—Oliver and Elizabeth Adams had a daughter Amy or Anna who married Joseph[7] Richardson (21)
5. JOSEPH ADAMS, born 1626, of Braintree, eighth child of Henry, married Abigail Baxter, who died August 27, 1692. Their son Joseph, born October 24, 1654, married Hannah Bass, and had a son John, who by wife Susannah Boylston, had son John Adams, second president of the United States. Joseph and Abigail had also a son Capt. John Adams, born 1661, of Boston, who married Hannah Webb. Their son Samuel, who married Mary Fifield, was father of Samuel Adams, the patriot.

Authorities: Morse's Sherborn and Holliston; Tilden's Medfield; Jamesou's Medway, but their dates vary.

191. AARON[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born February 24, 1742, enlisted from Medfield as a soldier in the French and Indian war, and became very sick while on the service in the wilds of New York. He was nursed by a squaw whom he called his Indian mother, and whom years afterward he went to see. (Tilden's Medfield, 517). He became a physician of much repute in Medway, where he settled. He married November 5, 1767, Mary Kittredge, born 1749, of Andover, Mass., doubtless a daughter of Dr. John Kittredge, who removed from Tewksbury to North Andover in 1741, and whose descendants have been ever since prominent physicians in Andover. (Abbot's Andover, 150; Bailey's Andover, 157). Mary died in childbirth June 14, 1772. Dr. Wight married November 17, 1774, Mary Haven of Holliston, who died August 26, 1775. Dr. Wight again married January 17, 1776, Jemima Rutter of East Sudbury, who was born in 1760. In 1776 a small pox hospital was established on Noon Hill in Medfield, and some regulations concerning inoculation were adopted. Dr. Wight was in charge of the institution but it was closed the next year. (Tilden's Medfield 167, 170). Dr. Wight resided in West Medway, where his children were born. His name appears in the list of qualified voters of Medway in 1804. (Jameson's Medway, 65). He died February 8, 1813; his widow died March 16, 1833—both in Medway. The children of Dr. Wight regarded him with great veneration, and he looked upon them with much affection. In writing to his daughters who had married and moved West, he finished his letters with a picture, perhaps a landscape, improvised for the occasion. He was a natural artist. Dr. Wight was a celebrated surgeon and was sent for, for many miles around. He instructed all his children to prescribe for any ordinary ailment, and to dress wounds. He himself prepared a salve of wonderful healing properties, but the method of its preparation he disclosed to his children alone, instructing them to hand the secret down, through their children—an injunction which has been implicitly obeyed. A grand daughter, Jemima[7] Lathrop (948) relates this reminiscence: "His house was very large for that time, crowned with a belfry, and whenever those ten boys and girls wished a good time they would swing the bell and soon the house was alive with young people. The sons all played on the violin and some of the daughters also."

He was a posthumous child and prenatal influences seem to have induced a disposition to melancholy. In 1812—1820 he was town representative. He married Harriet Read, born in Claremont, N. H., in 1794. In 1811 he bought a lot corner of Main and South Streets, Medfield—the property now owned by his daughter, Mrs. Fowle. Daniel died in Medfield, September 2, 1852. Note. The Baxters: Lieutenant John Baxter of Braintree, was the father of Rev. Joseph Baxter (1676–May 2, 1745), Harvard 1693, the second minister of Medfield. Rev. Joseph married Mary Fiske (August 25, 1673—March 29, 1711) daughter of Rev. Moses and Sarah (Symmes) Fiske of Braintree. (Vinton's Symmes Memorial, 29; Fiske's Fiske Family, 187). Rev. Joseph's son John (1708–1788), married, 1732, Rebecca Fisher and had a daughter Mary, born 1737, who married, 1763, Thomas Mason of Medfield, and had a daughter who married a Read. These Reads who lived in Claremont, N. H., were parents of Harriet Read, above. John and Rebecca had a son, Captain John Baxter, who married Silence[5] (Wight) Adams, above.—Sarah Symmes, wife of Rev. Moses Fiske, aforesaid, had a brother Timothy Symmes, born 1683, who had a son Timothy born 1714. This last Timothy was father of John Cleves Symmes, born 1742, whose daughter Anna, born 1775, married William Henry Harrison, president of the United States. William Henry and Anna had a son John Scott Harrison, born 1804, father of Benjamin Harrison, the present president of the United States.

193. MOSES[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born October 30, 1745, was in the service in the war of the Revolution and held the position of Sergeant. He seems to have been much interested in the events of the day. A score of citizens of Medfield, himself included, did "indent and engage to enter our names for the Newes Papers printed at Boston and to go down for them weekly in our turns, and convey them to some convenient place in this town where we shall agree." This was September 15, 1777. On April 24, 1780, he married Sarah Tolman of Needham. He settled on his father's place in Medfield, but sold it to his brother Jonathan in 1807. He and his wife became members of the first parish church in 1802, but he was instrumental in the organization of the second or Orthodox Congregational Church, February 6, 1828, and both he and his wife were constituent members thereof. He died in Medfield March 4, 1829, and his widow died aged 74, April 3, 1833. Their children were born in Medfield. (Tilden's Medfield, 176, 227.)

416.—8. SARAH, born October 30, 1799, died in Medfield, December 11, 1799.

Note. These birth dates are taken from Henry Wight's Manuscript Genealogy, 12. Medfield records make Henry and Polly twins, and born March 31, 1787. By the same records Sarah was born October 5, 1799. I have received many variations of the above dates, but as Henry Wight's records are contemporaneous I have considered them reliable.

194. THANKFUL[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born December 8, 1747, married September 23, 1799, James Perrigo of Wrentham. She died childless January 10, 1824. James died aged 75, December 20, 1808, after a distressing and protracted illness in Wrentham.

SIMEON[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born March 20, 1750, studied at Harvard University and settled in West Woodstock, Conn., in the practice of his profession as a physician. He married Margaret Smith of Bellingham, March 17, 1772. His descendant Kate[8] Leland (1883), writes: "My great grandfather Simeon was a surgeon in the war of the Revolution and was at the battle of Bunker Hill. I have a very handsome gold pin which belonged to some British officer which was given to Dr. Wight and which his widow gave to my father." He seems afterward to have entered the naval service and was killed in an engagement with a British vessel. Henry Wight's Manuscript Genealogy, 10, says, "Doctor Simeon Wight of Woodstock died August 4, 1777, aged 27 years, at Chatham near Cape Cod." He had perhaps been mortally wounded in an engagement and had died on shore. His widow married Eleazar Fisher who lived in the upper part of West Woodstock village.

418.—2. SIMEON, born in West Woodstock, February 24, 1774.
419.—3. PELETIAH, born in West Woodstock, January 14, 1776.

Note. The date of birth of Simeon[6] (418) is given as above in Henry Wight's Manuscript Genealogy, 10: it is given February 4, 1774, by a granddaughter of this Simeon[6], who copied it from her grandfather's Bible; it is given September 24, 1774, in Woodstock records. Among authorities so respectable I have preferred the record of Henry Wight.

196. HENRY[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born May 26, 1752, entered Harvard College but intermitted his studies one year to serve in the army, and during 1781–2 to teach in the North School, Medfield. (Tilden's Medfield, 515). He graduated at Harvard in 1782 and began to study for the ministry. He was ordained over the Congregational Church and Society of Bristol, R. I., January 5, 1785, in connection with the dedication of a new house of worship. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. Thomas Prentiss, D. D., of Medfield (Tilden's Medfield, 468). It was published in Providence 1785, entitled "A sermon preached at the ordination of Rev. Henry Wight to the pastoral care of the Catholic Congregational Society in Bristol, R. I., January 5, 1785." (Sprague's Annals, I, 679). During the same year he preached a sermon in Medfield in the presence of his grandmother Margaret Wight (36) upon her one-hundredth birthday, having ridden all night to reach there in time. On June 21, 1789, in Little Compton, R. I., he married Alice Burrington, of Tiverton, R. I., born in 1762. She died in Bristol April 17, 1797. Henry married second March 6, 1799, Clarissa Leonard, born November 9, 1771, of Raynham, Mass., the ceremony being performed by her relative Rev. Perez Fobes, D. D. Mr. Wight was from 1793 until 1833 one of the fellows of Brown University, and in 1811 that college bestowed upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He continued sole pastor of the Bristol church until 1815, when he was furnished with a colleague. This same year he preached the sermon at the ordination of his son John Burt[6] Wight (420), in Wayland, Mass., passing through Sturbridge on the way to visit in the family of his brother David[5] Wight (184). On November 11, 1828, at his own request his connection with the church which had continued nearly 44 years was dissolved. During his ministry 238 persons were received into the church (McClintock & Strong's Cyclopædia, Supplement II, 919). Dr. Wight continued to reside in Bristol, occasionally officiating in the services of the sanctuary until his death which occurred in Bristol August 12, 1837. More than 52 years of his life were spent in the work of the ministry. "The labors of Dr. Wight were blessed in this town. He was a man of amiable disposition and devoted piety. He retained the affections and the confidence of the people until his death and his grave was bedewed with the tears of many who were brought into the Kingdom of the Redeemer under his ministrations." (American Quarterly Reg., XII, 265). To this day "Parson Wight" is mentioned with admiration and fervency by the people of that quaint old city where the years of his long life were passed. Dr. Wight is buried in the Bristol cemetery and on his headstone are recorded "With long life was he satisfied, and his end was peace," "Remember the words that I spake unto you while I was yet with you."

"Dr. Wight followed the good old custom of the Fathers of New England in keeping a daily record of events as they transpired that were of noticeable character. No occurrence of moment that has transpired about him to his knowledge for the last 70 years, it is believed, which may not be found faithfully recorded in his Diary. He loved and preached the doctrines of the Bible. Their practical influence on his own heart and life were remarkable. He was a man of meek and quiet temper, of truly catholic spirit. During his last years no book was so frequently seen on his table as the Bible. When deprived of meeting with the people of God on the Sabbath his custom was to read the Word, sing and pray in his private room. There his soul ripened for the purer worship of the sanctuary above in which he now participates." (Boston Recorder, XXII). "He kept a daily record for 70 years. He died in peace, leaving a widow and seven children." (Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict., 856). His manuscript volume "The Genealogy of Henry Wight. A Book of Records Concerning my Coevals and Primevals" begun May 22, 1777, and which now lies upon my desk, has enabled me to verify and correct many dates in the lives of his immediate relatives.

Dr. Wight was a good representative of the best type of New England character, physically, mentally and morally. He possessed a fine face, good features, clear complexion and handsome dark eyes. His figure was erect, his bearing noble and dignified, his manners kindly and courteous, and in habits of work he was industrious and methodical. He was a good Greek and Latin scholar, a fine mathematician, an excellent singer, a constant reader. Even in old age he read much aloud to his family, and sometimes watched the old year out by reading from the Bible and uttering a prayer. As a pastor Dr. Wight realized the ideal of the "good Shepherd." He visited much among his people, and having acquired some knowledge of medicine often ministered to their bodies while counseling their souls. To the parsonage the poor often went for medicine and food, the ignorant for knowledge and the afflicted for comfort. Not only in his own parish but in those of other churches he was revered and beloved.

The above reference to Dr. Wight's taste for medicine leads to the following extract from Browne's Trees of America, 157, published in 1856: "On the authority of Governor Charles Collins, of Newport, this species [Ailantus glandulosa] was brought from South America in about the year 1804, and was presented to General Andrew McCorrie of Portsmouth in Rhode Island. . . . In about the year 1810 Rev. Henry Wight procured a young shoot and planted near his house which has grown to a magnificent tree fifty-five feet in height with a trunk seven feet in circumference at a yard above the ground, and an ambitus or spread of branches of fifty feet."

Clarissa Wight inherited from her mother, Abigail Alden Leonard (see Note 2), a strong intellectual bias. It is said that upon her marriage to Zephaniah Leonard, Abigail promised her father that she would always devote one hour daily to reading—a promise which she kept through a busy life. The healthy results of this well kept promise are still observable among Abigail's many great-grandchildren. Clarissa took great interest in the affairs of the colonies during the revolutionary period and felt and manifested the tenderest sympathy for the soldiers returning sick and worn after the war was over. Through the years of her husband's pastorate she fulfilled the exacting duties of a minister's wife with the most untiring fidelity and zeal. Thousands who have been guests in her pleasant home will remember her genial manners and cordial welcome. She was of great intelligence and fine culture and took great delight in reading her Bible and in repeating passages from the old poets. She retained her mental powers to the last and took an intelligent interest in all that was passing about her. On the anniversary of her 70th birthday she sailed from New York to live with her children in Georgia, and for the last 23 years of her life she dwelt with her youngest daughter. She died at her said daughter's home at Chestnut Hill, Lawrenceville, Gwinnette County, Georgia, in her 93d year, September 15, 1864. Dr. Wight's children were all born in Bristol.

Note 1. The following inscription upon the tomb of Dr. Wight's first wife is No. 671 in Alden's Epitaphs, (IV. 65):

Kind stranger, stop, let reason be the clue
To moralize, while this cold stone you view.
Here death in icy arms confines that fair
Who once was lovely as the angels are.
But think not, stranger, ever to behold
A Christian's worth on sculptured marble told;
Ah, nor suffice it, if one mournful tear
Shall mix with mine in tender sorrow here.
Be silent, grief, my faith in Christ replies;
Behold, I see the sleeping dust arise!
That happy day shall banish all my pain;
Then shall we joyful meet, nor part again.

Note 2. The Leonards: The Leonards of Taunton and Raynham are descended from the extinct Lords Dacre, but there seems some confusion of Christian names, which prevents an exact statement of the line of descent. "Henry Leonard, eldest son of Richard Leonard, Lord Daere, came to America in 1626. Not returning before his father's death, the title descended to his brother Francis. Thomas, son of Francis, who succeeded to the title, was afterward created earl of Surrey. He died in 1715 in Kent." (Jarvis' Jarvis Family, 59). See also Clark's Norton, 85. The line to Clarissa Leonard as traced in Register V., 403, et seq., is as follows: James Leonard, son of Thomas Leonard who remained in England, died before 1691. He was of Taunton and Raynham. (Vinton's Giles Memorial, 279). James' son James, who died November 1, 1726, married October 29, 1675, Lydia Gulliver, who died July 24, 1705. James and Lydia had a son Stephen, born December 14, 1680, father of Zephaniah Leonard. This last married April 24, 1724, Hannah King, and she and her husband both died April 23, 1766. Their son Zephaniah Leonard (January 18, 1736—April 11, 1814), Yale 1758, married October 30, 1765, Abigail Alden (1000, Note). See Sanford's Raynham, 31, 47; Sanford's Abigail Alden Leonard. Zephaniah and Abigail had a daughter Clarissa, wife of Dr. Henry Wight.

Note 3. In 1746 the town of Bristol and several other towns on the east shore of Narragansett, were taken from Massachusetts, by the settling of the provincial line, and annexed to Rhode Island. The same year Bristol received an act of incorporation. (Am. Quart. Reg. XII, 265). The Catholic Congregational church, the first in Bristol, was organized May 8, 1687, and was incorporated in 1784, as the Catholic Congregational Society. Its roll of ministers to Dr. Wight is as follows:

NAME.	COLLEGE.	SETTLEMENT IN BRISTOL.	REMARKS.

(American Quarterly Register XII, 261, 265).

Note 4. The diary kept by Dr. Wight was famous in Bristol, and disputes about the final settlement of estates and about other important events were often arranged by reference to its pages. I make two extracts therefrom furnished me by Mary Hewson[7] Rowland (427) of Chicago. Under the date May 19, 1780, is a description of the famous "dark day": "Some rain, smoky, and a very dense fog or vapor, which caused an uncommon phenomenon. As the sun advanced to his meridian altitude, ye darkness increased till about 12½ o'clock, when it was not as bright as good moonlight. We were obliged to eat by candle-light, after which ye darkness dispelled by degrees 'till sunset, and in ye eve ye darkness came on again, which added to ye night was truly like Egyptian darkness. All nature seemed to be covered by a silent gloom, and was amazed at ye phenomenon." For a similar description of this same day, see Bailey's Andover, 387.—The following under date March 23, 1782, is commended without comment to Wight collegians: "Drank tea with C. M. Gray. We disputed whether it is of advantage for a student at college to be civilly conversant with the fair sex or not. We supposed it was."

197. JOB[5] WIGHT (Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born March 9, 1755, was a drummer in the company that marched from Medfield April 19, 1775, at the Lexington alarm. The company was in service twelve days. (Tilden's Medfield, 165). Job graduated at Harvard 1784, studied divinity and was for many years a Congregational missionary in Western New York, but never settled in the ministry. He died a bachelor at Saratoga, December 9, 1809. His qualifications as a preacher were not of high order. His eccentricities greatly impaired his usefulness and rendered almost valueless his respectable talents and learning. (Wight's Wight family, 31).

198. JOHN[5] WIGHT (John[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born March 29, 1736, married in Dedham, March 24, 1762, Elizabeth, born September 29, 1739, daughter of Josiah Reed of Sherborn. After the birth of his three eldest children in Medfield John moved into New Hampshire, settling on Lot 17, Range 8, in Dublin, where in 1771 he was taxed at £1.9.6. (Leonard's Dublin, 142). In 1772 he and his wife received their dismissal from the home church to the Dublin church. In 1776 he signed a declaration by which the subscribers solemnly promised and engaged at the risk of their lives and fortunes, with arms to oppose the proceedings of the British fleets and armies. (Leonard's Dublin, 19, 149). He was at Bennington battle in 1777 as nurse and subsequently saw a year's active service, although in no battle. (Leonard's Dublin, 150.) In 1785 he and his wife and daughter Elizabeth helped to organize the first Baptist church in Dublin. (Leonard's Dublin, 190, 191.) John died May 14, 1814, and his widow died in Medway, March 19, 1815 (Medway Records). Their six youngest children were born in Dublin.

They lived on the homestead of his father in West Franklin, Eli having bought out the other heirs. Eli joined the Franklin church in 1781 and his wife in 1797. Eli was very pious and orthodox, and wore knee buckles and a three cornered hat. Tamar died in Franklin March 1, 1821, and Eli died there November 1, 1835. Children born in Franklin. (Register, XLI, 39).

Their six eldest children are believed to have been born in Lenox, although there are no records of Wights in the town clerk's office in Lenox. Abner removed from Lenox to Monroe County, N. Y., in 1790, and settled as a farmer in Perrington. His sons Asa and James were born here, Asa being the first white child born in the town who grew to maturity. Abner died in October, 1844; his wife died June 30, 1849—both in Perrinton. Huldah was one of the constituent members of the First Congregational church in Perrinton in 1824. This last, by wife Mary, had a John (October 12, 1668—May 6, 1694) of Rehoboth, who by wife Sarah, had a single child John Perrin (March 8, 1692—February 28, 1731) of Rehoboth. He married 1716, Rachael Ide. John and Rachael had Jesse (January 24, 1726—January 15, 1801), who May 11, 1749, married another Rachael Ide. He was for 25 years town clerk of Rehoboth. Jesse and Rachael had a son Jesse (March 18, 1756—March 8, 1838), who August 9, 1779, married Abigail Hollister. Captain David (August 24, 1724—October 10, 1788), of Woodstock, had a son Jethniel, husband of Mrs. Prudence Wight (419).

214. JOEL[5] WIGHT (Seth[4], Ephraim[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born December 27, 1741, married May 30, 1768, Elizabeth Twitchell, born July 27, 1743, of Sherborn. The year of his marriage Joel removed from Medfield to Dublin, N. H., following by about a year his cousin, John[5] Wight (198). Joel's children were born in Dublin. Joel was one of the 23 voters of Dublin in 1770. (Leonard's Dublin 141). On January 1, 1776, he enlisted at Cambridge, Mass. with Captain Wadkins in Col. Phinney's regiment, to serve for one year. No other service is mentioned by him in April, 1818, in his application for a pension. His wife was among the members of the Church of Christ, Congregational, Dublin, in 1777 (Leonard's Dublin, 164) and is said to have been "a very pious good woman." She died in Dublin, April 19, 1800. On May 28, 1801, Joel married Mary, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Kenney) Mower, of Jaffray, N. H. (Cutter's Jaffray, 401), of whom her step-son, Seth[6] Wight (461) said she was a kind and faithful wife, and a good step-mother. In April, 1818, Joel, still living in Dublin, stated that he was totally blind. The next year he and his wife Mary (who in 1819 was 68 years of age) removed to Gilead, Me., to the house of his son Seth, where he died February 19, 1824. He was a shoemaker by trade. For the remarriage of his widow see Daniel[5] Wight (142).

Joseph, son of this last, married Elizabeth Holbrook, for whose second marriage see 1084, Note. Joseph and Elizabeth had a son Esquire Joseph Twitchell of Sherborn, born February 13, 1718–9, who married June 28, 1739, Deborah, daughter of Joseph Fairbanks of Sherborn, and had fourteen children. The second child Joseph, born November 27, 1741, married November 13, 1766, Mary Holbrook, and settled in Dublin. Reuben and Sally had a son Return Wilder Twitchell, born September 17, 1810, husband of Hannah Prentice[5] Wight (1908).—The third child of Esquire Joseph Twitchell was Elizabeth, wife of Joel[5] Wight, above. Morse's Sherborn and Holliston, 249, 251, should be corrected.

Y.—During his residence in Fairfield, Caleb changed the spelling of his name to White, which his descendants have continued. Two reasons have been given why Caleb made this change; one that he thought the name Wight too common, the other that every one spelled the name White. With this latter reason the whole Wight family can sympathize.

Note 1. The Puffers: George Poffer of Braintree, now Quincy, received a grant there in February, 1640 and died soon after. "The widow Poffer dyed the 12 mo. 18: 76, aged." (Bates' Braintree Records, 640). They had at least two sons:

1. JAMES POFFER, was aged "about 68" at his death in Braintree July 25, 1692. He married February 14, 1655, Mary Luddeu of Weymouth. (Bates' Braintree Records, 716). Their oldest child, Richard Poffer, born in Braintree 14:1:1657, married at Dorchester, March 23, 1681, Ruth Everett (239 Note), and removed to Wrentham, where he died January 3, 1723. These last had William Poffer born July 17, 1686, who married May 25, 1710, Elizabeth Guild of Wrentham (Register IV, 84, 85) and had a son William, born March 9, 1712, died in Medway about 1754. This William Poffer married August 30, 1733, Rebecca Ware (36, Note; 153, Note 1), of Wrentham, and had William, born April 24, 1734, died in Mouson January 14, 1809. This last William married February 27, 1753, Mary Wetherell, of Nortou, and had Mary Puffer, wife of Daniel Wight, above.—William and Elizabeth (Guild) Poffer had also a daughter Elizabeth, born 1716, who married April 1737, John Hancock, ancestor of Maj. Gen. Winfield S. Hancock.
2. MATTHIAS POFFER, died May 9, 1717. He married 18: 1: 1662, Rachel Farnsworth, who with her oldest child, was killed by the Indians at Mendon, July 10, 1675. Her daughter, Esther Poffer, married June 2, 1697, William Sumner of Milton—great-grand-parents of Charles Sumner, senator of the United States. Matthias "was a grand old man, but there are few of his descendants bearing his name, although there are many and some distinguished in American history who carry his blood." (Register).

Note 2. Ludden: Mary Ludden, born in Weymouth, December 17, 1636, was daughter of James Ludden—possibly the ferryman Ludham or Luddam of Prince's Chronology, 407; Winthrop's New England, 1, 92; Drake's Boston, 145, 146. Mary's name is called Swalden in Bates' Braintree Records, 716, but the error is still older: Register, XXII, 288. The same siruame occurs correctly in Vinton's Vinton Memorial, 333.

Note 3. Guild: John Guild, supposed to have been born in England about 1616, was admitted to the Dedham, Mass., church in 1640, and married June 24, 1645, Elizabeth Crooke of Roxbury. She died August 31, 1669; he died October 4, 1682. See his will Burleigh's Guild Family, 25. Of his children were Samuel and John:

1. SAMUEL GUILD (November 7, 1647—January 1, 1730), married November 29, 1676, Mary Woodcock, and had John (October 2, 1687—June 15, 1767), of Walpole. This last married Abigail Robinson of Rehoboth, and had a son Samuel Guild of Walpole. He married Mehetabel Clapp, October 23, 1764, and was father of Aaron Guild, born February 10, 1768, a farmer of Walpole, who married Synthe[7] Smith (20). Aaron died January 25, 1831; Synthe[7] died April 15, 1842. Their son Samuel[8] Guild, born February 12, 1806, married November 29, 1832, Orra Fisher of Walpole. Samuel and Orra were parents of William Fisher[9] Guild, born November 20, 1839, a farmer of Medfield, who married Elizabeth Maria[8] Plimpton (186).

2. JOHN GUILD (November 29, 1619—January 24, 1723) deacon of the Wrentham church, married in Dedham May 22, 1677, Sarah Fisher, born October 27, 1658, daughter of Anthony and Joanna (Fuxon) Fisher of Dedham. Anthony was married September 7, 1617, and was brother of Lydia Fisher (7, Note 2). John and Sarah Guild had a daughter Elizabeth, born July 7, 1685, who married William Poffer (Note 1); and a son, John Guild, born November 7, 1690, who married June 11, 1711, Mercy Foster. John and Mercy who lived at Wrentham, had a son Ebenezer (July 31, 1724—May 29, 1790), deacon of the Baptist church, Franklin, husband of Margaret Pond (Harris' Pond Genealogy, 23). Ebenezer and Margaret had a son Ebenezer (August 16, 1747—September 26, 1822) of Franklin, who married December 3, 1772, Lydia Whittemore of Needham. This last Ebenezer had a son Ebenezer, born January 23, 1786, a hatter at Oxford, who married September 22, 1811, Hephzibah Russell. Ebenezer and Hephzibah had a daughter Emily Amanda Guild (July 12, 1812—April 24, 1888), who April 7, 1833, married Alvan Greenleaf Underwood of Milford, born at West Woodstock, Conn., April 15, 1808, died July 6, 1885. These last had a son Albert Gallatin Underwood, husband of Sarah Smith[8] Wight (1880). Correct Burleigh's Guild Family, 148.

Note 4. Wetherell: William Wetherell made in 1669 the first settlement within the present limits of Norton, Mass., on the easterly side of Winneconuet pond. Tradition says that he came to America as cabin boy with William Dunn, who was master of the vessel and a proprietor of Taunton. His name appears in 1643 in Taunton among the males between the ages of 16 and 60, subject to military duty (Register IV, 259). For his connection with the Taunton iron works in 1655, see Register XLI, 85. His will dated August 15, 1691, was probated November 18, 1691, (Clark's Norton, 10). His son William Wetherell, born about 1650, died about 1729, lived in Norton near the outlet of Winneconnet pond. He married in Taunton March 14, 1681, Elizabeth, daughter of Jeremiah Newland. She was born in Taunton May 18, 1659 (Register XVII, 87). Her father died in Taunton July 25, 1681. William and Elizabeth had a son William who lived in Freetown. I conjecture him to be the Wetherell who married Mary Pain of Freetown, and that this couple are the William and Mary Wetherell who were parents of Mary Wetherell born April 13, 1732, wife of William Poffer, Note 1 (Norton Records).—Mary Pain was daughter of John and Rebecca (Davis) Pain of Freetown. Rebecca Davis was daughter of William and Mary (Makepeace) Davis. Mary Makepeace was daughter of William and Ann (Johnson) Makepeace of Freetown and grand-daughter of Thomas Makepeace of Boston (Register XV, 236; XX, 213).

235. DINAH[5] WIGHT (Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born April 15, 1758, married May 30, 1781, Jonathan Frost of Westboro.

236. EPHRAIM[5] WIGHT (Ephraim[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born February 25, 1754, was associated in war and business with his father. The Wilbraham records note the publication June 25, 1774, of the marriage intentions of Ephraim Wight, Jr. and Patience Cleaveland. His marriage to Patience is recorded in the Palmer records as taking place December 1, 1774. There is a deed in Springfield records of a land purchase in Ludlow, Mass., dated April, 1775, by Ephraim Wight Jr., cordwainer, of Wilbraham. For his military service and other land purchases see 110. Between 1782 and February, 1784, Ephraim[5] and Elisha Cleaveland (perhaps Deacon Elisha Cleveland whose tombstone in the "Sodom" graveyard near the Gates place gives his death March 19, 1821), purchased and operated the Weller Mills in Westfield, Mass., though Ephraim probably retained his Monson residence. In February, 1784, he sold out his interest in the Weller Mills. As stated at 110 Ephraim[5] received a deed from his father of all interest in the Gates property on January 5, 1786. On February 7, 1788, Ephraim "White" conveys to Samuel Borden the Gates property—the last conveyance by Ephraim[5] on the Springfield records. Soon after this transfer Ephraim removed to Chester, Vermont, for a short time and then returned to Ludlow. His history for a while becomes quite uncertain, His wife died about 1802 on the Stephen Lyon place in Ludlow. Ephraim is believed to have married again but the particulars are not known. The marriage was unhappy, there were disagreements about property and Ephraim and his youngest son Ephraim[6] left the East for good and emigrated to Ohio, "to win a horse or lose the saddle," as Ephraim[5] expressed his errand. The subsequent glimpes of these two Ephraims are few. On November 16, 1812, our hero writes to his son-in-law Ezra Hoag from Roxbury, Ohio: "If you send any letters direct them to the town of Warterford [Waterford?] and I can get them sooner than if they are directed to Roxbury for then they will be carried to Marietta. . . . Ephraim has bought rising of thirty acres of land which is accommodated pretty well with living water and he has paid for it and is doing well." The writer adds that he "saw Ephraim two weeks ago." At this time Ephraim[6] was about 22 years old. Later than this period nothing positively is known of these Ephraims. By some of their descendants it is said that the father died in Ohio and the son moved to California. By Alanson Ely[7] Wight (1262) born in 1812, a grandson of Ephraim[5], I am told, "I have always understood that grandfather was a physician and that he and uncle Ephraim died in Ohio, both of yellow fever." Sarah[7] Swart (521) another grandchild states that Ephraim[5] was a physician. My attempts to penetrate the mystery of the later years of these Ephraims have been failures.

Captain David and Anna lived and died in Dedham, and their children were born there. Anna died January 31, 1785, her husband died in his 45th year, April 19, 1776. The inscriptions upon their tombstones in Dedham are preserved in Hill's Dedham Records II, 301, 302; but there is an error on the tombstone or in the book as to Anna's age.

The family lived until 1768 in Dedham, but I cannot trace them further. In Joseph Wight's will, made April 10, 1780, Miriam is called his "late" daughter, and by the same instrument it would seem that but one of her children was then living.

They both united with the Dedham church April 17, 1763, but removed soon after to Rutland, Mass., where are recorded the births of their seven eldest children except Eleazar. In 1780 the family removed to Norwich, Mass., where Joseph was selectman in 1788–9. He died September 13, 1809, and his widow died December 4, 1818.

Note. The Everetts: Richard Everett, one of the founders of Dedham in 1636, died July 3, 1682; by wife Mary he had among others two children:

1. Captain John Everett, born probably in Watertown, married May 13, 1662, Elizabeth Pepper of Roxbury, and died June 17, 1715. His son John (June 9, 1676—March 20, 1751) of Dedham married Mercy Brown, January 3, 1700. Among their children were Ebenezer Everett (August 5, 1707—June 19, 1778), father of Oliver Everett, father of Hon. Edward Everett; and Eleazar Everett (August 10, 1712—1786). This last married August 12, 1735, Judith Dean, and had a daughter Judith Everett, wife of Joseph[6] Wight, above. (Register XIV, 215).

Joseph Guild's company, Colonel Greaton's regiment, who assembled on the alarm, April 19, 1775, and was credited with 13 days' service. The births and baptisms of his six eldest children are recorded in Dedham. In 1792 he removed to Norwich, Mass., where the births of his two youngest children are found. Note. Thomas' handwriting in 1786, as executor of his father's will:

247. SARAH[6] WIGHT (Joseph[5], Joseph[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born October 1, 1753, is not mentioned in her father's will in 1780. Some Sarah Wight of Dedham, otherwise unlocated, married there December 3, 1789, Ebenezer Gay. "Mrs. Sarah Gay, relict of Mr. Ebenezer Gay," died in Dedham aged 89 years, February 21, 1843, (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 254)—the dates corresponding. Ebenezer Gay died February 23, 1824, aged 78.

248. NATHANIEL[6] WIGHT (Benoni[5], Nathaniel[4], Joseph[3], Henry,[2] Thomas[1]), born August 20, 1753, married in Wrentham, March 9, 1775, Mehetabel Fuller. Prior to the battle of Bunker Hill he enlisted for eight months in Captain Wheelock's company, Colonel Ward's Massachusetts regiment, but in May, 1775, his brother Jabez took his place. In 1788 he removed from Wrentham to Barnard, Vermont, where he died October 11, 1832, (October 17, 1832, in Wight's Wight family 72). His son Benoni was administrator of his estate. Mehetabel died in February, 1822.

CHILDREN.

558.—1. BENONI, born in Wrentham, January 20, 1776.
559.—2. LUCY, born in Wrentham, November 30, 1777, died in Wrentham, August 4, 1778.

561.—4. BETSEY, born April, 1786.
562.—5. RHODA, born August, 1788, was living in 1832. Nothing further known.

250. JABEZ[6] WIGHT (Benoni[5], Nathaniel[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born December 1, 1756, while living in Wrentham in May, 1775, substituted for his brother Nathaniel in the eight months' service in Captain Wheelock's company. He was discharged in December, 1775, and in January 1776, enlisted for one year in Captain Burr's company of the same regiment, Colonel Ward's. He was present at the evacuation of Boston, March 17, 1776, at the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776, and at the battle of Harlem Heights, October 12, 1776. He was discharged at White Plains. He removed to Barnard, Vermont. In March, 1821, he stated that he had no family. He died about 1824.

251. JONATHAN[6] WIGHT (Benoni[5], Nathaniel[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 7, 1758, enlisted at Wrentham in June, 1778, for 9 months in Captain Wheeler's company, of Colonel Nixon's regiment, and was discharged at West Point. He was out also for three tours in the militia. "By the explosion of a gun he lost the use of one hand, but does not say that it happened in the service." He moved to Barnard, Vt. In his application for a pension in June, 1818, while living at Barnard, he made no mention of wife or children. He was living in 1824.

256. ABIGAIL[6] WIGHT (Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born May 6, 1775, may be the Abigail Wight of Dedham, who died there February 17, 1811. Otherwise she is unknown.

257. SAMUEL[6] WIGHT (Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 30, 1777, married April 6, 1821, Lucy Bacon, of Dedham. They had no children. I find as yet no further record of them.

259. MIRIAM[6] WIGHT (Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born October 18, 1780, married December 18, 1805, Captain Asa Newell, of Natick. These names in the certificate of intention filed in Natick, December 2, 1805, are Captain Asa Newhall and Mariam Wight.—The Dedham Church record calls the groom Capt. Asa Newell of Natick, and states that the minister received two dollars for performing the ceremony. (Hill's Dedham Records, II, 115). The family went to New Hampshire.

261. JOSEPH[6] WIGHT (Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 27, 1784, married Hannah Davis and lived in Charlestown, Mass. Nothing further known.

CHILDREN.

563.—1. JOSEPH LUTHER, born
564.—2. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, born
565.—3. HANNAH ELIZABETH, born nothing told.

Note. These children are not arranged according to age and there may be others

263. THOMAS[6] WIGHT (Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 29, 1788, married, by church records, June 14, 1821, by town records June 17, 1821, Sarah Morse, of Walpole. I know nothing further.

267. DANFORTH PHIPPS[6] WIGHT (Ebenezer[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born February 8, 1792, Harvard 1815, studied medicine and entered upon the practice in Barnstable, but returned to Dedham in 1842, and resided at his father's home, unmarried, until his death, June 8, 1874. He is buried in the old cemetery in Dedham. Dr. Wight was greatly interested in genealogical pursuits, and was an early friend and patron of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society. He was also loyal to Dedham, the town of his ancestors, and was called upon as final authority upon its archaeology and genealogy. He prepared for Mann's Annals of Dedham, a catalogue of the natives of Dedham who had graduated at Harvard University. The same list is noticed in the Register II. 224, and IV, 354. But Dr. Wight is especially interesting to us as the historian of our family, the pioneer in the work of rescuing from oblivion the early bearers of our family name. This to him pleasant task he entered upon about half a century ago, and published the result of his researches in 1848, in a little volume entitled "Memoir of Thomas Wight of Dedham, Mass., with genealogical notices of his descendants, from 1637 to 1840," a volume very favorably mentioned in the Register III, 404. Dr. Wight's loyalty to his name and lineage was absorbing. It was evident in letters written by him to my father long before my birth, it stands forth in the pages of this little manual, it is conspicuous in the correspondence which I had with him when he was over four score years of age. Whatever of virtue or merit these present pages may contain, is due to the advice which his courtesy rendered, and to the enthusiasm which his spirit aroused.

It was upon the suggestion of Dr. Wight that John Langdon Sibley, Librarian of Harvard University, worked up into biographical sketches the accumulated material in his possession, relating to the early graduates of Harvard. Hence arose those mines of genealogical lore—Sibley's Harvard Graduates, three volumes of which are published. See Vol. I. p. vii.

268. CATHARINE[6] WIGHT (Ebenezer[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born August 28, 1798, married October 28, 1828, Benjamin Franklin Keyes, of Westford, Mass., who was born March 7, 1801, resided in Dedham and died there April 8, 1858 (Keyes' Keyes Family, 160; Hodgman's Westford, 458). The following children were born in Andover: Mary[7] Ames, born November 19, 1782; Nathan[7] Ames, born February 11, 1785; Stephen[7] Ames, born April 14, 1787; John[7] Ames, born April 8, 1792; Frederick[7] Ames, born August 12, 1800.

295. DANIEL[6] WIGHT (John[5], John[4], Daniel[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born , 1761, lived in what is now called South Penobscot near the Southern bay until about 1795, when he took land near the Blue Hill line and built him a farm house preparatory to marriage. A few days before that event the house was burned, presumably by an incendiary who coveted the site. Near the ruins Daniel erected a temporary cabin and in March, 1796, married Abigail Perkins. He quickly completed a permanent home upon the old site which the family occupied until 1837, when it was again burned. In the loss of family records which then occurred the entire Wight family to this day is a loser. The same spot was again built upon by Daniel's oldest son, and the house stood until it was the third time consumed in November, 1886, never again to be rebuilt. Daniel died October 31, 1818; his widow died November 13, 1840. In Penobscot were born all their

Note. Abigail Perkins was daughter of Daniel and Abigail Perkins, who settled in Penobscot from Old York, Me., in 1779. This is probably the Daniel Perkins born 1754, who married Abigail Penny. (Wheeler's Castine, 206). Daniel was, I conjecture, a descendant of Jacob Perkins of Old York, some of whose sons removed to Castine and Penobscot. (Upham's Upham Family, 53).

I owe an especial obligation to this Mr. Farlow, who at my request and at his expense, made much investigation in England, and especially on the Isle of Wight, in my behalf. Whatever good result this book shows in the tracing of our English ancestry, is mainly due to influences which he set in motion.—Residence, Newton.

He was continued in the service by successive re-enlistments until November, 1779, when he was taken prisoner and kept in confinement at New York until November, 1780. Being then exchanged he re-enlisted and was discharged as a corporal after four years service. He was present, it is stated, at the battle of Bunker Hill and at the surrender of Burgoyne. I am also informed that Joseph Wight was an assistant surgeon on shipboard at some period during the war where he learned to perform simple surgical operations. During his later life he was a practicing physician of the herbalist school, and is distinguished by his descendants as Dr. Joseph. He married in Wrentham, August 4, 1783, Olive Mann of that place who was born in Worcester, January 17, 1764. The next year the couple removed to Otisfield, and lived for a time north of Dr. Joseph's father on the road leading to Holden's Mills. In 1799 Dr. Joseph resided in Raymond where he died November 27, 1846. His widow died in Casco (formerly Raymond), April 28, 1867, aged more than 103 years.

Note. "Mark Tapley" (153) has sent me a sketch of "Uncle Tom Wight," from which I extract an incident concerning his domestic discipline, and one concerning his poetic tastes: One cold wintry morning, having business out of town which promised to occupy the entire day, he called his son Sam and ordered him, it being Saturday, to split a quantity of fire-wood to last over the Sabbath. Upon his late return in the evening, the father perceived his direction had been neglected and no wood had been prepared. Taking no present notice of the disobedience he ate his supper, lighted his pipe, and sat for a long time in deep meditation by the kitchen fire. Meanwhile the boys sought their beds and were wrapped in sleep. Uncle Tom then placing his pipe in the oven mouth, went to the stairway and in a voice of loud authority directed Sam to dress himself and come down. The lad soon appeared and inquired his father's wants. "Take that ax," said his father, "go out to the wood pile and strike forty blows on the big oak log." Sam proceeded as ordered, but after striking thirty-nine blows, ran back with a mischievous twinkle to his bed and his dreams. For a long while the father sat in profound gravity, eyeing the leaping flames and smoking his pipe. Then going to the stairs, he again bade Sam to dress and come down. The youth, rubbing the slumber from his eyes, re-appeared and inquired what was wanted now. "Take your axe, go out to the wood-pile and strike that other blow," said the offended parent. The lesson of strict obedience having thus been taught and learned, Sam slept in peace.—Uncle Tom was passionately fond of poetry, his beloved authors being Pope and Thomson. He admired Dr. Young for his breadth of thought and loftiness of sentiment, but believed him too gloomy except for those doing penance. As age crept on and his eye dimmed, that neighbor was welcome indeed, who stepped in to read aloud Uncle Tom's favorite poem "The Seasons." Then would his aged eye light up, his eloquent face increase in expressiveness, his intent head nod in eager sympathy, his bending form lean forward upon his staff to catch the utmost word. Dwelling thus in the atmosphere of exalted thought, Uncle Tom when he was nearly ninety, went "to the other living called the dead."

Lois died at Augusta August 7, 1867, and her husband at the same place December 7, 1867. They had three children, one of whom

Susan[7], was an invalid. None of them survived. Frederick Dearborn[7] Wight (771) writes: "Frederick W. Dearborn stood about 6½ feet high and was perfect in proportion. I have heard my father say that at all the old time militia trainings, musters, barn raisings, log rollings and wrestling matches, they never found the man that could lay my Uncle Fred upon his back. Uncle and aunt took the temperance pledge when young, between themselves, before temperance pledges were in vogue, and their pledge was never violated; they were life workers in the temperance cause. They were great Methodists and great singers, and long took the lead in the old-fashioned Methodist meetings and choir meetings at Augusta." They were both strong patriots and were abolitionists at an early day. (See the Dearborns, in Chase's History of Chester, N. H., 503, et seq.)

About 1832, with his little family, he moved into Richland County, Ohio, and bought 160 acres in Bloomfield township, in the woods. He plied his trade in Mansfield, same county, about a year, meanwhile building a house upon his farm. Upon its completion he moved thereto, still working at the bench and clearing his land. About 1835 he sold this farm and bought 80 acres in Sandusky township in the woods. He cleared this land and lived upon his farm until 1852 when he sold out and moved with his family to Elkhart County, Indiana. From there in less than a year he moved to Newbury, La Grange County, Indiana, where he and his wife both died, the former March 23, 1855, and the latter October 31, 1861. I., to Milford in 1787, with others. In 1791 these intruding elements were warned out of Milford—a common caution by our thrifty New England ancestry to avoid possibility of supporting paupers. Ruth's death as a widow, September 15, 1839, aged 69 years and 3 months, is recorded in Milford.

354. ELIZABETH[6] WIGHT (John[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married a Colvin and was living in 1803, when her father's will was made.

355. DORCAS[6] WIGHT (John[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married John Fiske, and was dead in 1803, when her father's will was made. That instrument mentions as her children her daughter Ellis Wight[7] Fiske (of whom I know nothing), and her son Hopkins[7] Fiske. This last was born in Plainfield, Conn., May 11, 1779, removed to Abington, Pa., about 1839–40, and died in Benton, Pa., December 26, 1855. Hopkins had a son Silas[8] Fiske of Saunders, Neb., whose daughter, Mrs. Joseph Carpenter, lives in Waverly, Pa. A daughter of Hopkins[7] Fiske, Mrs. Holmes, of Scott, Pa., has three daughters, one of whom is believed to be Mrs. Lewis Newton.

356. AARON[6] WIGHT (John[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born October 31, 1758, was ordered out about November 1, 1776, for two months under Captain Ralph in Col. Atwell's regiment of militia for the defence of Warwick Neck, R. I., threatened by British vessels. In March, May and August, 1777, he was drafted for tours of one month each, and stationed on coast guard at Warwick Neck. During the last of these tours a company of British mariners was surprised and taken prisoner. In August, 1778, he was drafted for one month, joining the regiment of Col. Kimball, during Gen. Sullivan's campaign, and stationed in the vicinity of Newport, R. I. In the summer of 1779, he engaged for a year in a company of artillery commanded by Lieutenant Medbury, and attached to the militia regiment of Col. Kimball, and was stationed consecutively, at Newport, Fort Middleton on Rhode Island and at Providence. In October, 1781, he was drafted under Captain Pierce for one month, and stationed with Col. Olney's regiment at Newport. A brother whose name is not mentioned was also in Col. Kimball's regiment in 1779. Returning from service he resided in Scituate and married Priscilla Dorr, born June 26, 1761, said to be a relative of Gov. Dorr. Aaron's children were born in Scituate. He received a farm from his father and supported his parents until their death. This farm, however, he was obliged to sell to pay the other heirs their portions from their father. He then bought him a farm in Coventry, R. I. About 1815 he emigrated to Pennsylvania, residing principally at Abington, Luzerne County, where he had a farm. There were large emigrations of Scituate Wights to this region. Here his wife died January 24 (some say 22) 1818. Here also he died March 27, 1837 "at 15 minutes to 11 p. m." at the residence of his son Owen. He was a member of the Baptist church—a reputable, honorable man.

357. SILENCE[6] WIGHT (John[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born December 20, 1750, married in 1790, John Potter of Scituate, born January 6, 1767, died April 21, 1811. In 1845 she was abiding in Hopeville, R. I., with her nephew Bowen[7] Angell (358) and died childless April 16, 1848.

Note. The Potters: Charles E. Potter's Potter Families does not afford complete assistauce in discovering the early Potter families in Rhode Islaud. I cannot therein trace Ruth Potter (70) or Mary Potter, (70 Note.) Tenty Potter (172) may be a desceudant of Content Potter, born in Warwick, R. I., October 2, 1680, whose wife was Elizabeth. (Potter's Potter Families, Part 10, 1). Conteut was the youngest son of John Potter, born Portsmouth, R. I., 1639, by his wife Ruth Fisher. John Potter was son of Robert Potter, born in England.—Coutent Potter's oldest brother Robert, born in Warwick, R. I., March 5. 1665, was father of Robert, who married April 3, 1729, Catherine Johnson, and died April 4, 1758. Robert aud Catherine had a son William, born 1732, who married Haunah Corey. These last had a son Burton (August 24, 1779—July 19, 1820), who March 31, 1805, married Phebe Hill. Burton and Phebe were parents of Polly Potter, boru in Scituate, October 23, 1806, who married February 24, 1829, Barton Beunett and had a daughter Lydia M. Bennett, wife of William Harris[9] Wight, who is son of Olney P.[8] Wight (1768).—Robert aud Catherine (Johnson) Potter had another son Captain John Potter (November 17, 1734—March 24, 1811) who married Eicy Ralph. These last were parents of John Potter, husband of Silence[6] Wight, above.

There seems to be some difficulty about the Colvins at 175, and the Potters. According to a receipt in the Scituate Probate records (see 70) Ruth[5] Wight (175) was the wife of Peter Colvin. According to D. H. Remington, Esq., town clerk of Scituate, Ruth married July 16, 1747, Moses Colviu, aud had a daughter Ruth, who married Arnold Potter, June 11, 1778. According to James E.[8] Roberts of Scituate (362) Ruth[5] Wight married Benoui Colvin—discrepancies which can only be reconciled by presuming that she married all three!—If Potter's Potter Families, Part 10, p. 4, is correct, Ruth Colvin and her children at 175 do uot belong in the Wight family at all. He there states that Curnell J. Potter (April 21, 1755—April 7, 1821) married, 1777, Ruth, daughter of Moses and Naomi Colviu. Ruth's children are there given as Stephen, Elizabeth and Delana. I trust this matter may be more satisfactorily investigated.

358. CHLOE[6] WIGHT (John[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born May 4, 1775, married an Angell and had one child. She married second Williams Hines, born December 2, 1777, a descendant of Roger Williams. He was a man of poetic nature and of active piety. He and his wife were members of the Baptist church, Scituate. She died in Scituate September 26, 1836, her husband surviving.

359. WAITY[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married John Field and was dead at the date of her father's will in 1807. This instrument seems to mention Potter[7] and Esther[7] Field as her children. The family is said to have settled in Enfield, Conn., but a personal examination of the records there fails to disclose them except that I find John, son of Pedajah and Abigail Field, was born in Enfield, June 7, 1751.

360. RUTH[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married Michael McDaniel. She was living in 1825 at Chenango Point, N. Y., with one of her sons. She had several sons in prosperous circumstances.

361. REUBEN[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , owned a fertile farm near New Lebanon Springs, New York, but being led by his wife and two sons to join the Shakers he turned in all his property. Becoming dissatisfied in a few years he left them but his wife would not accompany him. His sons, however, soon followed his example, and in 1830 were farmers in good circumstances in New Lebanon. Reuben went into Greene County, N. Y., remarried and raised a large family. He was living in 1830.

362. SARAH[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born June 1, 1755, married August 10, 1776, William Roberts, born September 2 (O. S.), 1750, son of George and Abigail (Collins) Roberts. William died in Killingly, Conn., February 22, 1837, his widow died in Scituate, R. I., August 25, 1838.

3. Anna[7] Roberts, born November 23, 1783, died September 28, 1824. She married Phineas Briggs and left ten children.
4. Thomas[7] Roberts, born May 1, 1786, left his home August 12, 1806, sailed from Warren, R. I., as chief mate of a schooner bound for Cuba. Sailing from there to return in 1806, he and his vessel were never heard from.
5. William[7] Roberts (June 28, 1789—August 13, 1867). He was the author of the record of the descendants of William[5] Wight (172), which, through the courtesy of his son Dr. Roberts, of Scituate, has been transcribed and arranged for this book. Mr. Roberts has uniformly spelled our sirname White. I presume this spelling has become so fixed in the families of the brothers of Sarah[6] Wight, who removed into New York state, that all knowledge of any other orthography has been lost, and their descendants are therefore probably forever untraceable. William Roberts had a son
   1. James E.[8] Roberts, born about 1815, a respected physician in Scituate.
6. Moses[7] Roberts, born August 14, 1791, died at Cross Plains, Ripley Co., Indiana, May 3, 1835. Wife Ann, daughter of Amaziah Young. Eight children.

9. Nathan[7] Roberts, July 3, 1800—July 27, 1806.

363. NATHAN[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , was a soldier during the Revolution, participating in most of the principal battles, including Yorktown. After this war he married Phebe Spencer and had one daughter, Waity[7] Wight, who in 1854 was living in Providence, R. I., in her second widowhood. When the Indian war northwest of the Ohio began in 1793 Nathan joined the army. In the disastrous defeat of Gen. St. Clair, Nathan was present and ran twenty miles with a comrade, pursued by Indian foes, to reach a fort. Nathan's face was discolored until death by a charge of powder shot from an Indian's gun upon his retreat. Nathan participated in Gen. Wayne's subsequent victory which ended this war. Nathan is said to have died in 1806 in Enfield at the house of his sister, Mrs. Field (359). I cannot find in Enfield any record of this event. "Nathan Wight and Phebe his wife, applied for certificate for this town [Scituate] to own them as residents therein, February 19, 1789." (Scituate Records.)

364. WILLIAM[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , settled in Enfield, so 'tis said, and raised a large family. He was living in 1830. I find no trace of him or of his family in Enfield.

365. BENJAMIN[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born about 1761, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution and a pensioner under Act of Congress of 1831. He spent a great part of his life in Foster, R. I., where he married and brought up a family of daughters who also had descendants. He moved to Brooklyn, Conn., in 1817, where his wife died, and where he died in November, 1839, aged 78 years. He may be the Benjamin White in Cowell's Spirit of '76 in Rhode Island, 117.

366. POTTER[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , was five years old when his mother died in 1773. When of sufficient age he was put out to live with Joseph Fiske. Being dissatisfied with his lot, when he was 12 years old he ran away and enlisted on a United States armed vessel then at Providence. After the war he married and went to Plattsburg, N. Y., where his wife died. He had 12 children, with one of whom, a daughter, he was living in Albany in 1830.

367. MOSES[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , went when a youth to live with his brother Reuben at New Lebanon. When about 21 he returned to Rhode Island and shipped out of Providence for Surinam. He contracted yellow fever at Surinam and dying on the return voyage his grave is in the ocean. "Moses Wight of Scituate, laborer, departed this life at sea sometime in January, 1797, and William Roberts appointed administrator March 13, 1797." (Scituate Records.)

368. ESTHER[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married Eleazar Fiske and had children. She died in 1836.

369. RUFUS[6] WIGHT (William[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , settled in Coventry, R. I., and had children. He died January 30, 1836, "aged about 50 years." "Rufus Wight had a son Gilbert."

370. LEVINA[6] WIGHT (Peter[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born , married April 15, 1782, Simeon Bowen.

371. SAMUEL[6] WIGHT (Benjamin[5], Benjamin[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born June 13, 1752, lived all his life in Scituate, except three years passed in Warwick, R. I. He was a soldier during a portion of the Revolutionary war. On the alarm caused by the British advance towards Lexington he volunteered to go to Boston but returned after two days march. Soon after there was an alarm for him to go to Bristol. In the fall of 1776 when the British with vessels and troops threatened the coast towns of Rhode Island he was called out to serve in Captain Wilbur's company of militia. In the spring of 1777 he served in Captain Knight's company and in August 1778, during Sullivan's campaign he served again in the same company as a substitute for his father. His service each time was a tour of one month and called him to Bristol, Warwick and Newport. In the summer of 1779 and in the succeeding winter he was out for tours of one month each with Captain Harrenden of Warwick. In August, 1780, and in the winter of 1781 he served two tours of 15 days each at Warwick under Captain Harrenden, and also 15 days in April, 1781, with Lieutenant Field. In June, 1781, he served nine days at Newport with Captain Tyler. During all these tours he was attached to Colonel Waterman's regiment. Samuel was married twice. Of the first marriage were, it is believed, several children. He married second March 31, 1817, Sarah D. Budlong, who was born February 27, 1793, and died August 17, 1829. Samuel died November 24, 1834. It is presumed both died in Scituate. Samuel was administrator of the estate of his son Silvanus. Samuel's will, which was dated July 23, 1829, probated February 14, 1835, mentions his wife Sarah, sons Joseph, Alfred and Edmund and daughter Abigail Blackmar.

She and Mercy (374) lived about a mile from the centre of Bellingham, and when advancing in years deeded their farm to a man named Rockwood, on condition that he would care for them as long as he lived, which condition he faithfully kept. Mr. Rockwood's children state that when Abiram Wight (373) was about forty years old he committed some act on account of which he left Bellingham and was never afterward heard from. His sisters seldom spoke of him, although at first they felt his absence keenly.

In 1811 he returned to South Brimfield to reside and here his five youngest children were born. The name of the town of South Brimfield was changed in 1828 to that of Wales, in honor of James Lawrence Wales a wealthy benefactor and honored citizen of that town, who had married Polly Fletcher, an elder sister of Anna. Upon his death childless July 3, 1840, he willed his property to the children of Pliny Wight. Pliny died June 5, 1835, his widow died June 12, 1856, both in Wales.

These she educated in the best schools at Worcester, supplementing their instruction there by sending her daughters to the Charlestown Female Semi-

In 1860 following her children westward she took up her abode at Romeo, Mich., where she remained until her death August 14, 1887, aged 100 years, 10 months, 3 days. She was a subscriber to the Worcester Spy (from which I condense this article) for 70 years and up to the day of her death none of its younger readers was more deeply interested in its contents. She sought comfort and solace in her Bible and other devotional books, yet she kept herself fully informed upon political matters and the great questions of the day. Her mind was unclouded until her death and her memory good. The morning of her one-hundredth birthday was a solemn occasion, since she felt that her end must be near, but her genial spirit revived and continued to the last.

382. PATTY[6] WIGHT (Eliab[5], Elnathan[4], Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born June 26, 1788, married November 16, 1815, Tyler Daniels of Woonsocket, R. I., born in Mendon, Mass., September 13, 1788. She lived for fifty years in Woonsocket, and died there August 9, 1884, at the residence of Alonzo D. Vose (385). She had no children. She was long familiarly and lovingly known as Aunt Patty. She was "a lady of excellent parts, being of even temperament and kind and affectionate disposition. To know her was to love her. Pleasant words and a cheerful smile for all with whom she was acquainted endeared her to all, and her life, though prolonged far beyond that allowed to the great majority of the human race, will be sadly missed by those who were near and dear to her. The lamp of that life burned with steady flame to the last, its light shedding happiness in the home circle and going out to other homes, leaving a subdued halo behind, which even now seems unextinguished."—Tyler Daniels died in Woonsocket, March 25, 1864.

383. AMHERST[6] WIGHT (Eliab[5], Elnathan[4], Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born June 15, 1791, graduated at Brown University in 1813, and started immediately for New York to take up his abode. I have before me a copy of a letter written by him in New York November 15, 1813, to his sister Patty. In a sprightly vein it depicts his own straitened circumstances and his determination to conquer success. Amherst became a lawyer in New York where he practiced for 60 years. He married April 12, 1826, Joanna G., daughter of John and Elizabeth (Blake) Sanderson. Joanna was born at Washington's headquarters, Newburg. Amherst's children were born in New York. He removed to Port Chester, N. Y., in 1861, where at his residence on King street, he died January 10, 1879. He was buried at Greenwood, in Brooklyn. His widow went to Brooklyn to reside and died there in her 85th year, July 28, 1882.

Concerning this "attorney of the old time school," I clip the following from the New York Evening Post, written in January, 1879, by Luther P. Hubbard (Hubbard's Hubbard Family, 14), his successor as secretary of the New England Society:

> He was a man of fine and venerable presence, with a beautiful eye and a hearty, sweet countenance beaming with life, which would attract notice anywhere. He was the oldest member of the New England Society. In 1816 he was elected a member of the New England Society, and in January, 1817, was elected secretary, and retained the office until 1822. After the fire in Barclay street, which burned up his valuable collection of abstracts of titles, he began again with all the energy of a young man to replace and add to the list. His carriage was remarkably dignified. He had a very pleasant voice and an easy flow of language. The children of the street would stop and smile and talk with him. He was an earnest religious man, and very lately was engaged in reading a Greek testament so as to ensure a strictly true understanding of the Bible. I call him my illustrious predecessor. I have known much pleasure in talking over old times with him. He leaves a large number of grandchildren. His son, Amherst Wight, Jr., a very excellent lawyer of great promise, died two years ago in his very prime and vigor. Mr. Wight was eighty-seven years old the 15th of last June, and planted, as was his custom, a hill of corn for every year of his life—eighty-seven hills this time. He was far-seeing, trustworthy, careful and accurate as a lawyer. Socially he was exceedingly delightful.

No children. Eliab died in Bellingham, September 28, 1879, in the same house in which both he and his father had been born, the parsonage of Rev. Elnathan[4] Wight (82). This house is a large square building, well-preserved, with an immense and shapely elm in front, planted by Rev. Elnathan. After the death of Eliab[6] Wight, in 1879, there was an auction at the old parsonage, and a collection of sermons, written by Rev. Elnathan, was bought by a Mr. Horace Rockwood. Note. Theron E. Hall, who married Jemima Mann, entered the Union army at the beginning of the rebellion, and served until the close of the war, being then a colonel. He was made Superintendent of the Soldiers' Home at Portland, Maine. His health being much shattered, the family in November, 1875, moved to San Diego. He died there much respected and honored. In 1881 the family returned East and settled in Natick where they now reside. See Sloeum's Slocum Family, for his ancestry. In that volume, p. 519, Jemima is called Wright.

388. DAVID[6] WIGHT (David[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born May 19, 1761, received from his father on becoming of age 58 acres of wild land in Sturbridge, which he began forthwith to clear and prepare for cultivation. In the spring of 1782 he made a tour to Medway and Boston and upon returning home he fell in company with Susanna Harding of Medway, who was journeying to Sturbridge to visit friends. The acquaintance thus formed resulted in marriage in Medway, November 7, 1782 (Davis' Sturbridge and Southbridge, 29). David's home in Sturbridge was upon the south side of the Quinebaug river, on premises since occupied by his son and grandson, both named David. All the children of David and Susanna were born in Sturbridge, and there David died October 27, 1813, and there his widow died August 22, 1829.

At several periods, David represeuted the town iu the General Court, and officiated as Town Clerk, and Justice of the Peace many years. Those several trusts were discharged to the public acceptance. He frequently sat as a magistrate in the trial of actions. In this capacity he showed a discriminating mind, good common sense, and a desire that justice should be done to parties. He was above partiality or bias. Whatever he undertook, was executed with promptness and energy. He was an apt writer in point of penmanship and composition. Frequently called upon to draft instruments of various kinds, he could with great ease, shift his hand from the plow to the pen, and perform services of this sort with uncommon accuracy and propriety, considering his advantages. This we are ready to believe, was in some degree, a hereditary talent. He was active in promoting the instruction of the rising generation, religious institutions, and public improvements. He exemplified in his life his religious profession. His residence, since the residence of his son, Col. David, in the midst of rural beauty, always attracts the particular notice of the passing traveller. He was cut down in the midst of his usefulness, and in the maturity of all his faculties. (Davis' Sturbridge and Southbridge, 32).

Alpheus, universally known by the title of Captain, finished and occupied the house later owned by Winthrop[7] Wight (933), which Festus[6] Wight (389) had begun but died before completing. Here Captain Alpheus lived until his death, and here his children were born. His wife died in Sturbridge, November 25, 1822. He again married October 19, 1826, Mrs. Mary Hitchcock Howe of West Brookfield. Captain Alpheus died June 30, 1851; his widow died in Sturbridge, February 9, 1873. Captain Wight was far-sighted, enterprising and discreet in his calculations. He had large grist and saw mills at Wight Village and dug with the spade a canal about half a mile in length, skirting the road and terminating at his mills. "In 1799 he began to dig the canal to take water from the river for his grist and saw mill. After a very arduous and expensive work through the years 1800 and 1801, the grist mill was started October 24, 1801." The accomplishment of this undertaking was always a source of gratification to Captain Wight. His mills had full employment for more thon sixty years and until their removal for more recent buildings. Captain Wight will be remembered as the man who prepared the way for the flattering prosperity of Wight Village. (Davis' Sturbridge and Southbridge, 33, 34; Chase's Plimpton family, 116). This village grew up in Sturbidge, around the industries of Captain Wight.

412. HENRY[6] WIGHT (Moses[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born March 24, 1787, went with his brother Moses[6] to Cuba. They worked at their trade as carpenters and builders at the Havanna in the winter of 1810-11. In the spring they placed their effects on board vessel to embark for home, when one was stricken with yellow fever, the other remained to care for him and both died. Moses died May 11, 1811, and Henry, June 1, 1811. (Henry Wight's Manuscript Genealogy, 12). Medfield records give these death dates as follows: Moses' death April 13, 1811, Henry's, May 5, 1811. But see 193, Note.

413. POLLY[6] WIGHT (Moses[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born May 16, 1789, married in Medfield about 1815, William Chapel, or Chappell, an Englishman, a shoe manufacturer in Medfield and later in Boston. She died in Rochester, N. Y., March 27, 1843, and was buried in Mt. Hope cemetery the next day. Her son John[7] Chapel, born about 1816, died near Rochester, unmarried about 1840.

414. MOSES[6] WIGHT (Moses[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born September 27, 1791, deserves the lasting gratitude of every American for an act of heroism which honored his 15th year. Rev. Thomas Prentiss of Medfield relates the incident under date of October 20, 1806:

"I wish to communicate to the Trustees of our Humane Society, a statement of a successful exertion in saving the life of a lad who had nearly perished in the watery element. I am satisfied the activity and enterprise of the agents will be thought deserving of your attention. Lowell Mason, a son of my nearest neighbor, of about sixteen, went into Charles River to bathe, and unexpectedly to himself, was carried by the current where the water was eight or nine feet in depth. Having sunk and arisen twice, calling for help in the best manner his situation admitted, he went down the third time. Two lads younger than himself being present—namely, Moses Wight and Joseph Lovell—the former, with all his clothing upon him, plunged into the water and brought his friend from the bottom, while the other very judiciously floated a rail on the surface and aided them both to the land." Tilden's Medfield, 206.

Thus was preserved to us the voice of him who published Carmina Sacra, and who revolutionized musical methods and musical instruction in America.—The death of Moses is related at 412.

415. ADELIZA[6] WIGHT (Moses[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born October 3, 1797, married in Medfield, , 1817, John Fairbanks, born June 19, 1787. He was a bootmaker from Sharon, Mass. (Tilden's Medfield, 386). They lived in Medfield and at Hallet's Cove, Long Island. He died in Medfield, February 11, 1829. She died at Mt. Vernon, Lawrence Co., Mo., February 23, 1880.

417. NANCY[6] WIGHT (Simeon[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born June 28, 1772, married Isaac, son of Deacon Henry Bowen of Woodstock, Conn. Isaac was baptized September 29, 1771, which event, if it occurred in early infancy, is inconsistent with the statement that he served seven years in the Revolutionary army. He kept the tavern at one time in West Woodstock and later in life lived at Ashford, then called Eastford. He lived to be 95 years of age. Nancy had 7 children, one of whom died in infancy. Of her fourth child only have I any information. He lived in Memphis, Tenn., where Nancy died in 1859.

4. Fordyce F.[7] Bowen, born June 26, 1798, married Hannah A. Mitchell, of Lynchburg, Va. Seven children. They moved into Mississippi and then to Memphis, Tenn. In 1878 they lost by yellow fever, one daughter, two grandchildren, and three sons-in-law. Mr. Bowen was in that year and since a prominent member and Assistant Secretary of the Harvard Association of Memphis. He has remained in that city through every epidemic of the past 25 years. Of his daughters widowed in 1878, one Mrs. Taylor has four children and one Mrs. D. P. Warner has charge of a little son of a sister who, with all the rest of the family, died of the plague. Benjamin Rush[8] Bowen, M. D., of Vicksburg, Miss., is a son of Fordyce F.[7] Bowen.

SIMEON[6] WIGHT (Simeon[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born February 24, 1774, married April 29, 1798, Esther, born August 10, 1775, daughter of Ebenezer and Margaret (Bowen) Smith of West Woodstock. Simeon lived in West Woodstock in 1801. An entry of date May 14, 1793, in the diary of Rev. Stephen Williams of West Woodstock, states that he "prayed with Simeon Wight," as perhaps on a bed of sickness. In 1801 the family moved to Williamstown, Vt., where Esther died January 8, 1829. In 1830 Simeon married the widow Betsey Ruth Stebbins, born Cossitt. See 973. Simeon died in Williamstown, May 26, 1840, and his widow died in Adrian, Mich., aged 87, February 21, 1870.

Of her second marriage Prudence had a daughter Clarissa, born January 27, 1809, who married November 24, 1831, Danforth Child. Clarissa has at least a son, Lucius H. Child, of Flushing, L. 420. JOHN BURT[6] WIGHT (Henry[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born May 7, 1790, was fitted to enter college at the age of 12 years, but was refused admittance on account of his tender age. In 1808 at the age of 18 he graduated at the head of his class at Brown University, in the same class with William L. Marcy, (930 Note 3). In 1816 he received the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard University. He was ordained over the Congregational Society at Wayland, Mass., January 25, 1815. In 1817 he built a large and solid mansion upon his little farm on the edge of Wayland, which he always regarded as his home. He married January 1, 1818, Sarah, born September 23, 1793, daughter of Silas and Susannah (Clapp) Grout of East Sudbury, Mass. Susannah Clapp was of the family whose record is in Clapp's Clapp family, 101. Dismissed from Wayland at his own request in 1835, Rev. Mr. Wight had the pastoral care, for a few years each, of religious societies, in Castine, Me., Milford and Amherst, N. H., and North Dennis, Mass. His wife died April 18, 1851, but he survived her many years. His children were born in Wayland. His niece Mary Hewson[7] Rowland (427), writing to me in 1882, says: "At 92 he is a grand wreck, yet still the courtly gentleman of old. To see his profound salute to a lady is a picture. Chesterfield could not excel it, and though the mind is slipping away he invariably greets every visitor in the most graceful and deferential manner." Additional details of Rev. Mr. Wight's life I find in the following from the Christian Register of January 3, 1884:

The venerable clergyman whose name has stood for some years on the Year-Book list as the oldest of our ministers died in Wayland, Mass., on the 20th of December, 1883. He had reached the great age of ninety-three years and seven months. Born in Bristol, R. I., in 1790, Mr. Wight graduated at Brown University (of which he was the oldest living alumnus), and settled in East Sudbury, now Wayland, in 1815. He was called of course, and his salary paid, by the town, under that close union of Church and State which once obtained in New England. Inclining then, as all through his life, to liberal views in theology, Mr. Wight remained pastor of the First church and preached Unitarian doctrine, while the stricter party seceded, and formed a Trinitarian society. His ministry continued here fifteen years. He was afterward settled for short periods in Maine and New Hampshire, but returned in 1842 to Wayland, which was ever after his home.

Inhabiting the house which he had built at his first coming into town, Mr. Wight passed many years in placid study and such common pursuits of the retired minister as the care of schools. Sent to the legislature in 1850, he introduced the act authorizing towns and cities to tax themselves for the support of public libraries, and urged it to its passage. His name will thus always be honorably associated with a great advance step in the diffusion of knowledge. The cause of books was always near his heart; and the Wayland Library, the oldest public library in the United States, was the lineal successor of other libraries in town which he had promoted. Mr. Wight had not preached for many years before his death. Decay stole very gradually upon him, until, without any local disease, his strength passed. Of a quiet and thoughtful disposition, a true gentleman of the old school, with an impressive courtesy of demeanor, he was content with large ideas and a sequestered vale. His life spanned a broad stretch of days, an epoch famous in discoveries and inventions. The crowded era held but few men who took more delight in man's progress, spiritual and material, and in the great movements of the race, than John Burt Wight.

The reference in this extract to libraries calls for further remark. Rev. Mr. Wight represented Wayland in the Massachusetts legislature in 1851, and was the author of a bill—the first of its kind in this country—which was enacted with great approbation and almost entire unanimity—authorizing cities and towns to establish and maintain public libraries. I cannot forbear copying so beneficent an enactment:

"AN ACT TO AUTHORIZE CITIES AND TOWNS TO ESTABLISH AND MAINTAIN PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

"Be it enacted, &c., as follows:—

"SECT. 1. Any city or town of this Commonwealth is hereby authorized to establish and maintain a public library within the same, with or without branches, for the use of the inhabitants thereof, and to provide suitable rooms therefor, under such regulations for the government of such library as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the city council of such city, or the inhabitants of such town.

"SECT. 2. Any city or town may appropriate for the foundation and commencement of such library, as aforesaid, a sum not exceeding one dollar for each of its ratable polls, in the year next preceding that in which such appropriation shall be made; and may also appropriate annually, for the maintenance and increase of such library, a sum not exceeding twenty-five cents for each of its ratable polls, in the year next preceding that in which such appropriation shall be made.

"SECT. 3. Any city or town may receive, in its corporate capacity, and hold and manage, any devise, bequest, or donation, for the establishment, increase, or maintenance of a public library within the same. [Approved May 24, 1851.]"

I., January 23, 1817, Abby, born December 31, 1794, youngest daughter of Colonel Samuel and Lucy (Wardwell) Wardwell. While living in Rhode Island Henry was engaged in mercantile and marine pursuits and at one time was captain of a vessel. He moved from Bristol into Georgia in December, 1829, living at Sofkee in Decatur County. In Georgia he was variously teacher, farmer, and merchant, receiving in every pursuit the universal respect of his neighbors. For the greater part of his life he was a member of the Presbyterian church. Late in life he wrote me, "It is with a sense of gratitude that I can say that within my knowledge not one of the many who have descended from my father's family has in the least degree cast a blemish upon his good name." His four oldest children were born in Bristol, the remainder in Sofkee. Mrs. Wight died at Sofkee, October 6, 1871; her husband died at Cairo, Thomas County, Ga., February 6, 1885.

Charles resided in Bristol and in places indicated by his children's births. He died in Pensacola, Fla., September 24, 1846; his widow died March 1, 1867. 1. Abby Frances[7] Alden, born in Providence, R. I., July 4, 1826, has resided in Bristol, but her home is now in Boston. Her letters of travel in Europe and Africa, which I have been permitted to read, are admirable sketches, showing a refined and cultured mind. She was for twenty years a teacher.

He was also president of the Catholic Congregational society of Bristol. Abigail died August 5, 1843, her husband died August 1, 1865. In her earlier days Mrs. Diman was considered the most beautiful woman in Rhode Island, and her character was always altogether lovely.

Ch. of Fall River, and in 1860 over Harvard Ch., Brookline Mass.; in 1864 he succeeded Professor William Gammell, LL. D., as professor of history and political economy at Brown Univ., which institution gave him the degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1870; in 1873 he was elected a corresponding member of the Mass. Historical Society. He was a versatile and pleasing writer. His most ambitious work, The Theistic Argument as affected by recent theories, was published after his death. I deeply regret that from the large mass of written and printed matter lying before me I can cull so meagrely concerning so brilliant a life. For a loving yet discriminating analysis of his character, for an account of the positions he has filled and the far larger number he declined, for a complete list of his published works and for the extracts from his private letters which illustrate his amiable disposition, the reader is referred to Memoirs of the Rev. J. Lewis Diman, LL. D., by Caroline Hazard, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. See also a review of this volume in Providence Evening Bulletin of January 7, 1887, and the columns of the Bulletin and Providence Journal of the dates of his death. For the Journal Dr. Diman furnished leading articles for several years before his death. While holding his professorship in Brown Univ. he died in Providence, February 3, 1881—a victim, as many other scholars are, to his untiring devotion to knowledge and to his love for the advancement and improvement of others. My own acquaintance with him was limited to a brief correspondence, but a single letter, nay rather a single sentence was sufficient to reveal its writer as a man among men. He married May 15, 1861, Emily Gardner Stimson, born in Providence, March 4, 1837, daughter of John Jones and Abigail Morton (Clarke) Stimson, residents of Providence but natives of Massachusetts. Mrs. Diman lives in Providence.
   1. Maria Stimson[8] Diman, born February 12, 1862, was instantly killed by a fall from a horse April 29, 1881. A memorial to her and to her father has taken the form of a cottage at East Providence connected with an existing orphanage and nursery, with a one story pavilion adjoining, for sick children, especially incurables.
   2. John Byron[8] Diman, born May 24, 1863, Brown Univ. 1885, in 1887 a student at Episcopal Theo. School, Cambridge.

   4. Emily[8] Diman, born April 8, 1873.
4. Henry Wight[7] Diman, born April 2, 1835, was a student at Brown Univ. 1851–54; entered upon a business life, and was representative for Bristol in the Assembly in 1858–62. In the first Lincoln campaign he was president of the Republican State Convention and Secretary of the State Central Committee. He was the first to enlist from Bristol in 1861, joining the First R. I. regiment. Soon after he was appointed Asst. Paymaster of the Navy and was ordered to the Kineo, afterwards attached to the West Gulf Squadron under Farragut. He was present at the capture of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, April 24, 1862, and in the later engagements which foreshadowed the fall of New Orleans. On August 6, 1862, he was on board the transport Whitman which collided with the Oneida and sank. Mr. Diman's swimming powers saved his life when many were drowned. In 1862 he was appointed consul at Oporto, Portugal, and in 1870 consul at Lisbon, holding the latter position until the consulate was abolished in 1882. In 1872 and 1873 during the absence of the minister resident he discharged diplomatic duty as chargé d' affaires "with wisdom and dignity and brought honor to his government and country." He continued his residence in Lisbon after his retirement from office and died unmarried in Lisbon, September 23, 1884, and is buried there. The vice consul general in announcing officially his death to the Secretary of State says: "It is but an act of simple justice to his memory for me to say that he died with the respect of all who knew him and with the affection of the hosts of friends he had attached to him." For a sketch of his life see Providence Bulletin, of June 17, 1885.

5. Abby Byron[7] Diman, born May 7, 1838, died in Bristol, August 11, 1838.

Note 1. De Wolf: Charles De Wolf, born 1695, married March 31, 1717, Margaret Potter. He went from Lyme, Conn., to Guadeloupe. His son, Mark Antony De Wolf (November 8, 1726—December, 1779), was a vessel owner and sea captain. He married August 25, 1744, Abigail Potter. Their son Judge John De Wolf (March 18, 1760—October 10, 1841), married September 16, 1784, Susan Reynolds. John and Susan had Professor John De Wolf (February 23, 1786—March 2, 1862), who married May 3, 1819, Sylvia Griswold (1800—1834). See Note 2. John and Sylvia were parents of Algernon Sidney De Wolf, husband of Clara Anna[7] Diman, above.

Note 2. Griswold: George Griswold of Kenilworth, England, was father of Edward Griswold, born in England 1607, died 1691. Edward by wife Margaret had a son George Griswold who died September 3, 1704. George married Mary Holcomb and had a son Thomas Griswold, born September 29, 1658. Thomas by wife Hester Drake was father of Samuel Griswold (August 7, 1685—May 16, 1777). Samuel who married Elizabeth Gaylord had a son Elisha Griswold (October 25, 1731—March 13, 1803). Elisha by wife Eunice Viets was father of Alexander Viets Griswold (April 22, 1766—February 15, 1843), Episcopal bishop of Connecticut who was father of Sylvia Griswold, Note 1. See Salisbury's Griswold family; Walworth's Hyde Genealogy, I, 10.

426. MARTHA GIBBS[6] WIGHT (Henry[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born July 25, 1807, lives in the family of her sister Fanny in Marietta, Geo., a woman of strong and estimable character—everyone's "Aunt Martha." Her family Bible giving her Wight line back to Samuel[2], has been my authority for many facts and dates.

427. CLARA LEONARD[6] WIGHT (Henry[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born July 31, 1812, married August 22, 1830, William Maltbie Rowland, born in Fairfield, Conn., June 25, 1795, the eldest of the eleven children of Samuel and Sarah (Maltbie) Rowland. Clara's married life, until after the birth of her first child, was spent in Bristol, R. I.; but soon after this event the family removed to Augusta, Geo., where Mr. Rowland had previously lived. Here the remainder of their children were born, and here until 1855, the family resided. He was a merchant of prominence and wealth, and was for 20 years connected with the Iron Steamboat Company of Augusta, a corporation which was compelled to yield to the superior speed and convenience of railroads. In 1855 he removed to Rockford, Ill., where he died April 29, 1869. His widow then moved to Chicago, where I had the pleasure and honor of her acquaintance. She was a woman of rare Christian virtues, revered by her children and reverenced by all who came within the circle of her influence. She died in Chicago, December 26, 1880. "Of her it may be truly said she was the embodiment of unselfish love. Her greatest pleasure was in making others happy, and all found in her a generous sympathizing friend. In her tongue was the law of kindness, and in her heart the charity that thinketh no evil."

461. SETH[6] WIGHT (Joel[5], Seth[4], Ephraim[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born May 21, 1783, married April 9, 1807, Lydia Mason of Gilead, Me., born August 18, 1791. Thirteen of their children were born in Gilead, the youngest child was born after their removal to Bethel, Me. Seth died in Bethel, December 29, 1863. He had great love for and pride in his kindred and wished his children to know of them and to bear them in mind when the chances of life might bring them near each other. He used to say he never knew a Wight in State prison or knew a drunkard or a thief among them. Even from my larger knowledge and acquaintance this sentence needs but little qualification. The following is from the Christian Mirror, of Portland, Me.:

So industrious were his habits, and so good his judgment, even in boyhood, that his father entrusted to him the sole management of the home farm, from the age of 16 to 22. At the age of 20 years he injured himself at a houseburning, which made him an invalid for life, but changed not in the least his aims nor slackened his ambition. When 22 he came to Gilead, Me., and located among the first settlers. Under his skillful management before many years his 400 acres of wild land were cleared, cultivated and made a most fertile and productive farm, paid for by his own exertions. His interest was early manifested for the spread of the Gospel and success of schools. He devoted one room of his house to meetings and one to schools, welcoming all the ministers, who occasionally came to preach, to his home, saying the benefits of religious intercourse to himself and family more than remunerated him for all trouble and sacrifice. During Rev. Mr. Walker's preaching in Gilead he obtained a good hope in Christ, and united with the first church formed there, under Rev. Mr. White, their first pastor. He always had an eye to the public good. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself," was quoted by him oftener than any other saying from sacred writ. As the population increased, his ready and efficient efforts were united with others in building a convenient house of worship (giving up selfish interest in regard to the location) where it would accommodate most people. In the establishment of schools, in the cause of temperance and in every enterprise that could improve and elevate society he was a leading actor. The poor for miles around had in him a friend and adviser, who raised their hopes and bettered their condition by his encouragement and timely assistance. While he neglected not to make provision for a future state of being, he believed it to be his right and duty to employ the faculties God had given him to better his worldly condition. God helps those who help themselves, he would say. He was an independent thinker, and when his mind was once made up he was led fearlessly to engage in what was new and untried, on the principle of "Nothing venture, nothing have." He nerved himself to action that he might furnish to his family the comforts and privileges of life. His aged father and step-mother lived with him for whom he tenderly cared, and for his children his ambition was to be able to give them all an education sufficient to discharge well the duties of life,—saying it would be better for them than gold. In 1818, he commenced keeping a small store, which he enlarged as his means would permit, to meet the wants of the people, and continued in trade until 1838. He received a justice's commission in 1827, served the town as Constable, Collector and Treasurer 13 years, Selectman and Assessor 5 years, Town Clerk 3 years, was a Referee on many important cases and was called one of the most accurate and expeditious surveyors of timber, land, &c., being extensively employed as surveyor. In 1835, on account of the better educational privileges, he removed to Bethel. Here he struggled hard against adverse circumstances. The tide which had been in his favor and made him successful in all his undertakings now turned, and in the great commercial crisis when speculation raged like a panic, misfortunes came upon him, for which he was not responsible, and he was obliged to experience failure of cherished hopes, with continued ill health. Still he baffled the current and kept above the surface. He gave liberally towards founding Gould's Academy, assisted in building a bridge across the Androscoggin, and wherever and in whatever he could he lent a helping hand. He was a great reader, and as far as possible applied what he had learned from reading and observation to practice. He liked the scientific way of farming and would say it was very true "one was never too old to learn." He encouraged improvement in every department. As old age advanced and he retired from active life, his memory of dates, names and past events was most remarkable. His clear intellect remained unimpaired; every faculty of his mind he retained to the last. He said there was one reason why he anxiously wished his life prolonged—and but one—viz.: that "he might see an end to this carnal war and peace honorably restored." He read with great interest news from the war up to within three or four days of his death. Of his religious feelings he said little, but what he said betokened deep thought and sincerity. He spent much time in secret prayer, often saying God looked at the heart instead of outward appearances. He was a liberal minded man and Christian, showing an innate respect for those who differed from himself in politics and religion. His belief was that "By their fruits ye shall know them," and that you should "Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth." His view of himself was a very humble one. He had a firm trust in God through Christ; an even, unwavering hope of a better life beyond the grave, through a loving Saviour. In his long, changeful and ofttimes depressing sickness he was longsuffering, patient and forbearing, saying God was a just and merciful God and ever good to him. His extraordinary courage, his natural vigor and activity of mind gave him a bright, hopeful manner, well calculated to conceal the inroads of disease. But he had made every preparation for his death and funeral services sometime previous and calmly waited the summons to "Enter into rest," which came at last, suddenly to his family but long expected by him. He was the father of 14 children, 9 of whom are still living—had enjoyed 57 years of married life and been for fifty years a member of the Congregational Church.

The following notice relates to his wife who died August 8, 1872, in Bethel:

Married before she was sixteen, and assuming at once the duties of a household, these early years were burdened with all the hardships and privations incident to the wife of a Pioneer. Nobly, patiently and lovingly did she prove herself a helpmeet, not only in the care and training of a large family, but in dispensing benefits for the welfare of the new settlement. No appeal was ever made from the poor, the sick or the beggar at the door, without a ready response from her tender, pitying heart. Her whole life of nearly 81 years, was one of active self-denying labor for others. A most devoted christian mother she was, giving the children who survive her blessed memories of childhood's hour, when she snatched a rest from her daily toils to teach her little ones to pray. She, with her husband, united with the first Congregational church formed in the place, thus being a member 59 years, surviving her husband nearly 9 years. They had 14 children, 8 of whom, 8 sons and 5 daughters, are living, 49 grand-children and 20 great grand-children. Just one month previous to her sickness, a much loved son, Daniel Ormsby Wight, late of California, whose ill health for years had made him a special object of her love and solicitude, died suddenly of hemorrhage of the lungs. He had long been an humble, faithful Christian amid the harrassing cares and temptations of a change of business life; and her stricken soul bowed to the will of God, with the comforting hope of meeting him ere long in Heaven, where dear ones of her love had gone before. Yet her mother's heart had suffered with him through all his failing health, and the effect upon her system was serious and permanent. In her last distressing illness of five weeks, her five daughters hastened to her dying bed to catch the whisperings of her waiting soul. Wearisome days and nights of pain were soothed by psalms of praise and songs of rest and trust read or sung by her request. Now, when the hearts of all her loved ones are bleeding at her loss, can they thank God He took her home with her physical and mental faculties unimpaired by age or disease. It is indeed wonderful what beautiful things her hands have wrought these latter years—rugs and quilts of most ingenious design and tasteful arrangement of colors. Since last September she had nearly completed the fourth quilt, in one of which there are nearly 4,000 pieces. The summons that stilled those busy hands and loving heart, took from earth a christian ripe for the higher and holier service of the saints above.

His widow lives with her daughter Anna near Oakdale, Nebraska. In June, 1878, the widow, in an application for a pension stated that she was then 78 years of age, that the date of her marriage was January 8, 1823, and that her husband died in Dexter, Texas, March 30, 1858.

I extract from a copy of Lyman Wight's journal some account of his life:

In September, 1813, he enlisted in Captain McIntyre's company, at Oppenheim, N. Y., and went to Sackett's Harbor. He was one of a guard to escort some prisoners to Albany, N. Y., and was discharged at Sackett's Harbor, in November of the same year. In December ensuing, he went to Henrietta, N. Y., then after working in various places he went to Upper Canada and Michigan, and returned to Henrietta, where he married. After the birth of two children he moved to Warrenville, in Cuyahoga county, Ohio. In May, 1829, he heard Sidney Rigdon preach what was there known as the Rigdonite doctrine. "After hearing him go through the principle of baptism for the remission of sins I went forward and was baptized by his hands amidst the scorn and derision of some one hundred people, and thus became a bold and fearless defender of the Rigdonite doctrine." His wife who had previously been a Presbyterian was baptized with others in the following August, by the same hand. "I now began to look at the doctrine of the Apostles pretty closely, especially the second chapter of the Acts, where they had all things common. In consideration of this doctrine I went to Kirtland, about twenty miles, to see Brothers J. Morley and Billings. After consideration we entered into a covenant to make our interests one as anciently. In conformity with this covenant I moved the next February to Kirtland, into the house with Brother Morley. We commenced our labors together with great peace and union. We were soon joined by eight other families. Our labors were united both in farming and mechanism, all of which were prosecuted with great vigor. While preparing to establish a branch organization in an adjoining town, four men came along, namely, Parley P. Pratt, Oliver Cowdery, Peter Whitmer and Ziba Peterson, and brought with them the book of Mormon, which they wished to introduce to us. . . . To describe to you the scenes of the next seven weeks would fill quite a large volume. They brought the book of Mormon to bear upon us, and the whole of the common stock family were baptized, and during the seven weeks they tarried they succeeded in building up a church of 130 members. I and my family were baptized by Parley P. Pratt, November 14, 1830, in Chagrin river at Kirtland, Ohio. I was confirmed on the 18th, by Oliver Cowdery, and on the 20th ordained an elder by the same." For the next fourteen years he followed the fortunes of the church with unflagging zeal. He took part in all the trying scenes of the church in Missouri and Illinois, sometimes in the missionary field advocating with boldness the faith of the saints, sometimes driven from his home by a mob, suffering with his family the inclemency of winter, sometimes incarcerated in a dungeon for his faith. During these times he formed a strong personal attachment for Joseph and Hiram Smith, which lasted as long as he lived. When they were assassinated at Carthage, Ill., jail, June 27, 1844, he was one of the twelve Apostles. "After this event he could not agree with his quorum, and regarding the claims of the twelve as unrightful usurpations, he left them and led a company to Texas." At their head he made several new settlements in Western Texas, and did much to open the way for new settlements upon the frontier. In the spring of 1858 he, with his company, started to go north from their settlement on the Medina river, but a few days after he died near San Antonio, March 31, 1858. Though while in Texas some of his teaching and practices were not in harmony with the acknowledged doctrines of the church, he always maintained his work was of God, and that Joseph Smith was inspired of God to usher in the dispensation of the fulness of time.

Interesting facts concerning the life of "Colonel" Lyman Wight down to the period of the Carthage mob are contained in Biographical Sketches of Joseph Smith the prophet by Lucy Smith, his mother, published at Plano, Ill., 1880. The company led by Lyman Wight to Texas consisted of about 200. Their first settlement was on the Perdinallis River about 75 miles west of Austin. After their leader's death the company was scattered.

The children of Lyman Wight given below are those of his wife Sarah Benton. The polygamous practices of his later years were severely discountenanced by all his lawful descendants so far as I have heard. These belong to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which body has no sympathy with the polygamous system centered in the Utah church.

Lyman Wight's military title grew out of the fact that as one of the twelve apostles during the Mormon excitements in Missouri he commanded a regiment of soldiers. He was a man of great ambition, of superior intellect and strong character, and easily maintained the supremacy he acquired over his followers.

Note. The following interesting reminiscence of this family I transcribe from an Orleans County, N. Y., paper, of August 16, 1882: On a cold February morning in the year 1817, a brave-hearted, ambitious young man, with an equally stout-hearted young wife and an infant son, set out from one of the towns of Montgomery county, N. Y., with their whole worldly possessions on a rough, wood-shod sled drawn by a yoke of faithful oxen; their destination being the then almost unknown "Genesee country," two hundred miles distant. After a temporary residence of a year in the town of Henrietta, Monroe Co., in the month of March, 1818, they moved into their new home on the Holland purchase, occupying the primitive log cabin on the forest farm of one hundred acres, of which an "article" had been secured and fifteen dollars paid. The location was about three miles east of the present hamlet of Barre Center and four miles west of Farwell's Mills, Clarendon; the distance from the latter place being traversed through the forest, guided by marked trees, stopping occasionally to cut and remove some tree that obstructed their onward progress. Thus, at an early day, Bryant White and family became pioneer residents of that part of the town of Gaines which, some years later, became the present town of Barre. To them in this new home, were born four sons and as many daughters, making, with the pioneer boy, a family of nine children, the youngest of whom, Charlie, died in his youth. The remaining children all arrived at years of maturity, married, and in different localities and States founded homes of their own, raised families, and became engaged in the different callings pertinent to earning a livelihood. By a preconcerted arrangement under the blessing of our heavenly Father, on the evening of August 11th, 1882, the brothers and sisters met at the house of Albert White, Carlton, N. Y., there being present the following: Hiram C. White, Alden, Erie Co., N. Y.; Albert White, Carlton, Orleans Co., N. Y.; Mrs. Marilda W. Brothwell, Rome City, Noble Co., Ind.; Mrs. Lucinda Brown, Akron, Summit Co., Ohio; Orlando White, Hillsdale, Mich.; Mrs. Emily A. Dye, Albion, N. Y.; Mrs. Lucy A. Dockery, Rockford, Kent Co., Mich.; Harlow Bryant White, Newark, Ohio. The evening was passed in reminiscences, inquiries and congratulations, and on the morning of the 12th, the brothers and sisters were seated at one table, where brother Albert and his estimable wife, as host and hostess, served a bountiful repast, which was enlivened with good cheer, animated conversation, and seasoned with the most cordial love of a reunited family.

How many of their children were born in Connecticut and when the family moved into Vermont are not certainly known. The Guilford, Vt., records show a deed in 1787 from Barnabas Russell to Jacob Wight, Jr., in 1790 from the latter to Peter Aldrich, in 1803 from Jacob to Jonathan Russell and in 1808 from him to John C. Pratt. But before this last date he had moved to Windham, Vt., which was organized from Londonderry in 1798. On November 7, 1811, there was a conveyance of land in Windham from Daniel Coff to our Jacob. Soon after this Jacob went to Edinburgh, Saratoga County, N. Y., and bought there an uncultivated farm and then returned to Windham to remove his family but he was taken sick and died before arrangements were completed. This was in 1813. John[8] Anderson, below, an eye-witness of his kinsman's death, thus writes me: "George was Captain and Assistant Inspector General on the staff of Brig.-Gen. William F. Bartlett. I was in command of Co. E, of the 57th Mass. Volunteers. I was lying upon the field wounded. He came to me in hopes of getting me out of that dreadful slaughter-pen. At this time a desperate charge was made by the enemy; our color-bearer was killed. Howe seized the colors and rushed forward in a vain endeavor to stem the tide that was sweeping down upon us like a torrent. I saw him through the smoke of battle far in advance, with his sword in one hand and the flag in the other, calling for the brigade to follow him. Howe fell, shot through the heart, and left over half the brigade upon the bloody field. His body was recovered together with the flag he so gallantly defended. . . . No plumed knight e'er faced a fiercer storm, battled in a nobler cause, or had a braver heart than George H. Howe. If you can spare a page in your book to devote to him, his name will honor it as a shining light to future generations, a name of which we may well be proud."

CHILDREN.

1251.—1. THOMAS POTWIN, born in Skaneateles, January 16, 1820.
1252.—2. ISRAEL HUDSON, born in Wolcott, March 22, 1822, died in Wolcott, September 14, 1825.

Note. Ephraim's widow, Lydia Wight, married in Wolcott, November 17, 1823, Simeon Van Akin, above mentioned. Their daughter, Lydia Ann Potwin Van Akin, married William Ward[7] Wight (1255), son of Ephraim's brother Daniel (518).

518. DANIEL[6] WIGHT (Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born June 14, 1793, removed early in life to Coventry, Conn., where by successive promotions he became eventually superintendent and part owner of a factory there located. His partnership with his brother Ephraim (see 517), was dissolved March 2, 1815. He married September 20, 1815, Roxana Kingsbury, at North Coventry, where she was born August 5, 1796. She had been a student of Rev. Mr. Woodruff of Coventry, a woman of strong literary taste and of unusual observation and intelligence, the most cultured of her father's seven daughters. After his marriage Daniel resided in Lebanon, Conn., and then removed to Griswold. The names of Daniel and Roxana occur in the list of organizing members of the Second Ecclesiastical Society of Griswold, April 14, 1825, which society they joined by letter from the First Church in Griswold. (Hurd's New London County, 407). In March, 1827, one of the manufactories of woolen goods in Jewett City, (Griswold) Conn., of which Daniel was superintendent and part owner, was burned. On Monday, July 21, 1828, at 6:30 A. M., at his home in Jewett City his wife died of consumption, and in two days her infant son followed her. In the following spring Daniel left Connecticut. He had been an enterprising and esteemed citizen of Coventry, and its neighborhood, and is still gratefully remembered by the "Ecclesiastical Society of North Coventry" as its members are summoned to their public worship by the tones of the bell which he caused to be placed in their church in November, 1847. In the spring of 1826 he removed to Albia, now a part of Troy, N. Y., where was a good water power and where he had charge of a large woolen factory. Every morning at 9 o'clock he summoned the factory employés to prayers by the sound of a bell—an incident which gives a glimpse of his character and is an evidence how differently things used to be done. On May 1, 1832, Daniel moved into Troy, and just one year later he purchased a home at No. 100 Third street, which he occupied 22 years and with which are connected my early memories. On March 30, 1836, he married in Troy Sophronia Porter, born September 26, 1803, a niece of his first wife. He resided in Troy in the wool commission business, in partnership with his son William and others, for many years. In May, 1856, he removed to Sand Lake, Rensselaer County, N. Y., being connected with H. C. & G. C. Arnold in the manufacture of satinet warps, stockings, etc., and in a grist mill and store. Retiring from active business he returned to Troy, but his residence then on Fifth street, was burned by the disastrous fire of May 10, 1862. In 1863 he removed with his wife and their daughter to Bloomfield, N. J. While in a horse car in New York, October 19, 1864, he died of apoplexy and was buried in Oakwood Cemetery, Troy, N. Y. While living in Troy, he was in 1841 school commissioner, and one of the school trustees of the Second Ward, and in 1843, alderman.--His widow and daughter removed to Somerville, N. J., where Mrs. Wight still survives.

Note 1. Kingsbury: The Kingsbury genealogy now compiling by Mary Kingsbury Talcott of Hartford, Conn., is awaiting authentic information from England, relative to the ancestry of this family there. From Miss Talcott I learn that the will, dated April 9, 1622, of James Kingsbury of Boxford, Suffolk, mentions his sons James, Henry, John, Joseph and Thomas, his grandson Henry, and his brother's sons, Henry and James. It is more than probable that of this family was Henry Kingsbury, of Ipswich, Rowley and Haverhill, Mass., who was 54 years old in 1669. He died in Haverhill October 1, 1687, his wife, Susannah, died February 21, 1678-9. (Register XIII, 157). They had a son Joseph Kingsbury (1657-April 9, 1741), who married April 2, 1679, Love Ayres (Note 5) of Haverhill, and built him a cottage there for his bride. (Chase's Haverhill, 94). Love Ayres, born April 15, 1663, died among her descendants at Norwich West Farms, now Franklin, Conn., April 2, 1735. Joseph and Love had two sons born in Haverhill, Deacon Joseph and Captain Nathaniel Kingsbury, who both removed to the Farms in 1708-9. The younger, Nathaniel (August 23, 1684—September 18, 1763), married Hannah Denison (Note 7) of Ipswich, Mass., who died aged 82, May 14, 1772. Nathaniel resided in that part of Coventry, Conn., now called Andover, and the inscriptions upon their tombs may still be read in the graveyard there. Nathaniel and Hannah had a daughter Priscilla (March 22, 1720—January 31, 1803), of whom later (see Calhoun's Historical Address, 39). Captain Nathaniel's elder brother Deacon Joseph Kingsbury was born June 22, 1682, and died at the Farms December 1, 1757. He married in Haverhill February 5, 1706, Ruth (June 7, 1686—May 6, 1779), elder sister of said Hannah Denison (Note 7). Ruth owned at least two slaves whom she liberated in December, 1773; she left at her death "a clear estate of the value of £500 lawful money." (Kingsbury v. Tolland, 2 Root, 355). But she left a comparatively larger estate of descendants, for her tombstone avers that there were living of her posterity, at her decease, 5 children, 41 grand-children, 152 great grand-children and 15 of the next generation—a total of 213 persons (Register XIII, 159). Among her thirteen children were:

1. EPHRAIM KINGSBURY, (January 4, 1706-7—1772), married July 3, 1728, Martha Smith. Their son Ephraim, born March 13, 1739, married April 13, 1758, Phebe French, and had a son Jabez, born October 22, 1769. Jabez married December 10, 1789, Freelove Utley, and had among others, Ephraim, born July 20, 1799, and Alvan, born March 9, 1803. Ephraim married Clarissa Bingham and had a son Charles Andrew Kingsbury, born February 18, 1826, who married Martha Kingsbury, under XI, below; Alvan married Emmeline Kingsbury, XI below.
2. HANNAH KINGSBURY, born March 6, 1708 (Walworth's Hyde Genealogy I, 39 says March 13, 1709) married October 11, 1727, Captain Jacob Hyde of Norwich West Farms, born January 20, 1703. They had Ephraim Hyde, born April 23, 1734, who married Martha Giddings and settled in Stafford. Ephraim and Martha had a daughter Lydia Hyde, born at Stafford, January 6, 1761, wife of Captain Joseph Alden (1000, Note). For marriages of two of Captain Alden's children see 274.
6. Deacon EBENEZER KINGSBURY (February 11, 1716—September 6, 1800) of Coventry, married November 28, 1743, said Priscilla Kingsbury, his first cousin. She is reported to have read her Bible through for the purpose of ascertaining if her marriage to so near a relative was lawful. The decision would appear to have been in the affirmative. Rev. Addison Kingsbury, D. D., thus writes me of his grandfather: "Deacon Ebenezer was a man of rare endowments. He was not only a devoted Christian, but he was a man in whom all had confidence. In the early period of its history he had more influence, and was more confided in than any man who ever resided in Coventry. At a time when party spirit ran high he was repeatedly elected to the Legislature without opposition. He served in that body from 1754 to 1780. His going home from the Legislature in Hartford on a Saturday, when the country was in danger, converting the leaden weights of the family clock into bullets, and returning the next Monday with his saddle-bags full of missiles and edibles, was but one among numerous instances of his energy and patriotism." Among his children was a daughter Martha Edgerton Kingsbury, born in 1758 (who is said by her nephew Dr. Kingsbury, above, to have been betrothed to Captain Nathan Hale, born June 6, 1755, whom the British hanged as a spy); and an elder son Joseph Kingsbury (April 17, 1753—April 13, 1828) of Coventry, a lieutenant in the Revolutionary army. He married February 21, 1750, Lois Richardson Porter (Note 2) of Coventry (April 14, 1759—May 20, 1814). The eleven children of Joseph and Lois all born in Coventry were:
   1. Lois, born January 14, 1781, married November 3, 1805, Ira Lillie. She died childless November 20, 1811, and he married her sister Persis.
   II. Oliver (June 24, 1782—November 12, 1809), married April 28, 1803, Cynthia Wing (November 22, 1782—1856), of Windsor, Conn. She married Shubael Brewster after Oliver's death. Oliver's children were:
      A. Maria (May 12, 1806—July 23, 1818), wife of Alonzo Streeter, M. D. (May 1, 1805—July 6, 1856), of Albia, Troy, N. Y. The Streeter children are: 1. Cynthia, born May 7, 1832, unmarried; 2. Helen Cornelia, born July 16, 1834, who October 22, 1856, married James Sims (he died August 10, 1862), of Troy, N. Y.; 3. Caroline, born 1835, who married March 13, 1853, Edward Seymour and died in New York, January 6, 1856; 4. Julia Augusta, born August 9, 1842, who married John A. Davis and died in Troy, July 23, 1885; 5. John Mason Good, born January 8, 1847.
      B. Oliver Richmond, born March 15, 1809, married September 26, 1838, Susan Patterson, of New York, who died June 17, 1849. Mr. Kingsbury was connected with the American Tract Society in New York for over 60 years. Among his children are Rev. Oliver Addison, born August 20, 1839, and Rev. Howard Kingsbury, born February 3, 1842, Yale, 1863.

XI. Emmeline (March 12, 1803—October 9, 1877), married Alvan Kingsbury, above. They had Martha who married Charles Andrew Kingsbury above; Joseph, Ruth and Addison.

13. NATHANIEL KINGSBURY, born February 7, 1730, married September 4, 1755, Sarah, daughter of Jacob Hill of Cambridge. Among their ten children was Jacob, born June 6, 1756, who married in 1779, Sarah, daughter of Dr. Benjamin Ellis of Norwich. Jacob was a colonel in the army, was in the Black Hawk war and died in 1837. His son James Kingsbury, Captain U. S. A., of St. Louis, Mo., born 1801, married 1830, Julia Antoinette, daughter of Jean Pierre Cabannè of St. Louis. They had three children:

A. Jules Cabannè, who died in 1867.
B. Adele Louisa, who married in May, 1854, Alfred Morgan Waterman of St. Louis, who died in December, 1885.
C. Mary Virginia, who married in 1865, Monsieur Armand François Robert Comte de Giverville of Chateau de Paray, Palluau, Indre, France. He died in St. Louis, aged 66, April 4, 1889.

Note 2. Porter: John Porter, son of John Porter, was born in 1590, "in Kenilworth, Warwickshire, England, at Wraxhall Abbey, the ancient seat of the family, and where many of their number are interred. He was descended in the 12th generation from a Norman knight in the train of Duke William of Normandy, at the Conquest A. D. 1066, who bore the name of William de la Porte, as may be seen upon the rolls of Battle Abbey, but which soon became transformed into Porter." (Circular of Henry Porter Andrews to the Porter family). This statement is doubtless probable so far as the line is concerned, but the generations will perhaps be found to be more than twelve. John Porter, his wife Rose and their children sailed from London in the Anne, arriving at Dorchester May 30, 1627. There he remained until in 1635, he assisted in the settlement of Windsor, Conn. He died there April 22, 1648, Rose died May 12, 1648. I note but two of their thirteen children—Samuel and Mary:

I. SAMUEL PORTER, born in England about 1626, married Hannah Stanley (Note 3). He was one of the king's justices. He removed in 1659, from Windsor to Hadley, Mass., and died September 6, 1689. Among his ten children were:

A. Samuel Porter, born April 6, 1660, who married Joanna Cooke. Their son Rev. Aaron Porter of Medford, who was the ancestor of Admiral Porter, had a daughter Susanna, who, August 4, 1739, married Rev. Aaron Cleveland of Haddam (Vinton's Richardson Memorial, 192). Rev. Aaron died August 11, 1757, at the house of his friend Dr. Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia. "The Pennsylvania Gazette of August 18, 1757, contained an obituary notice by the editor, Dr. Franklin." (Chicago Times, February 28, 1885; Milwaukee Sentinel, March 19, 1887; Cleveland's Moses Cleveland, 39; Cleveland's Benjamin Cleveland, 84. See also Walworth's Hyde Genealogy I, 95). But Dr. Franklin was in Europe in all of August, 1757! (Sparks' Dr. Franklin I, 226). Rev. Aaron was father of Rev. Aaron of Norwich, father of Deacon William of Norwich, father of Rev. Richard Falley Cleveland of Holland Patent, N. Y., father of Stephen Grover Cleveland, president of the United States (Register XXXIX, 391; XL, 309).

B. Thomas Stanley Porter, born April 1, 1683, lived in, and was an early town clerk of Coventry, Conn. He married November 13, 1707, Thankful Babcock. They lived near the South Coventry meeting-house, now called Boyington place. Their son Deacon Jonathan Porter (1713–1790) of Coventry, married, June 20, 1734, Sarah Ladd (Note 4), and had a son Jonathan, born 1737, who married in 1758, Lois Richardson (Note 8). Jonathan and Lois were parents of Lois Richardson Porter, wife of Joseph Kingsbury, (Note 1).

II. MARY PORTER, born about 1630, married May 26, 1658, Samuel Grant, born in Dorchester, Mass., November 12, 1631. They had Samuel Grant, father of Noah Grant of Windsor, father of Noah Grant of Tolland, father of Noah Grant of Coventry, father of Jesse Root Grant, father of Ulysses Simpson Grant, president of the United States. (Register XXI, 173, 330)

Note 3. Stanley: Hannah Stanley, wife of Samuel Porter. (Note 2), was daughter of Thomas Stanley, "a younger son of the earl of Derby." (Letter from Mr. Andrews) Thomas came from London in 1635, and was one of the original proprietors of Hartford. For his history see Warren's Stanley families, 285. 'For what is known of the English ancestry of this Stanley see Warren's Stanley families, 19, where it is stated that Thomas was not closely of the family of the earls of Derby. He died in Hadley and was buried January 30, 1663 (Judd and Boltwood's Hadley, 582). His wife was Beunet, Benet, Benett (Benedicta), sirname unknown. Her gravestone in Hartford says she was born August 1, 1609, and died January, 1664. (Warren's Stanley families, 288, 289.) Their daughter Hannah died December 18, 1708.

Note 4. Ladd: Daniel Ladd came from London in 1633 in the Mary and John; his son Samuel Ladd of Haverhill married Martha Corliss and had a son Nathaniel Ladd. This last removed from Haverhill to Norwich, now Franklin, Conn., and then to Coventry. He married Abigail Bodwell of Methuen, Mass., who died August 7, 1778. He died June 11, 1757. Their child Sarah Ladd, born January 6, 1712, married Jonathan Porter, Note 2.

Note 5. Ayres: John Ayer was of Salisbury, Mass., 1640, and a land holder in Haverhill in 1645; he died March 31, 1657; wife Hannah (Chase's Haverhill, 615, 60, 73) Their son Thomas married April 1, 1656, Elizabeth Hutchins, (Note 6), and died in 1686. Thomas and Elizabeth had a daughter Love Ayres, wife of Joseph Kingsbury, Note 1.

Note 6. Hutchins: John and Frances Hutchins were of Newbury and moved to Haverhill, where John died aged 70 in 1674. Frances seems to have been a flagrant violator of law! In the year 1653 she was presented to the Court for wearing a silk hood, but "upon testimony of her being brought up above the ordinary way was discharged." This malum prohibitum was a law passed by the general Court in 1653 against "intolerable excess and bravery in dress." No person whose estate did not exceed £200 was permitted to wear any gold or silver lace or buttons, great boots (see 36, Note), silk hoods, ribbons or scarfs, under a penalty of ten shillings. (Chase's Haverhill, 79.)—John and Frances Hutchins were the parents of Elizabeth Hutchins, Note 5.

Note 7. Denison: John Denison, a weaver of Ipswich (Felt's Ipswich, 99), known of there in 1641 and 1678 (Register, II, 51, 174; VII, 77, 78), died in 1683. By wife Priscilla he was father of John who joined the Ipswich church by taking the covenant January 25, 1673-4. By wife Ruth John, Jr., was father in Ipswich of Ruth Denison (Register, XIII, 159), and it is supposed of Hannah Denison, wives of Deacon Joseph and Captain Nathaniel Kingsbury, Note 1. This parentage of Ruth and Hannah Denison is given upon the authority of Mary Kingsbury Talcott of Hartford, the laborious compiler of the yet unpublished Kingsbury genealogy. The inferential affiliation of these sisters (Baldwin and Clift's George Denison, 330, 331), from Rev. John and Elizabeth (Saltonstall) Denison and thus from Maj.-Gen. Daniel Denison and Captain Roger Dudley which would be very agreeable to the descendants of these sisters must yield to that which is written.

Note 8. Richardson: Lois Richardson who married Jonathan Porter, (Note 2), was doubtless a descendant of Amos Richardson who married Rachael Yarrington of Long Island and emigrated from Stonington, Conn., to Coventry in 1717. He had twelve children, including Amos, Stephen, Justus, Nathan and Jonathan. (Calhonn's Historical address, 40.)

519. ABIGAIL UPHAM[6] WIGHT (Ephraim[5], Ephraim[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born April 24, 1777, married Dean, and lived in Vermont. This was a second marriage. She had a son who was a Methodist minister.

520. ORANGE[6] WIGHT (Ephraim[5], Ephraim[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born May 10, 1779, moved into southern New York. He was living in Chenango County early in the century, and was there visited by his brother Ephraim and their father on their way to the West. Orange married in Lisle (now Barker) Broome County, N. Y., December 17, 1802, Roxana Sweetland, who was born August 4, 1779. He was a farmer living at Smithville, Chenango County, N. Y., where he died of quick consumption, May 18, 1824. His widow died January 8, 1845.

He was the son of Deacon David Lyon, one of the early settlers of Ludlow from Woodstock, Conn., by his wife Eunice Stebbins. Stephen resided in Ludlow until after the birth of 11 children when he removed to Monson, where his daughter Caroline was born. He was a farmer. He died December 23, 1837; Patience died in Wilbraham, January 2, 1861. (Noon's Ludlow, 191).

D., October 29, 1818, remonstrated against the ordination, withdrew from the parish, re-organized and called Rev. Ebenezer Burgess as pastor. (Hill's Dedham records, II, 225.) For an account of this important ecclesiastical controversy see Dedham pulpit, 508; Worthington's Dedham, 110; Baker vs. Fales, 16 Mass., 147, 488.—The old church in Dedham was the fourteenth established in New England, having been gathered November 8, 1638. In 1818, in company with others, he journeyed to the "far west" and settled in Rockdale, Pa. There he became acquainted with the family of John Pickett. This John was born in 1754, married Mary Buell and lived in Becket, Mass. He served 3 years in the revolutionary army and was 21 years in the Massachusetts legislature. For those days he was a man of wealth but having been obliged to pay the bond of another person in a large amount he became greatly reduced in circumstances and exchanged his remaining property for land in Andover, Ohio. Starting in December, 1817, on his western journey he reached Rockdale after 40 days travel and remained there for a year while his Andover land was being made fit for occupation. Here at Rockdale Luther Wight met John Pickett's daughter Mary and here on April 27, 1819, he married her. In 1820 the Wights and Picketts moved to Andover, Ashtabula County, Ohio, where Luther and Mary passed the remainder of their lives and died. There their nine children were born, and Andover has become the old homestead, the pilgrimage place of their scattered descendants. Luther was one of the leading citizens of Andover. He was a farmer, a cabinet-maker, undertaker and general carpenter. John Pickett, whose wife had died before he left Massachusetts, lived in Luther's family until his death in 1840. Luther died April 30, 1860; Mary, who was born July 12, 1791, died October 26, 1871.

Note. As I write this sketch of Luther Wight I have before me a copy of the Andover Citizen of August 26, 1884, giving an account of a re-union of the descendants of Luther and Mary and their connections, held at Andover, August 21, 1884. The re-union grew out of a visit to Andover of the youngest son Joseph who had been in the farther west for 30 years. Seventy persons, including seven of the above nine children, were present. The other two children although absent were alive and well. The resume of the exercises concludes with a poem composed for the occasion by Carrie, wife of William Samuel[5] Wight.

570. DANFORTH PHIPPS[7] WIGHT (Edward[6], Ebenezer[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 3, 1840, was in the west when the war of 1861 broke out and joined the Union army in the first Arkansas cavalry. During most of his service in 1862–3 he was lieutenant and aide-de-camp on the staff of General Frank Heron. On January 20, 1864, he was appointed assistant paymaster in the United States Navy. During 1864-6, he was on the barque Pursuit in the East Gulf squadron, on the Huron in the S. A. squadron 1867-8, and on the S. S. Supply, European fleet, 1869-70. He was commissioned paymaster February 10, 1870, and had leave in Europe in 1871. On December 6, 1871, he married in Dansville, N. Y., Sophia Augusta Woodruff, born in Geneseo, N. Y., March 29, 1845, daughter of Bushrod Washington and Sallyann Drake (Rose) Woodruff. In 1873-5 Paymaster Wight was connected with the Monongahela, S. A. station, was on special duty in New York in 1875-6; was on the R. S. Colorado in 1877 and was detailed on special service at the Paris exposition of 1878. (Hamersley's Navy Register, 770; Hamersley's Naval Encyclopædia 993.)

In April, 1884, after many wanderings upon sea and land Paymaster Wight returned to Dedham and took up his residence in the old home where his uncle Danforth[6] (267) had resided and which had come into the family through the marriage of Rev. Ebenezer[5] Wight (125) with Catherine Fuller. This house stood but a few rods from the old soil which Thomas[1] Wight received as a grant in 1636. See page 6. The old Fuller house was torn down by Paymaster Wight in December, 1884, not with the spirit of an iconoclast but with a reverent regard for its tender associations. A new house in the colonist style which had been erected immediately in the rear of this Fuller house was occupied by his family in 1884. Photographs of the former dwelling and its interior adorn the new residence, some of the original wainscoting is preserved as wainscoting in the new hall, and much of the quaint old furniture is in use throughout. For a brief history of the Wight houses in Dedham see page 5.—The children below were born in Dansville.

Copland of Richmond, and resided at Tuckahoe. The purchase of this Crown grant from Captain Randolph is mentioned at 275. In 1852, believed to have been in March, Edwin died childless, leaving a large fortune to his wife. She then married John D. Munford (son of William Munford the law reporter) of Williamsburg, Va. His daughter of a former marriage is the wife of Judge Coles, now of Chatham, Va. I am informed that upon the death of Mrs. Wight-Munford her large estate, including Tuckahoe, went by her will to the Haxall family of Richmond, strangers to the Wight blood. Tuckahoe is now owned by Allens. For some record of the Munford family see Ellis' Memorandum of the Ellis family, 30.

583. ANN ELIZABETH[7] WIGHT (Benjamin[6], Jabez[5], Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June, 1802, married May 17, 1837, John Thompson of Augusta, N. Y. She died childless at Clinton, N. Y., about 1868.

585. RUSSELL BENJAMIN[7] WIGHT (Benjamin[6], Jabez[5], Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born August 13, 1807, lives unmarried in Oleta, Amador Co., California. In his youth he learned the trade of saddle and harness making and carriage trimming in Cooperstown, N. Y., and followed this avocation for a few years at Guilford and Oxford N. Y. He then abandoned it and engaged in merchandize at Charleston, S. C. Here he had encouraging hopes of a successful career when a sweeping conflagration wiped out a large portion of the business of the city and left him, with many others, penniless. He then returned to his old field at the North and devoted his time to the study and practice of art. Here he was again successful but failing health admonished him of the need of change from sedentary pursuits. Meanwhile the California gold fever attacked many and attacked him also. In March, 1849, with twenty others, he organized a company which took a sailing vessel from New York to San Francisco where they landed after nearly six months' passage around the cape. After various fortune the company disbanded. Russell engaged in mining, locating himself for permanent occupation, and connected with that business gardening and fruit growing for 10 or 12 years. He then abandoned these pursuits and became agent for Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express at Oleta, where he is also postmaster, village druggist and the owner of a fruit ranch of 25 acres. He also owns several buildings and lots on the principal street of Oleta. In 1882 his brother Elijah visited him in Oleta seeing him then for the first time in nearly 38 years. Not until considerable conversation had passed, and Elijah had shown his brother a cane which the latter had owned before going to California, did Russell recognize his unexpected brother. "Then," writes Elijah, "his eyes were opened and he called my name."—During this visit, however, Elijah, the younger brother died. See 586.

586. ELIJAH WORTHINGTON[7] WIGHT (Benjamin[6], Jabez[5], Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born February 7, 1810, was a hatter by trade, and in early manhood went from Cooperstown to Rome, N. Y., and engaged in the hat and cap business. His brother Jabez eventually became his partner and they continued together in trade for a number of years. On February 17, 1826, he united with the First Presbyterian church of Rome. The relation then established with that church continued during the 57 remaining years of his life. He was a trustee for 22 years, ruling elder 34 years and deacon 25 years, holding the latter office when he died. He married January 25, 1838, Mary Ann Hills of Rome who died, aged 57, September 6, 1849. Upon the departure, in 1882, of his daughter and her husband for a trip around the world, Elijah went with them as far as California where he visited his brother Russell at Oleta. While he was at Oleta I had letters from him abounding in information and full of ardor for my task. A letter which I wrote him in March, 1883, was returned by his brother, for Elijah had died before receiving it. He died of heart disease at Oleta, March 27, 1883. He was a quiet, unassuming gentleman of the old school. Habitually at his post in the meetings of his church sessions, in the sanctuary services and at the prayer meetings he set before the people an example of punctuality and faithfulness in the discharge of his obligations to religion and the church. "In his domestic relations he was a devoted and tender husband and father, a generous and sympathizing neighbor and friend, given to hospitality and a follower of the things that make for peace." He was of antiquarian taste and was well posted upon the early history of Rome, N. Y. He furnished much information to local historians regarding early times in Rome and wrote a number of articles upon those subjects for the press.—See the Rome Sentinel, April 5, 1883.

For more than 60 years Rome has been his place of residence. He has taken much interest in the history of his ancestry and has explored the neighborhood of Preston, Conn., for records and memoranda of his fathers. He married in Paris, N. Y., June 27, 1844, Hannah Rosina Munson, born there January 11, 1821.

In November, 1871, she removed to Whitewater, Wis., to reside with her nephew John Fitch[8] Wight (1373). Here she died unmarried May 5, 1877. Although she was over eighty years of age when I began correspondence with her, I found the mind of this gentle lady vigilant and keen, and she was assiduous and unwearied in seeking and sending family records for this work. For a sketch of her life and some references to her cultivated mind, self-reliant, energetic character and christian graces, see Erie Morning Dispatch of May 12, 1877.

589. JOHN FITCH[7] WIGHT (John Fitch[6], John[5], Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born November 2, 1790, began sailing the ocean when 15 years of age, and was chief mate of an ocean sailing vessel at his majority. Subsequently he took up his residence in Erie, Pa., and narrowed his voyages to the compass of the great lakes. He married February 7, 1819, Jane Esther, born November 17, 1800, daughter of George Willes and Esther (Potter) Kimberley of New Haven, Conn. John Fitch visited Chicago when it was a hamlet of log cabins, and bought for $24 what was then mapped "Wight's addition to the city of Chicago," and which consisted (his daughter, Mrs. Jones, believes) of quite a large tract on the Chicago river. He is said to have visited Chicago on the first steamboat which sailed there, and of which he was part owner. At his death he owned two steamboats, of one of which, plying between Buffalo and Chicago, he was captain. He was a warm friend of the Indians; his said daughter now owns a portrait of Red Jacket, a resident on the Buffalo reservation, between whom and Mr. Wight a close intimacy existed. From the time of his marriage John Fitch resided in Erie, where his children were born and where he died September 3, 1844. His brother Jabez was executor of his will. (Wight vs. Wallbaum, 39 Illinois, 554.) John Fitch's widow died in Lancaster, Grant County, Wis., September 3, 1883.

590. JABEZ[7] WIGHT (John Fitch[6], John[5], Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born August 12, 1792, received a diploma in medicine, but followed mercantile pursuits by preference. He embarked in business in Richmond, Va., with Hezekiah Lord[6] Wight (275), but the disappearance of a trusted agent, with large sums of money, brought disaster upon their enterprise. Jabez was present at the burning of the Richmond theater in 1811, and saved the life of a lady who had lost consciousness. He married in Philadelphia April 5, 1823, Rebecca Garrett Worrell of that place, daughter of Maris and Mary (Rowan) Worrell. Rebecca, whose parents were Quakers, was born in Haverford, Delaware Co., Pa., April 5, 1805. The couple removed to the wilderness of Northwestern Pennsylvania, where for a few years Jabez engaged in farming and milling. He then became a merchant in Girard, Pa., where he did a thriving and profitable business. But enterprises of magnitude, in which he and his brother were engaged, proved unfortunate. A steamer in which their fortunes were embarked, was lost, and his property, including a broken section of land in what is now the heart of Chicago, went to creditors. He rallied to a certain degree of prosperity. He died in Girard May 12, 1851. His widow died in Whitewater, Wis., November 26, 1871. He was possessed "of many graces of mind and person, of an imposing presence, with physical beauty seldom vouchsafed to the sterner sex. His mind was solid and brilliant. He was an able debater, with a judicial rather than a partisan bent. His talents, while marked in all respects, in one amounted to genius. In music all instruments acknowledged him master as soon as he understood their mechanism. He imitated bird notes so faithfully as even to deceive the birds themselves." One of his daughters mentions the pride with which she has more than once heard this comment about her father: "Jabez Wight was the handsomest man I ever saw and his word was as good as his bond."—His oldest child was born in Erie, the next four at Cussewago, near Meadville, Pa., the remainder at Girard.—I am now informed that John Fitch (589) and Jabez (590) were born in Preston, Conn.

DESCENDANTS.

1. Jairus Ware[8] Perry, born December 18, 1821, entered Bowdoin College, having walked the 40 miles between Sweden and Brunswick, at his admission. He worked his way through college partly by teaching and graduated in the class of 1846. He entered upon the study of law at Andover, Mass., still adding to his support by teaching there. He was admitted to the bar at Salem, Mass., in 1849, and practiced there all his life. One of his partners was William C. Endicott, since Secretary of War. During 1858–64, he was in the Common Council of Salem. He was also interested in affairs pertaining to the state militia, and for some years was a member of General Sutton's military staff. He was a trustee of Bowdoin College, which institution gave him the degree of LL.D. But his literary labors were the crowning glory of his life. His work, which the lawyers usually cite as Perry on Trusts, has become a standard authority in the law, and will remain as a lasting monument to his learning and ability. George F. Choate, editing in 1882 a new edition of this work in two volumes, recognizes in merited language, the great service to the legal profession, which Mr. Perry had rendered in the composition of this text-book. Mr. Choate also notices the assistance received by him in preparing his edition of the work, from the author's son William[9] Perry. Our author also edited Story's Equity Jurisprudence, a labor which he completed late in 1876, just prior to a visit to Europe for his health. Both of these young men inherited to some extent their father's peculiarities; both told odd tales and quaint maxims with profound gravity; both were quick of wit, keen of temper and cool of head.

Note. I cannot forbear printing this newspaper anecdote of Mark and his father, "Uncle Tom Wight":
Many of our readers are conversant of the fact that during his declining years Thomas Wight deeded his old homestead to his son, Mark, and built him a house on the west side of the road, where he dwelt with his daughter. At this time Mark owned a mare named Fan, a most beautiful animal, the pride of her master and the pet of the entire family. One morning Uncle Tom asked Mark if he would loan him Fan to ride to Oxford Village to buy a little tobacco. "Why, certainly, father," replied Mark, "When do you want to go?" "Now," said the old man, "and what will you charge me for the use of Fan?" "Thirty cents," said Mark. "Well, here is your money," replied the father, "please harness the beast." Uncle Tom donned his big cap, and after binding about his waist a stout piece of rope, he placed on his arm a small basket containing a pipe, a flint and piece of steel, as he discarded matches, a piece of bread and cheese, an almanac, and an old singing book. This constituted his outfit, and he was then ready. Fan impatiently champed her bit, beating the turf with her foot, as if eager to be off. "Be still, Fan," said Mark, in his stern, sharp voice, "Betsey and I are not going to-day; the old man is going, so be quiet." The intelligent animal rubbed her finely moulded head against the shoulder of her master, and then lovingly caressed him with her fine muzzle, as much as to say, "I understand," and then stood perfectly quiet. Uncle Tom was soon seated in the wagon, and seizing the reins with a nervous grip he ordered Fan to use moderation, as he was a poor old man. Fan, well knowing her business, and contrary to her usual custom, assumed an ambling, mincing pace, and soon disappeared behind the adjacent hill. When the old man arrived at his destination, he drove straight to the hotel and ordered the hostler to unladen the beast, groom and take good care of her till called for. He then went to Mr. Baker's, completed his purchase, took his basket on his arm and started homeward on foot. "Where is Fan?" inquired Mark as he saw his father approaching, pretty well tired out. "She is at Oxford," quietly returned the father. "What, sick?" "Oh, no; she was well when I left her." "Why didn't you bring her home?" "Why, the thing is I had no right to; I merely hired her to ride to Oxford, and not home." Mark saw and fully appreciated the joke. Laughing heartily he started for Oxford on foot, a distance of four miles, claimed his mare, and after paying the bill drove quietly home without a word of complaint.

He was an excellent scholar and of good understanding, but of an adventurous spirit. Restrained by his father from enlisting in the Mexican war, he made several voyages in one of which he was shipwrecked. Upon the discovery of gold in California he sailed on the Cordovia, via Cape Hope, from Boston. After the usual vicissitudes of '49ers in mining, lumbering and other enterprises, he returned to Maine and settled in Presque Isle, trading, lumbering and farming. There he married October 28, 1853, Margaret Whittaker, born at Fort Fairfield, Me., July 27, 1833, eldest daughter of Thomas and Mary Whittaker of Presque Isle. He enlisted in Co. B., 16th Maine Volunteers, in the war of 1861, and was known as a soldier of unusual courage and daring. He was killed in front of Petersburg, Va., June 21, 1864, by a bullet through the brain. His widow resides at Presque Isle, where his children were born. Of William's war record his brother Frederick (771) writes: "One of his exploits was the capturing and bringing in of two Confederate soldiers, in the following manner: At one of the battles of the Wilderness, while on picket duty, he became separated from his regiment by some manœuvers and in trying to find his way into his own line, became confused in the woods, lost his way and was captured by two of the enemy. While his captors were wandering about in like confusion, William discovered his bearings. Watching his opportunity while the two were resting, he suddenly knocked one down, snatched his gun, 'got the drop' on the other, disarmed him, and brought both into camp. He fell while on picket duty, within a stone's throw of what was afterward called Fort Hell, and his comrades of the old 16th know that he fell not only in doing his own duty, but in volunteering to do the duty of another. . . . Colonel Tilden of his regiment detailed a member of Company B. to show me where my brother was buried. This man related to me instances of the nerve and courage of my brother, that could not have been exceeded by Julius Cæsar himself. My brother had been one of the principal municipal officers at Presque Isle, and could have entered service as a commissioned officer had he desired, but he chose the situation of a plain private."

FREDERICK DEARBORN[7] WIGHT (Joseph[6], Timothy[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 18, 1837, married at Lewiston, Me., April 23, 1863, Sarah Ann Milliken, born at Windsor, October 18, 1846, daughter of Henry Milliken and Harriet, eldest daughter of Benjamin Hewitt, of Windsor. Sarah Ann died at Windsor, July 17, 1864. She had been educated at the Maine State Seminary—now Bates College. She was a woman of great beauty and grace of manner; she had a brilliant intellect and a disposition of much sweetness, and she was greatly admired and beloved in the circle of her acquaintances. Mr. Wight married second August 1, 1872, at Low Moor, Clinton County, Ia., Mary Abby Briggs, born at Winthrop, Me., March 5, 1853, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Robinson) Briggs, of ancient Quaker stock. Mary Abby attended the High School at Lynn, Mass., where her widowed mother then resided, and subsequently attended the Friends' Boarding School at Providence.

1714.—6. ERNEST, born in Trinidad, March 6, 1883, nothing told.

Note. Frederick's early education was little more than the district school afforded. His gift from his parents—all they could give—was his time, at 16 years of age. On July 5, 1864, when the news reached him that his brother William Lewis (767) had been killed before Petersburg (Frederick's wife dying twelve days after), he offered himself to the governor of Maine as a private soldier, although at that time he had a substitute in the service. The governor soon sent him a captain's commission, which he declined, but said he would accept a lieutenant's commission in one of the companies about to leave for the front. In a few days he was in front of Petersburg as lieutenant, in command of Co. A. First Battalion Maine sharpshooters, and remained in command of this company until the close of the war. He was present and an actor in the principal events about Petersburg until the grand move the last of March, 1865, and in the events which followed, until the memorable scene at Appomattox. To his division, the First of the Fifth Army Corps, being first in line when the enemy was headed off at Appomattox, was given the distinction of receiving the enemy's arms. "I had the pleasure," Lieut. Wight says, "that day, of being in line with my company and witnessing the tattered remnant of Lee's veterans stack their arms and deposit their worn and ragged, but cherished banners. The ranks of Lee's army were so decimated that their division and brigade colors were nearer together than our regimental flags. One color bearer who stood directly before me, hugged closely, with his one remaining arm, his bullet-scarred staff, upon which still remained a piece of a flag. I can see that man now with his old patched, ragged, faded butternut suit, his lank but erect body, his long sandy hair, his pinched, famished face, struggling to restrain his tears. But restrain them he could not; and they were not unmanly tears—they did him honor."

After the great review of Grant's and Sherman's armies in Washington, Lieut. Wight returned to civil life. About 1874 he went to Colorado to live, and has since prospered. He resided and resides in Trinidad. He organized and for seven years controlled, the First National Bank of Trinidad now one of the sound and stable financial institutions of the state. He likewise invested largely in sheep of high grades, and owns an extensive ranch, 30 miles in length by an average of 10 miles, in New Mexico. His clipping in 1885 amounted to 150,000 pounds of wool. In 1886 he was prominently mentioned for nomination as governor of Colorado, by the Republicans, and his name was presented to the convention, but the nomination went in another direction. From what I have heard of Colorado politics in the fall of 1886, it is much to Mr. Wight's credit that he was not nominated.

897. AMHERST[7] WIGHT (Amherst[6], Eliab[5], Elnathan[4], Joseph[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born August 15, 1828, was a lawyer in New York. His school advantages were very limited, and were ended at his thirteenth year, yet he applied himself assiduously to study and became proficient in all the English branches of education. He became also apt in the classics—an acquirement which offered much solace to his later years. When about 15 years of age he began the study of the law and was admitted to the bar upon attaining his majority after an examination which indicated conscientious and thorough application. For many years he practiced in New York, where he had an office in connection with his father. In April, 1856, he married Adelaide Augusta Louis Griswold, born November 28, 1827, daughter of Daniel

S. and Mary Anne (Dunham) Griswold. In 1869 he removed his office to Port Chester, Westchester County, N. Y., where he resided. There his office and home remained until his death; his practice after his removal being mostly in Westchester County. On May 15, 1864, his wife died. On June 20, 1867, he married Ellen, daughter of John and Margaret Abendroth. Her father had been an iron-monger in Darmstadt, but had emigrated to this country to avoid the conscription of his sons into the German army. In 1871, out of deference to the wishes of a large portion of the citizens of his town, Amherst accepted the Republican nomination for supervisor and was triumphantly elected, although the Democratic vote largely preponderated in the town. To the same office he was re-elected the following year by a large majority. In 1873 he accepted the nomination of the same party for the assembly in his district, which was Democratic by about 700. His personal popularity elected him by a small majority, and his course during his first term at Albany caused his re-election by an increased vote. When he was assemblyman he served on some of the most important committees of the house. During his legislative career I made his acquaintance and found that the engrossments of political life did not obliterate his interest in the subject of his ancestry and distant kin. In 1876 he was defeated for Congress by four votes. He was a member of the Episcopal Church. He died in Port Chester, June 28, 1877. His widow survives.

In a copy of the Port Chester Journal now before me, printed in September, 1877, I find the proceedings of the Westchester bar, at a meeting September 21, 1887, relative to the death of Amherst Wight. I wish my space permitted their transcription at length. I extract a few sentences from the remarks of Elisha P. Ferris and Martin J. Keogh:

"Mr. Wight was popular with all classes. Generous to a fault, candid and courteous in his intercourse with his fellow men, he endeared himself to all with whom he became acquainted or associated in the relations of life. The gentleness of his nature and urbanity of manners assured the humblest that in him they had a true and sympathizing friend. He possessed true nobility of soul, and was endowed with more than average natural ability. His calm, dignified, and earnest manner in debate, whether in the legislative hall or at the bar, won the admiration of his friends and the respect of his opponents. He loved the truth, and whether engaged in the conflicts of the political arena, or to him the more sanguine struggles of the forum, preferred defeat rather than success won by the perversion of the truth, or the sacrifice of principle. A writer, speaking of him while a member of the legislature of 1873, says: 'He shows upon the floor much less of the politician than of the lawyer, while he brings to the discussion of the important legal topics of the present session extensive learning fortified by large experience and exhaustive reading.' "

"His home was radiant with the reflection of his own placid nature; his social intercourse was marked by the easy grace and unaffected finish of the true American gentleman; his advocacy in the courts was controlled by candor and exalted by dignity, signalized by a deference to the court, unbroken courtesy to his opponent, cold contempt for personalities, and unwavering fealty to his clients at all times, hazards and sacrifices."

"In Port Chester, which was his home and where he was regarded with an affection filial, there are many, many households to which his honest counsel brought comfort and conciliation, many poor and wronged for whom unrequited he labored long and faithfully, when his only retainer was the impulse of a kind heart, and his only final fee, the fervent 'God bless you,' of his penniless client."

"These acts, unforgotten by his brethren, are the inspiration of this day's proceedings here, and are remembered to Amherst Wight in the judgment roll of the great hereafter. To have lived and won this day's tribute is to have gained a golden guerdon."

The remarks of Judge Dykman follow in full:

"The Court is in full accord with what has been said. It would seem eminently fitting and proper that when a man of the character and respectability of Mr. Wight in the profession departs from life, some public recognition should be had of his services. Mr. Wight was a man of high character and standing in the profession. As has been remarked, he was just about entering upon the full fruition of his experience, and in the future would have been able to render even more service to his clients and to the profession than he had done in the past. But it was the will of Providence that he should be taken away, and we have to mourn his loss. His example is one to be emulated by the younger members of the bar.

"The order of the Court is, that these proceedings be spread upon the minutes of the Court, and that a copy be sent to Mrs. Wight; and as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the Court will now adjourn until Monday next, at 10 o'clock."

Note. Mr. Wight graduated from the New York Free Academy (now the college of the City of New York) with the degree of A. B., in July, 1855. He studied architecture under Thomas R. Jackson, and entered in practice in 1857. In 1858 he removed to Chicago and continued his profession there but returned to New York the next year. Between 1862 and 1871 his office was at 98 Broadway, New York. In 1862 he furnished the designs for the New York Academy of Design. During this same period of nine years he erected many other public buildings and likewise private buildings. Among the public buildings were the Yale School of fine arts in New Haven and the Mercantile Library in Brooklyn. In 1866 he became fellow of the American Institute of Architects. Soon after the great fire in Chicago he returned to that city and formed a partnership with Asher Carter and William H. Drake. The firm of Carter, Drake & Wight did a considerable part of the rebuilding of that stricken city. Among later work done by Mr. Wight were the designs for the interior decoration of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Milwaukee, Wis., a church which melted away in fierce fire on the morning of December 31, 1887. A cut of the entrance to the Academy of Design in New York can be found in Appleton's Cyclo. of Amer. Biog., VI, 502. This work also states that Mr. Wight planned, in 1862, the first army hospital built by the government during the civil war. In 1864 he erected the building of the Union Square branch in New York of the Sanitary Fair, and managed it till its close. In 1868, with the late Henry H. Richardson, he designed the American Express building, Chicago. In 1868 he invented great improvements in the construction of fire-proof buildings. In 1874 he took out a patent for rendering iron columns fire-proof, and has since taken out other patents for improving buildings and bridges. He has published "National Academy of Design Building," with photographic illustrations (N. Y., 1865), and "One Phase in the Revival of Fine Arts in America" (Chicago, 1886). See Clement & Hutton's Artists of the Nineteenth Century, 351; Appleton's Cyclo. of Amer. Biog., VI, 501.

923. JOSHUA MORSE[7] WIGHT (Oliver[6], David[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born March 30, 1804, went from Sturbridge to Boston about 1823–4 and engaged in business. He had a sailors' supply depot, and became owner of some vessels. After some fifteen years in Boston difficulties arose, he lost his business, and became a wanderer. About 1850 a former Sturbridge schoolmate found him in New York, an exceedingly eccentric character—a peddler of hay and straw. Twice afterwards this same friend traced him up in New York and Brooklyn. Each time he seemed more eccentric and reticent, living a life of lonely wretchedness. His neighbors regarded him as a harmless miser, whose only desire was to be alone. He died August 15, 1878. I am indebted for these particulars to Mr. Tracy C. Drake, of the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago, whose grandfather, Mr. Corey, was the schoolmate above mentioned. From another source I learn that Joshua Wight, "the straw man," died at Bellevue Hospital, claiming to be worth thousands of dollars. To all inquiries for details his invariable answer was, "I will tell you to-morrow," and he died before to-morrow came.

He married there, November 3, 1816, Lydia[7] Marsh, of the same place, born there February 2, 1794. Festus and Lydia celebrated their golden wedding in 1866, but Lydia did not long survive the occasion. She died January 9, 1867, in Sturbridge. Festus died there July 13, 1874. Their children were born in Sturbridge.

Note. Marsh: John Marshe was among the passengers who took the oaths of allegiance preliminary to passage to New England in the Mary and John, of London, March 24, 1633. (Register, IX, 267.) He may have been the ancestor of John Marsh, of Boston, who had a son Joseph, born February 3, 1671. Joseph, March 2, 1693, married Ann Thurogood. It is probable that John Marsh, of Medfield, was the John Marsh born August 2, 1696, son of said Joseph and Ann. John, of Medfield, married October 6, 1719, Martha Hartshorn, of Dedham, and had the son John Marsh (November 24, 1720—April 2, 1788,) who married Lydia[5] Smith (37). Robert Tucker, about 1635, was in Weymouth, Mass., where his nine children were born. When Milton was laid out, in 1662, he removed there and passed the remainder of his life. He died aged 80, March 9, 1682-3. His third son, Benjamin Tucker, born in 1646, married Ann, daughter of Edward Payson, of Dorchester, and settled in Roxbury, where he had eleven children. In 1686, with eight others of Roxbury, Benjamin bought the township of Spencer, which included the present town of Leicester, and perhaps part of Paxton. The same persons also bought, in the same year, the town of Hardwick, both purchases being made from two Indian sachems, who claimed to own the territory. Benjamin had a son Jonathan, born May 11, 1675. In 1724 Jonathan and his brother William had a deed of a farm in the Gore (83), which Tuckers still own. Jonathan, who died January 18, 1750, had by wife Hannah a son Jonathan, born May 27, 1707. This last married January 13, 1732, Martha Jackson, and had a daughter Anne, wife of James Corbin (Note 2). Jonathan, Jr., died November 17, 1789, and was buried in Charlton: Martha died aged 64, November 23, 1774.

969. MOSES[7] WIGHT (Charles[6], Moses[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born April 2, 1827, began the practice of art as a profession in Boston in 1845. He first became known to fame during his first visit to Europe (1851–1854) by painting in 1852 the portrait of Alexander von Humboldt then about 82 years old. In Tuckerman's Book of the Artists, 504, I find the following account of this incident, which is approved as correct by Mr. Wight:

Desirous while in Europe to produce the portrait of some person of note and well-known in America, it was suggested to Mr. Wight to select that of Baron von Humboldt. Accordingly, with this purpose in view, and a letter of introduction from one of the most eminent orators in the United States, he called, while in Berlin, upon the Hon. D. D. Barnard, the able and accomplished Minister from the United States, then at the Court of Prussia. Seeing before him a mere beardless boy Mr. Barnard, notwithstanding the testimonials of his genius and character, could hardly help the expression of a wish for some specimen of the talent of so young an artist, before assuming the responsibility of asking the Baron to sit for his picture. But Mr. Wight had no specimen with him. All he could do was immediately to propose to paint the American Minister himself. Mr. Barnard as immediately accepted the invitation. In a few days Mr. Wight completed his task. At the next of those elegant receptions, which were regularly given by the American Minister, the portrait was hung upon the wall. Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen were in attendance. They were filled with surprise and admiration. With one accord they pronounced it a perfect success, and without delay Mr. Barnard, true to his word and countryman, communicated the request to the Baron. The proposition of the young American artist brought a thousand reminiscences to the mind of Humboldt, who, however soon terminated all suspense or fear of denial by giving in his own frank and genial manner the much desired affirmative reply. The matter soon became known and excited a lively curiosity, particularly among some of the American residents and students, an unusually large number of whom were at that season in Berlin. Mr. Wight occupied a small room in Französisch Strasse, and its entire contents embraced little more than a few chairs, a borrowed easel, a set of colors and brushes, and a piece of canvas stretched upon a frame. There were to be five sittings—Mr. Wight requiring no more. Of von Humboldt promptness is a well-known characteristic, and punctual to a minute the Baron came on each appointed day to the temporary and unpretending studio of the American artist. He was always driven there in the same vehicle and always accompanied by the same confidential valet who attended him up stairs, and then either left or paced back and forth along the corridor or in the courtyard, until the allotted hour and a half for sitting within expired, when the valet instantly appeared and knocked at the door in obedience to the previous command of his master who, as instantly arose, and politely taking his leave departed. Few painters, perhaps, are more alive to the importance, not to say the necessity, of having all things in readiness against the arrival of a patron than Mr. Wight, and he invariably held pallet and pencil in hand and as invariably began his delineations the moment the Baron was seated; and inspired, as it were, by the presence of so noble and illustrious a subject he wrought with such zeal, felicity, power and effect as to complete every part of the work upon the day agreed upon, and thus gave to the world his famous portrait of Baron von Humboldt, the profoundest and most renowned philosopher, if not the most wonderful man, of his age. Many persons, citizens and strangers, as well as artists, now paid their respects to Mr. Wight. Among the latter may be mentioned Cornelius, whose magnificent cartoons and frescoes in church, palace and cathedral have emblazoned his name throughout all Germany; and Rauch, that immortal sculptor, whose colossal statue of Frederick the Great, which was being constructed for so many years and at such an immense expense, which was inaugurated with so much pomp and ceremony in the presence of the Emperor and his Court, the flower of the Princes of the blood, of the nobles and of the army and all the ecclesiastical and civil functionaries and dignitaries of the Empire, and a countless multitude of other citizens, and which statue has scarcely, either in its design or execution, any parallel in modern times. These, and other artists and friends of Humboldt, came to see the new portrait and, having beheld it, to take Mr. Wight by the hand and express to him their surprise and gratification. Nothing would do but the portrait must be deposited in the Grand Hall of the Art Union in Berlin. Here it was placed upon an easel by itself, in a most conspicuous position for general view and examination, and here it was gazed at from day to day, and its merits and effects discussed in almost every tongue and shade of commendation.

After exhibition at the Art Union the portrait was sent to the United States. It was engraved by Schoff and published by Goupil & Co., of New York. The original is now owned by the artist. He made two copies of the portrait—one for the Longfellow Literary Club of Portland, and one now owned by the American Antiquarian Society of Worcester.

The remainder of Mr. Wight's time in Europe after painting the Humboldt was spent in Rome. Returning to Boston in 1854 he devoted most of his time to portrait painting. Among the noted Americans besides Hon. D. D. Barnard, who sat to him, were Edward Everett (engraved by Smith), original now in Faneuil Hall, Boston; Charles Sumner, canvas presented at the time to the Mechanics' Library Association of Boston; Josiah Quincy, painting owned by the Massachusetts Historical Society; Professor Louis Agassiz; Thomas Dowse; Governor Washburn of Massachusetts, original at Harvard University; Vice-President Henry Wilson; James Savage, President of the Massachusetts Historical Society; Professor Pierce and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

In 1860 Mr. Wight studied in France under Couture, and as a result of this influence he executed two large ideal works, "The Sleeping Beauty" and "Eve at the Fountain." A third trip to Europe was made in 1865. Returning again to this country he had his studio in Boston. In the great fire of 1872 his studio was burned with many valuable canvases, the results of much time and labor. In the summer of 1873 he returned to Paris with the express purpose of studying and painting interiors, with figures, draperies and the like. He has remained abroad ever since and is practically a citizen of Paris. Among his genre subjects, most of which are owned in Boston and New York, are:

Les Confidants, Lisette, The Sixteenth Century, Pet's First Cake, John Alden and Priscilla, Le Vestibule, The Old Cuirassier, Convalescent, Family Devotion, The First Lesson, Evangeline (owned by F. C. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis, Minn.), Old Heads and Young Hearts, Little Nell in the Old Church.

On September 9, 1886, Mr. Wight married Madame Léonide Labat (née Lagesquet), born March 14, 1831, at Salies de Bearn (Basses Pyrénées), France, daughter of Jacques and Marianne (Souvira) Lagesquet. Mr. Wight's residence is 49 Boulevard Rochechouart, Paris. See Clement & Hutton's Artists of the 19th Century, 351; Appleton's Cyclo. of Am. Biog., VI, 501.

976. PELETIAH[7] WIGHT (Peletiah[6], Simeon[5], Jonathan[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born August 31, 1800, learned the trade of a tanner and currier, and after serving his time he formed with his youngest brother a partnership, under the name of P. & Z. D. Wight, as tanners and curriers. Their tannery and shops were about one mile and a half west of West Woodstock Village. They were energetic and ambitious men and their business gradually developed and ramified into a wholesale shoe manufactory. The credit belongs to these brothers of establishing the first manufactory of ready-made shoes in Connecticut. They had a large trade with Boston, New York and the far South. A country store was also a part of their business. For seven years, say from 1830 to 1837, they flourished, but the financial crisis of 1837, which carried down many older and stronger houses, involved them also in the common ruin. Their debtors, especially in the South, could not meet their obligations, and the firm of P. & Z. D. Wight was no more. See Miss Larned's History of Windham County, II, 532. After the failure Peletiah went to New York, where he was proprietor and successful manager of the New England Hotel then at 111 Broadway, and later of the Park Hotel in the same city. Peletiah married April 18, 1831, Sarah Winchester Lyon, daughter of Aaron and Mary (Marsh) Lyon, of Woodstock. Peletiah died in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., February 19, 1879, and is buried at Saratoga, N. Y. His widow died in the summer of 1882.

Charles and Sarah (Perry) Smith. She died in West Woodstock, April 19, 1838. Harviland seems to have been connected in some degree with his brothers' wide interests, and after their failure and the death of his wife he took up his abode in Mount Sterling, Ky., where he started in the manufacturing business. He died there, April 10, 1840.

After these events Zenas remained in Woodstock, cleared up the wreck and lived there until 1854. He then went to New York and engaged in the flour and feed business with his son-in-law, Henry Josiah Leland. After a few years, on account of his grandchildren, he removed to Greenwich, Conn. Edward Pearson graduated at the Divinity School, Harvard, 1849, was ordained an evangelist at Boston in June, 1849, and resided in Kauai, one of the Sandwich Islands, from December, 1849, to May, 1862. He was paymaster of the Massachusetts State bounties in 1863–4, and in 1872 became Secretary of the Shoe and Leather Association of Boston, with residence at West Newton. Their children were born in the Sandwich Islands. Sarah Bond died October 16, 1878. She had in earlier days been the instructor of Laura Bridgman, and it may be truthfully said, had more than any one to do with the improvement of this blind girl. Upon Mrs. Bond's death Laura's grief was very great, but they are both now beyond the fear or need of tears.

Josiah and Sarah were parents of William Bond (May 7, 1765—November, 1842), deacon of Millbury church, who married March 28, 1792, Sarah Waters. Their son was Alvan Bond, husband of Sarah[7] Richardson (21). Alvan resigned from Bangor Theo. Sem. (see 21) in 1835, and was installed over Congregational church, Norwich. He was dismissed in 1864 on account of his ill health (Bond's Watertown, 72; Hurd's New London County, 370; Jameson's Medway, 344).

He then taught school two years. In 1842 he opened a country store. In Bristol, R. I., October 9, 1845, he married Clara Scollay, of Ashburnham, Mass., born September 12, 1824, daughter of Grover and Sallie (Stowell) Scollay. In 1850 he removed to Newton, Decatur County, Ga., where he continued his store, and by energy, industry and probity, gained the respect of all the citizens and acquired quite a large fortune. In 1858 he moved to Albany, Ga., and upon the breaking out of the war in 1861 he removed to Lawrenceville in the same state. "The call to arms for the defense of the South, the land of his adoption, found no more patriotic purpose than animated him, and he enlisted and left for active service in the Virginia campaigns." In July, 1861, he raised a company of volunteers and joined the 16th Georgia infantry, commanded by Howell Cobb. During the two years of his active engagement he rose to the rank of colonel. He was taken prisoner July 23, 1864, and was confined on Johnson's Island, Lake Erie. After nine months he was released on parole. After his return South he removed to West End, near Atlanta, an organized and chartered town. He was three years a member of its council and in 1872 mayor. Later his pleasant home there was broken up and he returned to Albany, Ga., where he died of paralysis, December 15, 1886. He was a Mason and a member of the Legion of Honor. He "was a christian gentleman and enforced a recognition of his piety upon all with whom he came in contact." His widow survives.

She had four children, one of whom, Frank D.[8] Alden, lives in Rockingham, N. C., another child was Adeline[8] Alden. Clarissa died at Rockfish, N. C., June 8, 1861 (Alden's Alden Memorial, 121).

Note. Alden: This is not the book to chronicle at length the history of John Alden and his wife Priscilla. I note but briefly that John Alden was one of the Mayflower passengers, "the stripling who first leaped upon the rock" at Plymouth, as his descendant, President Adams, claimed. But see Winsor's Duxbury, 55. Of his courtship of Priscilla Molines, or Mullins, prose has told us (Thayer's Family Memorial, 9), and Uke has poetry (Longfellow's Courtship of Miles Standish). John Alden resided in Plymouth for a few years, and then settled in Duxbury. He was one of the Court of Assistants in 163[illegible], and for a number of years. From 1641 to 1649 he represented Duxbury in the Old Colony General Court. From 1650 to 1686 he was again of the Court of Assistants. He died September 12, 1686, aged 87, the last of the Pilgrim Fathers. For an elegy on John Alden, and an anagram (END ALL ON HI), both full of Rev. John Cotton's quaint conceits, see Alden's Epitaphs, III, 264; Thayer's Family Memorial 11, 13; Winsor's Duxbury, 60. For added details of this patriarch, consult Vinton's Symmes Memorial, 70; Vinton's Vinton Memorial, 289; Shurtleff's Records of New Plymouth: Alden's Alden Memorial; Bradford's Plymouth; Prince's Chronology, II, 98; Winsor's Duxbury, 55, 213; Goodwin's Pilgrim Republic; Moore's Governors of New Plymouth; Harper's Monthly, LIV, 180, 193.

Among the eleven children of John and Priscilla Alden were:

1. DAVID ALDEN, representative of Duxbury for many years in the Old Colony Court, and one of the Assistants in 1690. He married Mary Southworth (Winsor's Duxbury, 314). Henry Alden, whose wife was Deborah, was probably one of David's children. Henry and Deborah were parents of Susanna Alden, who married Thomas Kinch January 31, 1734, and later, Daniel[4] Wight (52). Susanna's brother John, of Needham (Register XXXVI, 85; Suffolk Probate Records XXVII, 486; XXVIII, 538), married November 26, 1728, Thankful Parker, and had a son born 1736 known as Deacon Silas, of Needham, who died 1826. By his wife, Margaret Capron, Silas had a son, Amasa Alden (March 29, 1772—December 7, 1857), a farmer in Dedham, who married 1793 Martha, daughter of Benjamin Davenport. Amasa had a son named Amasa, born in 1812, who married Clarissa Ann[7] Wight, above.
2. JOSEPH ALDEN (1624—February 8, 1697), a farmer and one of the settlers of Bridgewater, married Mary, daughter of Moses Simmons, Jr. (see Mitchell's Bridgewater). Their son, Deacon Joseph (1667—December 22, 1747), a farmer in Bridgewater, married in 1690 Hannah, daughter of Daniel Dunham, of Plymouth. She died aged 78, January 13, 1748. Deacon Joseph's oldest child, Daniel Alden (January 29, 1691—May 3, 1767), removed to Stafford, Conn., where he was a farmer and magistrate. He married in 1717 Abigail, daughter of Joseph Shaw. She died aged 61, July 12, 1755. Daniel's oldest son, Joseph (November 20, 1718—January 2, 1768), married in 1742 Susanna, daughter of Solomon Packard, and died at Worcester, Mass., on a journey. Joseph had a son, Captain Joseph Alden (May 9, 1753—January 1, 1832), of Stafford, who married February 28, 1782, Lydia Hyde (January 6, 1761—February 7, 1839), of Stafford, daughter of Ephraim and Martha (Giddings) Hyde, and granddaughter of Captain Jacob and Hannah (Kingsbury 318, Note 1 Hyde. Captain Joseph Alden had a daughter, Lydia Hyde Alden, who married Jabez Wight[7] Giddings (274); and a son, Joseph Alden, who married Lucy[7] Giddings (274).—Another son of Joseph and Mary (Simmons) Alden, of Bridgewater, was John. He removed from Bridgewater to Middleborough, where he died, aged 56, September 29, 1730. His wife was Hannah (May 12, 1681—October 5, 1732, daughter of Captain Ebenezer White, of Weymouth. Of their thirteen children I note two, David (May 18, 1702—August 24, 1763), and Joseph (September 11, 1716—April 1, 1742). David married Judith Paddleford, who died aged 94 in 1802, and had a daughter, Abigail Alden (May 19, 1744—January 25, 1845), who married Zephaniah Leonard (196, Note 2: correct Sanford's King Family, 7). Clarissa Leonard, their daughter, married Henry[5] Wight (196). For an account of the centenarian Abigail (Aldeu) Leonard, see Sanford's Abigail Alden Leonard: Christian

Register, Boston, March 25, 1845. David's brother, Joseph Alden, married April 1, 1742, Hannah Hall, and had a son Eliab, of Cairo, N. Y., born about 1762, who married Mary Hathaway. Their son, Charles Henry Alden, married Alice Burrington[6] Wight (423).

3. ELIZABETH ALDEN, died in her 94th year, May 31, 1717, widow of William Peabody, of Duxbury and of Little Compton, R. I. I mention her, although not connected with the Wights, that this volume may be ornamented with the inscription upon her tomb at Little Compton: "Here lyeth the Body of Elizabeth Pabodie, who dyed May ye 31st, 1717, and in the 94th year of age." The old slab is now inclosed in a new tomb, containing this inscription:

"A bird from Plymouth's Mayflower sprung,
Transplanted here to live and bloom,
Her memory, ever sweet and young,
The centuries guard beneath this tomb."

1001. GEORGE SHUBAEL[7] WIGHT (Shubael[6], Oliver[5], William[4], Jonathan[3], Samuel[2], Thomas[1]), born September 6, 1816, married in Jersey City, N. J., February 20, 1862, Mary C. Burlingame, born in Keene, N. H., February 11, 1830. No children. Residence, Matteawan, N. Y.

Y., October 4, 1846, Elizabeth Matilda Ball, born on the same day as her husband, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Russell) Ball. Samuel is a carpenter and joiner. In May, 1849, he removed to Chicago, but the cholera prevailing he remained but eight weeks, and then removed to Marquette, Wis. In less than a year he removed to Dartford, Green Lake Co., Wis., where were then more Indians than whites, and where the forest trees had to be cleared to make room for dwellings. In the first house built in this forest all Samuel's children, except the eldest, were born. While residing in Dartford his father came to reside with him. The father died in Dartford June 17, 1860, as the result of a fall from his buggy—an unmanageable horse running away on Spalding's Hill, Ripon. Samuel and his family removed to West Depere, Wis., in November, 1872.

Note. The accompanying is a sketch of the principal events in the life of Dr. Wight:

"The late Dr. Nahum Wight, of Gilmanton, the leading country physician of New Hampshire, who died on the 12th inst. of paralysis, was born in Gilead, Me., November 20, 1807. He studied medicine with Dr. John Grover, of Bethel, Me.; attended his first course of lectures at Bowdoin Medical School in the spring of 1830, his second course at the Dartmouth Medical School in the fall of 1831, and a third course at Bowdoin Medical School in the spring of 1832, at which time he was graduated as a doctor of medicine. In November of the same year he commenced the practice of his profession in Gilmanton. He was married to Mary Straw, daughter of Gideon Straw, of Newfield, Me., September 2, 1833. He was a representative to the Legislature in 1841-42-43. He had traveled extensively in Europe, and had delivered numerous interesting lectures on his foreign observations in various parts of the state. In 1837 he began collecting anatomical materials, and at the time of his death had in his possession many valuable preparations in both healthy and morbid anatomy. Upwards of 100 students, some of them now eminent in their profession, had received instructions from him. Had Dr. Wight settled in New York, Boston or any other large city, he would have taken rank as a leading physician. He was a man of great natural ability, and his life had been one of unremitting activity and usefulness. True to his convictions, of great firmness of purpose, he commanded the respect of all who knew him. In private life he was genial and kindly, and a vein of genuine wit pervaded his speech, making him one of the most entertaining of companions, while he was always the best of friends and neighbors. His death is a great loss to the medical profession of New Hampshire, and the large section of Belknap county where he had for many years so ably and successfully practiced."

A more extended notice of the character of Dr. Wight was contained in a sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Greeley of Gilmanton, of which the Laconia Evening Democrat of June 10, 1884, contains the following extract:

"It has been a remarkable and unusual life! Fifty-two years of medical practice in one town,—by night and day, in heat and cold, in sunshine and storm, in strength and in weariness! He came here a young man fresh from medical study. He looked upon and was concerned with the venerable fathers and mothers long since dead. He had care of their children: and as they branched out into families, of children's children—and of children's children's children, till he seemed as one that had been always here, and was always to remain.

"Then, by augmenting experience and successful practice, Dr. Wight won esteem and fame in the ranks of his brotherhood, the medical faculty, throughout the state and abroad. An unusual number of young men resorted to his home for medical instruction, and they have since attained success and honors. One hundred students in by-gone years have gone out from under his teaching, fitted wholly or in part for entrance at the medical colleges.

"With the increase of years and skill, it was as a matter of course that Dr. Wight should be often called out to meet his brethren in consultations. They appreciated his growing knowledge and wisdom, and the experience that comes through lengthened years. We have often talked together of the trying exigencies he had passed through, when 'heroic practice' or the most skillful surgical operations must be risked for sufferers from sudden and frightful woundings, or from morbid accretions, the growth of years. In amputations he was calm, rapid and clean. In hazardous cases demanding clear discernment and the utmost nicety he was an operator of marked success. He was honored by election as president of the N. H. Medical Society, an evident token of the esteem and confidence of the profession. In the civil and educational affairs of the town, Dr. Wight has been called to fill important and honorable positions. In three successive years, '41 to '43, the town sent him representative to the state legislature. In 1851 he was called to the Board of Trustees of the venerable Gilmanton Academy, and held the office till his death, thirty-three years. November 10th, 1870, he was elected treasurer, which office he has held nearly fourteen years. As to Christian character, Dr. Wight never made an open profession: but in the intimacy which has been mine from circumstances the past few years, of course I have learned something. For three years past he has but occasionally occupied his seat in this house of worship. He was, as he often told me, in that condition of health that there was a risk about it. But he had a strong sense of the importance of a religious organization to the welfare of every community."

1191. ORLANDO WILLIAMS[7] WIGHT (Uzziel[6], Levi[5], Levi[4], Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born February 19, 1824, began his education at the district school in Centreville, N. Y., which he attended at such odd times as he could be spared from the farm. At ten years of age, discovering among his father's old books a treatise on algebra, he applied himself unaided to its study, and mastered it before he was eleven. At twelve he left home to attend a select school, where he remained about six months. During this time he acquired the then entire West Point series of mathematics. Then until he was 15 years of age he studied unaided at home. About 1839–40 his father moved from Centreville to within four miles of Westfield, Chautauqua County, N. Y. To the academy at Westfield young Orlando walked every day for several months, employed in the study of Latin and Greek. After having laid a foundation for the study of the classics under an instructor, he continued these branches at home, during the pauses of farm labor. At 20 he graduated at the collegiate institution, Rochester, N. Y., and soon became teacher of Latin and Greek in Genoa Academy, Cayuga County, N. Y. After one year here he resigned to become instructor of mathematics and languages at Cayuga Academy, Aurora. In 1847 he accepted the presidency of Auburn Female Seminary. On account of religious differences with the trustees, he resigned this position after a short incumbency, and went to New York to enter upon a literary career. He was soon employed in the literary department of the Democratic Review, and subsequently of the Whig Review. His contributions to these publications won him a reputation as a scholar and vigorous writer. At about this time Dr. Wight became interested in theological subjects, and beginning with Leibnitz, completed a full course of theology. He was ordained a minister by Dr. E. H. Chapin of New York, but kept aloof from all creeds and refused to join any church. For three years he was religious instructor in Newark, N. J., to a society of Unitarians, Universalists and Swedenborgians, his discourses being philosophical essays rather than sermons. From Newark Dr. Wight went to Boston, where for two years he employed his time with reading, writing and lecturing on various topics. His study was, however, mostly devoted to metaphysics. During these two years he wrote Lives and Letters of Abelard and Heloise, published in New York, 1853, and (with F. W. Ricord) translated Victor Cousin's Course of the History of Modern Philosophy, published in two volumes, N. Y. 1853, and Edinburgh. He also collected and published Sir William Hamilton's Philosophical Papers, with introduction and explanatory notes. In the spring of 1853 Dr. Wight visited Europe, passing the summer months in the British isles. Here he had many agreeable interviews with distinguished authors, including especially De Quincey. The fall of 1853 he spent in London in translating for a British publishing house Cousin's Lectures on the True, the Beautiful and the Good, increased by an appendix on French art (translated with the approbation of Cousin), New York and Edinburgh, 1854. The following winter he spent in Paris, where letters of introduction from distingnished sources in England gained him admission into the polished society of the Faubourg St. Germain, a rare enjoyment for strangers. In the spring of 1854 Dr. Wight returned to America, only again to cross to Europe for a more extended tour. This visit lasted four years. During this trip he published, as he informed me, an anonymous novel in two volumes, the name of which has not yet been disclosed. Returning to this country he lived at Rye, Westchester County, N. Y. He became a regular contributor to the New Englander, North American Review and other periodicals, and was made in 1859 a corresponding member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society. In 1859, and following years, he edited (and translated some volumes) fourteen volumes of The Standard French Classics, comprising Chateaubriand, De Staël, Fénelon, La Fontaine, Montaigne, Pascal and Voltaire. His edition of Montaigne is the best English translation of that author. His rendering of De Staël's Germany also ranks very high. During the same period he edited the Household Library in 18 volumes, containing, among others, lives of Cæsar, Vittoria Colonna, Columbus, Joan of Arc, Milton, Mohammed, Pitt, Socrates and Tasso. In 1860 and following years he translated with F. B. Goodrich, Balzac's novels, 6 volumes, and in 1861 he published enlarged Lives and Letters of Abelard and Heloise. In the same year Secretary Seward tendered him the Swiss mission, which he declined. In the immediately succeeding years he studied medicine and took the degree of Doctor of Medicine from Long Island College Hospital in 1865. He also found time to study law and was admitted to the bar. During the year 1863 he translated with Mary L. Booth, Henri Martin's History of France, volumes 13–16, the earlier volumes not being translated. The two years prior to the close of the war Dr. Wight resided upon an estate which he purchased in Carbondale, Pa., taking an active part in politics. Soon after the war he removed to New Albany, Ind., and thence about 1868–9 to Oconomowoc, Wis. After practicing medicine in the latter place four years, he removed to Milwaukee, and was for a time editorial writer on the Milwaukee Sentinel. In 1873 he took an active part in organizing the elements opposed to the Republican party in Wisconsin—an opposition which resulted in the election of a Democratic governor in a strong Republican state, and which brought upon Dr. Wight's head torrents of abuse and ridicule from the defeated party. In 1874 Dr. Wight was appointed state geologist of Wisconsin and surgeon general of the state, with the rank of brigadier. In 1878 he was appointed health officer of Milwaukee, and during his four and one-half years of service his reports attracted general attention. In 1882 he edited and published a life of Peter the Great, in two volumes. In 1884 D. Appleton & Co. published his Maxims of Public Health. Resigning his health commissionership in Milwaukee, he accepted a similar position in Detroit, Mich., which he held somewhat more than five years, resigning in the spring of 1887. While in Detroit he brought about a partial renovation of the sewerage system and accomplished the construction of a hospital for contagious diseases. In May, 1887, he left New York for a trip aronnd the world, and upon his return embodied his observations in his Peoples and Countries Visited in a Winding Journey Round the World, which Houghton, Mifflin & Co. published in 1888, and which has received on the whole favorable criticism. See The Critic, April 6, 1889; Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, September 27, 1888; Springfield Republican, January 2, 1889. Dr. Wight died in Detroit, October 19, 1888, as the result of malarial fever, contracted in New Zealand during his last trip. His first wife was Sarah E. Whitmore of New Haven, Conn. Discovering after marriage her incurable insanity, he secured a divorce, adopted her as his daughter and tenderly supported her while she lived. She has been until recently, with the sisters of charity in Milwaukee. By his second marriage Dr. Wight had three children all of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Wight died in Oconomwoc. Dr. Wight received the degree of A. M. from Yale College in 1861, and was tendered the chair of modern languages in one New England College, of history in another and of metaphysics in a third. He was a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, a member of the British medical association, a corresponding member of the New York Medico-legal society, and an honorary member of the New York society of medical jurisprudence. 1223. THEODA[7] WIGHT (Jacob[6], Jacob[5], John[4], Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born in 1786, married Benjamin Person, and lived and died in Edinburgh, N. Y. I know of one son, Edson[8] Person, who married Sallie B.——. Upon his death she married Orson[7] Wight (1231).

1224. THADDEUS[7] WIGHT (Jacob[6], Jacob[5], John[4], Nathaniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born June 8, 1788, is somewhat traceable by land conveyances in Londonderry, Windham Co., Vt., before his mother's family moved to Edinburgh. On February 2, 1814, Thaddeus Wight, of Windham, conveyed a tract of land to Adolphus Pierce (1225). On June 10, 1814, Adolphus Pierce made a deed to Thaddeus Wight, of Edinburgh, Saratoga County, N. Y. On the same date the same land was leased by Thaddeus to Ebenezer Gale, of Windham, which said land was conveyed in fee to said Gale July 9, 1816, by Thaddeus Wight, of Mayfield, Montgomery (now Fulton) County, N. Y. On August 24, 1820, Thaddeus Wight, of Londonderry, made several transfers, by deed and mortgage, of property in Londonderry, and July 15, 1839, Thaddeus Wight, of Jonesville, Hillsdale County, Michigan, conveyed to Laura J. Whitney, of Londonderry, lands therein. These transfers, and the birth places of the children, indicate the desire of Thaddeus to find a satisfactory home for his constantly growing family. It was in February, 1822, that he moved to Euclid, Ohio, and in 1830 he was the second settler in Jonesville, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and the fifth in Hillsdale County. He married Lucinda, born in Chesterfield Township N. H., August 9, 1792, daughter of Emory and Eleanor (Hutchins) Washburn. Lucinda died in Jonesville September 7, 1832. Thaddeus died July 27, 1859.

He was of Wardsboro, Vt. In 1814 Adolphus and his wife were duly "warned" (337) to leave Windham—a frequent custom in those close corporations to prevent settlement and possible liability of support by the town. The family moved to Saratoga County, N. Y., and thence to Ohio.

He was a man of sterling integrity, and held in high esteem. He was every one's Uncle Orson, and by general consent was the neighborhood referee. Differences in the community were at once referred to Uncle Orson's adjudication, and no one was ever heard to question the wisdom of his decision. His first wife, Irena Manning, was born August 30, 1804, married February 20, 1831, and died in Edinburgh February 21, 1848. He married second in July, 1849, Mrs. Louisa K. 1234. DANIEL[7] WIGHT (Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born September 18, 1808, Harvard University 1837, Andover Theological Seminary 1840. He was Abbott resident at Andover 1841, was ordained pastor of the First Trinitarian Congregational Church, Scituate, September 28, 1842, but was dismissed therefrom on account of his wife's illness, May 1, 1858. During this residence he printed a pamphlet history of this earliest of Congregational churches. Subsequently he supplied different pulpits, including that at Boyleston nearly two years, and labored temporarily among the Indians in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., for the American Board, until on June 22, 1864, he was installed over the church at Ashburnham. From here he was dismissed April 1, 1871, and removed to Natick, where he has since resided. In 1875 he was made librarian of the Morse Institute at Natick, with 10,000 volumes. May 1, 1883, after eight years' service, he resigned this care, amidst universal regret. Mr. Wight's activity found expression in other directions besides those mentioned. He is a student in meteorology, and is accurate and laborious in his observations. The Boston Journal of Chemistry, in October, 1882, contained the following:

"WEATHER RECORDS.—The very interesting and valuable meteorological tables and weather observations which have appeared in the Journal every month for so many years are prepared by Rev. Daniel Wight, of Natick, Mass., a most faithful and intelligent observer. We mention his name (not having obtained his consent) as an act of justice, and to bring to view one who, in modest retirement, has steadily pursued his work with untiring assiduity and great accuracy."

Mr. Wight likewise designed the large steel engraving, Bunyan's Pilgrim, first published in 1853, which was completed for reproduction after seven years of persevering labor, including four years' time spent upon the engraving. The plate is 27 by 33½ inches. Among many commendatory notices of this work which I have seen I select the following from the British Banner, of London: "It was reserved for America to present to us, in a single picture, the wanderings of Christian from the City of Destruction to the Celestial City. This idea, we notice, originated not with the painter, but with the Rev. Daniel Wight, of Massachusetts. It was well that this idea should start in New England; we should have begrudged the honor of it to any other portion of the earth. The conception was originally grand, and it has been most admirably executed; a picture, we hesitate not to say, that will take rank among the most superb and elaborate productions of human genius, taste and skill." Mr. Wight, commenting upon this engraving, writes: "In consequence of dishonest or bad management, it has not paid its cost, including interest on the investment. Still I do not regret the publication of it. It is in thousands of homes in this and other lands, speaking to multitudes in various languages, and will speak for years to come, pointing many to the strait gate and narrow way who, it may be, had not found them otherwise."

I have no doubt many members of the Wight family have this engraving upon the walls of their homes who are ignorant of their indebtedness to one of their kin for the pleasure and satisfaction which its inspection constantly brings them. Mr. Wight assisted in completing the historical article on Natick for Drake's History of Middlesex County, and he has engaged in much other labor of a theological and historical kind. When I last visited my cousin in 1886 his mind was still keen and vigorous, and his thoughts were intent upon study and improvement, as if he were still in the morning of life. Serus in coelo redeat!

Rev. Daniel has been four times married. First, September 26, 1842, to Lucy Flint, of North Reading, Mass., born August 26, 1817, daughter of Deacon Addison and Sally (Upton) Flint; she died August 5, 1846. Second, September 7, 1847, to Julia Russell, of Kingston, Mass., born February 23, 1817, daughter of Deacon George and Amelia (Drew) Russell; she died August 8, 1849. Third, to Mary Ann Perkins, of Braintree, born April 2, 1816, daughter of Rev. Jonas and Rhoda (Keith) Perkins; she died October 26, 1853. Fourth, October 4, 1855, to Mary Sewell Briggs, of Marblehead, born February 14, 1819, daughter of Dr. Calvin and Rebecca (Monroe) Briggs; she still survives—a loyal helpmeet and a genial, hospitable housewife. Mr. Wight is still (1889) living in Natick.

1251. THOMAS POTWIN[7] WIGHT (Ephraim[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born January 16, 1820, was removed in his early childhood by his step-father from his home in Wolcott, N. Y., to Phelps in the same state, where he lived until the fall of 1831. He then went to reside with his uncle Daniel[6] (518), in Troy, N. Y. In May, 1842, he started a dry goods business in Troy in partnership with Joseph J. Alden, but died October 22, 1842. He was unmarried.

1253. SERENO EDWIN[7] WIGHT (Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born September 28, 1816, was a student in Lenox (Mass.) Academy in 1830. In the fall of 1832 he entered Amherst College, but died in his freshman year April 20, 1833. He was a student of assiduity and ambition, who would not intermit his lessons for his health's sake.

1255. WILLIAM WARD[7] WIGHT (Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born February 4, 1821, went with his father in 1829 to Albia and attended school there. In 1832 the family moved into Troy—he with the rest. Early in 1833 he was in the American Tract Society House in New York, residing with Mr. Harlan Page, whose wife was William's aunt (518, Note 1). In 1834 he returned from New York to Troy, and was at school and at work until October, 1836, when he entered Bennington, Vt., Seminary, where he remained until the school was broken up in February, 1837. About three months, commencing in August of this year, he worked upon the farm of Lewis M. Ambler in Nassau, N.Y. He then re-entered his father's employ and there remained until his majority. On April 5, 1840, he united with the Second street Presbyterian Church—Dr. Snodgrass'. From March, 1842, he was in partnership with his father and others at Troy, Sand Lake, N. Y., and other places, in the wool commission and other businesses until in 1851, when he went to Brooklyn to reside, having a clerkship in New York. The climate being hostile to his family he returned to Troy in the same year and became clerk of the Canal Contracting Board at Albany, but retaining his residence in Troy. In March, 1864, he gave up his situation in Albany, having previously established, with a partner, a manufactory of collars and cuffs in Troy. This, however, with all other business affairs he closed up, to die. He died at his home in Troy, April 20, 1868. My father inherited the piety of all the Wights and acquired also the characteristics of his Connecticut birth and surroundings. His chief traits were honesty and faithfulness; he lived a quiet, consistent christian life. Exposed while in the employ of the State to temptations most alluring and attractive, he shunned them all, and, although aware of many secret methods of becoming rich at the people's expense, he retired with nothing but his salary. The following from the Troy Times not extravagantly states his reputation:

Most True.—The Albany Transcript, in its notices of members and clerks of the Canal Board, has the following:

"W. W. Wight, Clerk to the Contracting Board, is a Trojan and 'Woolly Head.' If he now belongs to any party, it is the Republican, but believes he serves his country best by voting for the most honest men nominated. He is looked upon by those who are fortunate enough to be acquainted with him to be honorable, honest and upright in every thing he does and says."

We endorse every word of this compliment. It is not half so much as is deserved. If there ever was a scrupulously honest man in the public service, that man is W. W. Wight. Ceaselessly vigilant, laboriously active, entirely honest, he performs every trust allotted to him in a manner alike creditable to himself and to his position, which is dignified by its incumbent. The very soul of honor, he moves among the most corrupting influences unscathed and unsuspected. He is one of those men of whom Benton would say, "his very apparition would put a corruptionist to flight." The sterling qualities of his character are only balanced by his innate modesty and unobstrusiveness. Where the public has such a servitor, the fact is well deserving of more than ordinary notice. Wight is a model official. We are glad to learn that he is a fixture in the Canal Department, no administration feeling that it can safely displace him.

William was elected a school commissioner from the Third Ward, Troy, in March, 1848, but declined a proffered renomination the ensuing year. Always regretting his limited early education, he constantly endeavored to atone for the lack by reading, attendance upon lectures and private study. His diary contains frequent mention of arising early in fall and winter mornings and reading until daylight.

He was ordained a deacon of the Second Presbyterian Church, Troy, December 31, 1848, an office which he held continuously until his death, fulfilling its every duty laboriously and conscientiously. He often read the Epistle of the Apostle Paul in which the qualifications of a deacon are set forth, and daily endeavored to act in conformity to them. His son must be pardoned for saying that he lived as near to them as fallible beings can, that his life was almost blameless.

He married at Hudson, Mich., July 10, 1844, Lydia Ann Potwin Van Akin, of Hudson, born in Wolcott, N. Y., August 7, 1824. She was the half-sister of his cousins Thomas[7] (1251) and Israel[7] (1252). See 517, Note. She moved with her father in early childhood into the wilds of Michigan. Her father and family were among the earliest inhabitants of Lenawee County, and were the second settlers of Hudson. Their neighbors were bears and Indians, their daily routine the common privations of pilgrims to a new land. Save occasional visits to her kinsfolk in Troy she lived in Hudson until her marriage. Her children were born in Troy, where she now resides.

Note 1. Van Akin: This family, of Holland Dutch descent, is found, and for over 150 years has been settled, in Orange County, N. Y., and in Sussex County, N. J. The line is traceable to James Van Auken an early settler of Deer Park, N. Y. (Eager's Orange County, 396). He may have been the father of James, who was born in 1740 at the Tishoek, a fortification in Upper Smithfield, Pike Co., Pa., three miles from Port Jervis. He married in 1758 at The Clove, Sussex Co., N. J., Elizabeth, born von Benscoten, widow of a Meddaugh. She was a descendant of Anneke Jans. James and Elizabeth had a son John, born in 1768 at the Tishoek, married in Upper Smithfield in 1788, Margaret Westfall, born March 11, 1773 (Note 12). John took up 600 acres of land near Phelps, N. Y., in 1796, and died at West Junius, Seneca Co., N. Y., March 19, 1854. His widow died at Nankin, Mich., February 21, 1861. John and Margaret had ten children, among them Lusena Van Akin, born 1804, (mentioned less correctly at 581 Note, as Lucinda) and Simeon Van Akin, the oldest child, born in Upper Smithfield, December 11, 1789. Simeon finally settled in Wolcott, Wayne Co., N. Y., in that portion which, by a division of the town, became Rose. He married first Olive daughter of Nathan Whitney. She died in 1821. His second marriage to Mrs. Lydia (Potwin) Wight is chronicled at 517. Lydia died in Rose, September 9, 1826. In 1833 Simeon emigrated to Michigan, settling finally at Hudson. Here dwelling far beyond man's allotment, he died March 12, 1881. The many facts of Simeon's busy career are set forth graphically in Lapham's Addison (Mich.), Advertiser, of April 9, 1881. In early life he united with the Presbyterian Church, and was a delegate to the General Assembly in Philadelphia, when the stage was his conveyance from his home in Wolcott. His third wife was Mrs. Lydia Spear, born Winslow, who died July 5, 1868. Simeon Van Akin (who was everybody's Uncle Simeon), was a man of mild and equable temper, of kindly disposition, an upright, useful, honorable, christian gentleman. His children were:

1. MARGARET VAN AKIN, born 1818, wife of Lyman Wilcox; residence, Dundee, Mich.
2. LYDIA ANN POTWIN VAN AKIN, born August 7, 1824, wife of William Ward[7] Wight (1255).
3. CLARISSA VAN AKIN, born January 22, 1840, married May 24, 1865, Edward J. Southworth, now of Hudson.
4. SIMEON VAN AKIN, born October 14, 1842, married January 15, 1867, Charlotte E. Southwick.
5. WILLIAM WINSLOW VAN AKIN, born December 9, 1849, married January 15, 1868, Charity Salisbury.

Note 2. Potwin (Potwine, Poiteviu, an inhabitant of Poitou, France): This family is Huguenot and left France after the revocation of the edict of Nantes. The family has but one coat-of-arms which bears a fleur-de-lys (Stiles' Windsor, 757). The name occurs among the records of the Church du St. Esprit, in West 22d street, New York. John Potwin, parentage unknown, boru in Boston in 1698, and a goldsmith there, married in the Old South, Boston, April 20, 1721, Mary Jackson (Note 3). Their earliest seven children were born in Boston. After 1734 they removed to Hartford, Conn., where their remaining three children were born. They then removed to North Coventry, where John was admitted a freeman in 1754. His sou Thomas having become pastor of the church in Scantic, East Windsor, Conn., John removed there and "the hands of the pastor were greatly strengthened by the euergy and devotion of his venerable father" (Stiles' Windsor, 300). His wife died in Coventry March 5, 1765. He died in Scantic, May 16, 1792. Their sixth child, Rev. Thomas Potwin, born October 3, 1731, Yale 1751, was minister of the Scantic church, East Windsor, from May 1, 1754, till his death, November 15, 1802. All that is known of his long and devoted ministry over this church is detailed in several pages of Stiles' Windsor. His first marriage, June 20, 1754, was with Abigail Moseley (Note 4), of Glastonbury, who bore him three children, and died July 23, 1759, aged 26. Rev. Thomas' oldest son and second child was Thomas Potwin (October 18, 1756—September 14, 1824), a life-long member of the church in East Windsor aud a prominent citizen. He married Martha Stiles (Note 5), who died July 9, 1822. Their seventh child, Lydia Potwin, born November 9, 1792, was the wife of Ephraim[6] Wight (517) and of Simeon Van Akin (517, Note; Note 1, above). The only child of her second marriage was Lydia Ann Potwin Van Akin, wife of William Ward[7] Wight (1255).

Note 3. Jackson: Edmund Jackson, of Boston, (Register, II, 191; perhaps sealer of leather in 1648, and coustable in 1650, as in Drake's Boston, 312, 320), had by wife Martha, who died November 12, 1652, a son Jeremiah; he was born July 14, 1645, and with wife Hannah united with the Old South Church, March 13, 1708. Mary Jackson, daughter of these last, born in Boston in 1698, was the wife of John Potwin (Note 2).

Note 4. Moseley (Maudsley, Mawdsley): John Maudsley, of Dorchester, freeman 1639, died 1661. His son John, of Windsor, Conn., married December 10, 1664, Mary Newberry, (Note 13) born March 10, 1648. John, a lieutenaut in King Philip's war, a freeman in 1666, removed to Westfield in 1677, returned to Windsor and died there August 18, 1690 (Savage's Gen. Dict. III., 178). Johu and Mary had Joseph Maudsley, born December 21, 1670, who in 1696 married Abigail Root (Note 14). He had a family in Westfield, and in 1719 removed to Glastonbury. Joseph and Abigail had a son, Captain Abner Moseley, of Glastonbury, who married in 1722 Elizabeth Lyman (1290, Note 1). These last were parents of Abigail Moseley (Note 2, above). See Chapin's Glastenbury, 175.

Note 5. Stiles: Thomas Stiles (Stylles, Stilles) and his wife Joane were progenitors of this family in this country. Joane was buried at Millbrook, near Ampthill, Bedfordshire, Eng., January 22, 1605. Their son John, "Christianed the 25th day of December," 1595, at Millbrook, came to New England in 1635, settled at East Windsor, Conn., the same year, and died aged 67 June 4, 1662. His wife Rachel died September 3, 1674. Their son John lived in East Windsor, married October 25, 1658, Dorcas Burt (Note 6), and died aged about 50, December 8, 1683. John and Dorcas had John, born in Windsor December 10, 1665, who died in New Haven May 20, 1753. His wife, Ruth Bancroft (Note 7), died in childbed in 1714. John and Ruth had John, born in Windsor December 17, 1692, settled in that part of Windsor known as Scantic, where he died in July 1763. He married May 7, 1713, Mary Osborn (Note 8), of Windsor, born February 10, 1695. John and Mary had Israel, born in Windsor September 13, 1719, died in Scantic September 13, 1794. Israel married about 1748 Martha Rockwell (Note 10), boru August 28, 1720. Martha Stiles, born March 13, 1760, daughter of Israel and Martha, was wife of Thomas Potwin (Note 2). See Stiles' Windsor, 777, et seq., showing coat of arms; Stiles' The Connecticut Family of Stiles, 8–12.

Note 6. Burt: Dorcas Burt, who died August 29, 1690, was daughter of Henry Burt, of Springfield, Mass., the first Burt settler in America, by his wife Ulalia. "There is a tradition in the family that the mother of this Dorcas Burt, before she came over from England, was laid out for dead and put into the coffiu, but at her funeral signs of life appeared, and she recovered and came to New England, settled at Springfield, and here in America had nineteen children (ten of whom at least lived to have families), one of whom was this Dorcas." (Stiles' Windsor, 784, quoting Pres. Stiles' Ms. Gen. of the Stileses, written 1764). Dorcas Burt married John Stiles (Note 5).

Note 7. Bancroft: Ruth Bancroft, daughter of Samuel, of Westfield, Mass., was born there and married John Stiles (Note 5).

Note 8. Osborn: John Osborn, by tradition of Welsh origin, married May 19, 1645, Ann Oldage, only child of Richard Oldage (Oldige, Oldridge, Olderidge), of Windsor, who died January 27, 1661 (Savage's Gen. Dict., III, 307). Ann died August 28, 1689. John Osborn died October 27, 1686, iu Windsor, where he had a large estate. Johu and Ann had Sergeant John Osborn, born January 10, 1645–6, who married October 14, 1669, Abigail Eggleston. These last were parents of Mary Osborn, who married John Stiles (Note 5). Abigail Eggleston (June 12, 1648—1689) was daughter of Begat aud Sarah (Talcott, Note 9) Eggleston. Begat (spelled also Bagot, Bigod, Begott, Bigget, Biggot), born about 1590, was made a freeman in Dorchester, Mass., iu 1631, went to Windsor in 1635, aud died there September 1, 1674 (Stiles' Windsor, 590).

Note 9. Talcott: John Talcott, of Warwickshire, Eng., had a son Johu, of Colchester, Eng., who married a Wells, and died in 1606. These had John, of Braintree, Eng., baptized October 4, 1562, who married Anne, died 1604, daughter of William Skinner, of Braintree. John and Anne were parents of John Talcott, who came to America in the Lion, arriving in Boston September 16, 1632. John's sisters were Sarah, unmarried in 1623, and Mary, quite probably the wife of Bagot Eggleston (Note 8). (Munsell's American Ancestry, I, 168; Talcott's Talcott Pedigree, 7.)

Note 10. Rockwell: Authorities—Stiles' Windsor, 762; Eldridge's Funeral Sermon, 11, 15; Orcutt's Wolcott, 531. The Rockwell family in England traces to Sir Ralph de Rockville, a Norman knight, who accompanied the Empress Maud into England when she claimed the throne. He ultimately joined King Henry II., and had a grant of three knights of land in Yorkshire, upon which estate the Rockwells have continued until the present day. Deacon William Rockwell was a member of the church formed in the New Hospital of Plymouth, Eng., with Rev. Messrs. Warham and Maverick as leaders, which came in a body to this couutry in 1630 and settled in Dorchester. In 1636 the greater part of the church removed to Windsor, including Deacon Rockwell. His wife was Susannah Chapin; he died May 15, 1640. His son, Samuel Rockwell, married Mary Norton (Note 11), and had by her John Rockwell (March 31, 1673—August 6, 1746). John married Anne Skinner, who died aged 71, April 1, 1756. John and Aune were parents of Martha Rockwell, wife of Israel Stiles (Note 5).

Note 11. Norton: The following pedigree, taken from Register XIII, 225 (the same in Norton's Descendants and Ancestors of Charles Norton, 24), appears entitled to respect:

Note 12. Westfall: The Westfall (Westfael) family settled close by the Van Aukens in Orange and Sussex counties (Eager's Orange County, 396, 420). The marriage of the earliest traceable Westfall is thus chronicled in the Sussex records, the first date being the publication of the banns: "1743, March 13.—Simon Westfael, young man, born in Dutchess County, dwelling in Smithfield, Bucks County, to Jannetje Westbroecke, born at Normal, dwelling at Menissinck; married the 17th of April by Peter Kuyckendal, Justice of the Peace." (Snell's Sussex and Warren Counties, 27). Simon had a saw-mill at Deer Park, Orange Co., N. Y. (Eager's Orange County, 370), and resided in an old stone house at Carpenter's Point (Ruttenber and Clark's Orange County, 706). Simon and Jannetje had a son Simon, born in 1749, whose daughter Margaret married John Van Akin (Note 1). For the Westbroeck (Westbrook) family, see Snell's Sussex and Warren Counties, : 62.

Note 13. Newberry: Thomas Newberry, Dorchester, freeman in 1634 (see his will, Register VII, 29), wife Jane, had Benjamin, of Windsor, Conn., born in England. He married June 11, 1616, Mary, only daughter of Matthew Allyn, of Cambridge and Windsor. Benjamin died September 11, 1689. His wife died July 29, 1689. They were parents of Mary Newberry, wife of John Maudsley (Note 4).

Note 14. Root: John Root, of Farmington, died in 1648, was husband of Mary Kilbourne. Her father, Thomas, came to Wethersfield in 1635, she being then sixteen. John and Mary had John, of Farmington, who, October 18, 1664, married Mary, born April 6, 1644, daughter of Robert and Mary Ashley, of Springfield. John and Mary settled at Westfield, and had Abigail Root, born June 26, 1680, wife of Joseph Maudsley (Note 4).—Robert Ashley died November 29, 1682; his widow died September 19, 1683.

Note 15. Kingsbury: Miss Talcott, compiler of the Kingsbury genealogy, still incomplete, informs me that the statement at 518, Note 1, relative to an engagement between Captain Nathan Hale and Martha Edgerton Kingsbury is not borne out by the facts. His betrothed, she states, was Alice Adams, who, after his death, married William Lawrence, of Hartford. Relics once belonging to Hale are now in the possession of her descendants. See Stuart's Hale, 28; Lossing's The Two Spies, 21.

1256. JOSEPH KINGSBURY[7] WIGHT (Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born February 9, 1824—Williams College 1843—was a colporter in Georgia and South Carolina from November, 1843, to June, 1845. He entered the Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C., where he remained one session and then entered Princeton Theological Seminary, where he was a student from the fall of 1845 until 1848. He was licensed to preach June 19, 1847, and was ordained a minister by the Troy, N. Y., Presbytery August 23, 1848. On August 16, 1848, he married at Princeton, Elizabeth Neil Van Dyke, born October 14, 1827, daughter of William James and Margaret (Nevius) Van Dyke. On October 9, 1848, the young couple sailed for China as missionaries of the American Board. Joseph was first stationed at Ningpo, but in 1850 he established with Dr. Culbertson, a new mission at Shanghai. He returned to this country with his family, arriving in New York in July, 1854. On October 25, 1855, he returned alone to China, but was compelled by ill-health to abandon the missionary field and return again to New York, where he arrived March 24, 1857. From that time until May, 1859, he supplied the Presbyterian Church at Sand Lake, Rensselaer County, N. Y., and from 1859 to the present time he has preached at Ellesdie, New Hamburg, N. Y. His wife died at New Hamburg, January 22, 1882. The following extract from the New York Evangelist of February 2, 1882, refers to that event:

"On January 22 the Rondout pulpit was filled by the pastor of our New Hamburg church, the Rev. J. K. Wight, under circumstances of a most painful and touching character. We are informed that as Mr. Wight entered the session room of the church on Sunday morning, a telegram was handed him stating that his wife had suddenly died that morning at 7 o'clock. With quick sympathy the session gathered about him and at once offered to relieve him of all responsibility for the pulpit. His reply was: 'I can't go home until afternoon, and the Lord's work must be done. I will try and preach.' 'He did preach,' says a local journal, 'a most eloquent and impressive sermon on Christ's love and sympathy to the afflicted and sorrowing, the congregation listening with deep sympathy for the speaker.' As one greatly beloved for his work's sake, and for his many personal excellencies, and who has now for a second time within recent months been visited by the heavy sorrow of sudden bereavement, a wide and tender sympathy will be felt on his behalf."

Rev. Mr. Wight is a close student of the languages and of theological literature and history and has published many articles, displaying much research and erudition. I enumerate such of his essays as I have seen: Huc's Journey Through China, Confucianism, Buddhism in India and China, The Heathen Inexcusable for their Idolatry, Recent Explorations in Africa, Modes of Evangelization, The Malay Archipelago, Home Missions and the Presbyterian Church.—Information following concerning the children is of November, 1889. Guy Clark[10], born July 27, 1887.

Note 1. The Lymans: The English ancestry of Richard Lyman, of High Ongar, England, tracing him through the Lamberts and Umfravilles to Charlemagne and the Saxon kings, is set out lengthily, if not lucidly, in Coleman's Lyman Gen., Part I. Richard, who was born in 1580, married Sarah Osborne, and, with his children, came to Charlestown, Mass., in 1631, and to Hartford, Conn., in 1635. He died in Hartford in 1640, his wife soon after. His children returned to Massachusetts and settled in Northampton. His son, Lieut. John Lyman (935, Note), was born in High Ongar in September, 1623, settled in Northampton in 1654, and married Dorcas, daughter of John Plumb, of Branford, Conn. He commanded the Northampton soldiers at the Falls Fight, above Deerfield, May 18, 1676. He died at his home August 20, 1690. See Lyman's Easthampton, 161, et seq. Among his children were three sons:

1. Lieutenant JOHN LYMAN (August 1, 1660—November 8, 1740), kept a public house near Smith's Ferry, in Northampton, South Farms. He married April 19, 1687, Mindwell Pomeroy, born February 24, 1666, widow of John Pomeroy. Her mother was Mary Woodford Sheldon, of Northampton. Mindwell died April 8, 1735. Lieut. John and Mindwell had a daughter Elizabeth, born December 8, 1702, wife of Abner Moseley (1255, Note 4). See Coleman's Lyman Family, 243; Chapin's Glastenbury, 175.

2. MOSES LYMAN (February 20, 1662—February 25, 1701), wife Ann. His son, Captain Moses (February 27, 1689—March 24, 1762), of Northampton, married December 13, 1712, Mindwell Sheldon, who died May 23, 1780, aged 88. Their son, Deacon Elias Lyman (September 30, 1715—February 18, 1803), of Southampton, was in the provincial congress at Concord in 1768, at Cambridge in 1775, and was often in the legislature. His wife was Anna Phelps, of Northampton, who died aged 72, November 18, 1791. Two of his children were Deacon Stephen Lyman (September 8, 1742—December 11, 1810), and Timothy Lyman (December 31, 1744—October 12, 1815), both farmers in Chester, Mass. Deacon Stephen married October 23, 1770, Anna Blair, and had a son Stephen (January 25, 1775—July 13 or 15, 1810), a farmer in Chester. Stephen, the younger, married September 19, 1799, Betsey Witt, of Chester, and had a son, Ashley Witt Lyman, husband of Laura[8] Wight, above.—Deacon Stephen's brother, Timothy, married August 18, 1769, Dorothy Kenney, or Kinney (January 10, 1752—December 11, 1829), of Worthington, Mass., and had a daughter, Susannah Lyman (November 6, 1770—July 18, 1842). She married in 1789 Joseph Clapp (November 11, 1764—July 11, 1839), of Easthampton, who moved to Homer, N. Y., in 1830 (Clapp's Clapp Family, 56). Their daughter, Harriet Clapp, born May 1, 1798, married July 14, 1818, Thomas McKnight, of Homer, sheriff of Cortland County, N. Y., who died April 2, 1836. Mrs. McKnight died at Ripon, Wis., January 2, 1883. Their daughter, Susan Maria McKnight, born March 6, 1833, is wife of Edward Payson Brockway, of Milwaukee, Wis. These were parents of Mary Olivia Brockway, wife of William Ward[8] Wight (2302). See Brockway's McKnight Family Circle, 9.

3. Lieutenant BENJAMIN LYMAN (August 10, 1674—October 14, 1723), married Thankful Pomeroy, who died September 18, 1773. They had a son Benjamin (January, 1703—May 1, 1762), of Easthampton, husband of Mary Moseley, of Glastonbury, Conn., who died in her 75th year August 17, 1782. Their son, Deacon Benjamin Lyman, of Easthampton, born August 1, 1727, married Hannah Jones, of Springfield, and had a daughter, Ruth Lyman (December 9, 1765—March 11, 1839). Ruth married September 26, 1793, Ebenezer White, of S. Hadley, who resided in Ludlow, and died March 29, 1829. Ezra White, their oldest child, married Mary[6] Wight (525), of Chester, Mass.

Note 2. From Laura[8] Lyman above I have meagre accounts of some of her aunts marked "nothing known" at 243. Betsey[7] (539) married a Skinner; Drusilla[7] (541) probably married a Newell; Nancy[7] (542) married a Gleason, thus destroying the conjecture on page 139; Abigail[7] (544) married Rufus Barber, lived in Hawley, Mass., and had Aurelia[8], Abigail[8], Mary[8], Catherine[8] and Joseph[8] Barber, the last an Unitarian minister.

1291. JAMES MADISON[8] WIGHT (Jabez[7], Samuel[6], Joseph[5], Joseph[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born June 1, 1809, received an academic education and studied law in Queens County, N. Y. He moved to Rockford, Ill., in 1838 and began the practice of law there. He helped in many ways to build up that now thriving city. He married there, December 25, 1843, Harriet Barnum, born in Danbury, Conn., in 1820, daughter of Ezra and Deborah (Hoyt) Barnum. The house in Rockford to which he brought his bride is a substantial residence across Rock river from the business portion of the city, and is the same home in which his children were born and in which some of them still reside. There his wife died February 5, 1852. He married second, December 15, 1853, Rhoda Allen Barnard, born in Deerfield, Mass., in 1816, believed to be the daughter of David and Eliza (Whitcomb) Barnard. Mr. Wight built up a large practice in Rockford. He was the local attorney of the Chicago & North-Western Railroad and of other corporations. In 1870 he was elected to the Illinois legislature, serving on the judiciary committee and on the committee for revising the laws. He died in Rockford, December 4, 1877. His widow died September 17, 1878, "of grief at her husband's death; she was a good mother and a devoted wife." Mr. Wight inherited from his mother a very clear head, great love for study and a sense of honor that to some would seem strained. He was a perfect enclycopædia of general information from history and science to music and art; of painting he was especially fond, being an admirer particularly of the old masters. He was modest, retiring and reticent to a degree. At a bar meeting, held in Rockford soon after his death, R. F. Crawford, Esq., in addressing the Court, thus spoke of him:

"I think, your Honor, I never met a man who had greater professional pride and more delicate sense of professional honor and propriety than our brother, Mr. Wight, nor one who has had a more thorough contempt for all the tricks and artifices sometimes resorted to, to accomplish an end or win a case. I do not believe that he ever intentionally, in his long professional life, did one unprofessional act. I think, too, Mr. Wight is the only lawyer against whom I never heard one single word. In the heat of a trial and of strife we are all more or less inclined to say and do things that in our sober moments we would not do. But I have never heard from his brother attorneys, or from his opponents, one single word against Mr. Wight. I do not think it was because he was lacking in vigor or independence of action or opinion, but I attribute it more to the fact that every person with whom he came in contact learned to entertain for him the highest respect and esteem and to appreciate him for his perfect uprightness and honesty in everything he said and did."

Note. I append additional details concerning this busy life:

At the age of sixteen young Ambrose began teaching school at Jamaica and Hempstead, L. I. The discovery of an old Latin grammar at a farm-house aroused his latent ambition for deeper knowledge. He went to an academy at Bennington, Vt., where he experienced the moral change which determined his future career. Teaching and having assisted him through Williams College, an institution which, in 1839, made him Master of Arts, and in 1876, much to his surprise, Doctor of Divinity. Immediately after graduation he started by tardy travel for Chicago, reaching there in fourteen days, and with a fortune of twelve cents. Chopping, surveying and trading supplied his wants. After his marriage he removed to Rockford, Ill., read law a year, was admitted to the bar in July, 1842, and practiced with his brother James. Various newspaper experiences in Chicago, including the management of the Herald of the Prairie, with William Bross, followed. In April, 1855, the presbytery of Chicago licensed Mr. Wight to preach. In 1856 he was employed as a city missionary in Chicago, and in December, 1856, he organized the Olivet Church, on Wabash avenue and Twelfth street, of which he was pastor until August, 1863. He then resigned, and for about a year was on the Chicago Tribune staff, and preached in various places. In December, 1864, he was invited to Bay City, Mich., and began work May 1, 1865, in the First Presbyterian church there. He commenced with a church of sixty-nine members; it now numbers 628 persons, and two other churches have grown out of it. He writes, in 1887: "I am still pastor of this church, though in my 77th year, and with God's grace and favor I intend to work as long as I can." Nevertheless, on account of his infirmities, he became pastor emeritus May 2, 1888.

In 1830 he began to write for publication in the village papers—verses at first, and afterwards prose. No year has passed since in which he has not written for print, mostly for weekly, daily or monthly papers. A volume of his fugitive contributions has been collected into book form. Among the papers to which he has contributed are: Greeley's New Yorker, Presbyterian Review, Theological Review, Princeton Review and American Presbyterian, Philadelphia. Since 1857 he has contributed letters about once a month to the Evangelist, New York. A biography and engraving of Dr. Wight appear in Representative Men of Michigan, Vol. II, Eighth District, 58.

They had one child who did not live. They immediately adopted an infant named Mary, born November 11, 1823, whose mother had died. This child they brought up with the tenderest solicitude. Emmons, who was a farmer, moved from Norwich to Pembroke, Genesee County, N. Y., in October, 1827. From there, starting February 8, 1833, he journeyed to Parma, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, being twelve days on the way. Here he joined the Free-Will Baptist Church—the first church in Parma—although an adherent of the christian denomination, which was not represented there. The little Mary was a member of the first school taught in Parma. She married October 15, 1841, Hiram Kenyon, who was born in Mexico, Oswego County, N. Y., June 11, 1816. The closest intimacy existed between these families. When Emmons sold his Parma farm and moved, November 1, 1843, to a farm of sixty acres which he had bought in Royalton in the same county, Hiram bought and located next to him. In April, 1853, they both sold here and both bought farms in Brunswick, Medina County, Ohio, where Emmons' holding was fifty acres. In November, 1861, when Hiram and Mary thought of locating temporarily in Oberlin, pending the education of their son, Emmons and wife felt the coming separation so keenly that they finally all went to Oberlin. Here Mrs. Wight died April 10, 1863. She was buried there two days later. On the 19th of the same month Mary died in Oberlin, where, on the 21st, she was buried. In October, 1863, the remainder of the family returned to Brunswick. On October 7, 1863, Hiram married Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Nixon, born in Geneseo, N. Y., January 11, 1825, daughter of Deacon David and Lois (Norton) Pond. Emmons lived with this couple until September, 1864; he then married Mrs. Charlotte Fuller, previously Mrs. McNeal, born Howe. She was a faithful wife to a husband who for many years had been a martyr to asthma. She died, aged 66, July 2, 1867. On October 17, 1867, he again married Mrs. Harriet Bassett, who (1886) still survives—a cripple from paralysis. The Kendalls also live in Brunswick. Emmons died July 27, 1883. He was a devotedly religious man, quiet and retiring, and with the bump of order largely developed. JOHN FITCH[8] WIGHT (Jabez[7], John Fitch[6], John[5], Jabez[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 22, 1830, took the California fever when but nineteen years old, and was probably the youngest of "the forty-niners." Upon the overland journey, separating himself from the train, he lost the trail and was surrounded by five warlike Indians. Dancing, whooping and shooting their arrows just to miss him, these savages began to torment him to a slow death. But the youth would not be subdued. Joining in their mirth, he deliberately drew from his sleeve a long knife, his only weapon, and presented it to their chief. Astonishment and admiration followed, and at length, at the very head of the band, he went with them to the train, made them presents and sent them away his friends. He remained in California until 1867, returning homeward on account of an accident in 1866, by falling 24 feet in a mine. In 1867 he started in business in Whitewater, Wis., having with him his mother, sisters and Aunt Emilia[7] (588). Upon the death of his mother and aunt, he returned to mining in California, remaining some five years. He again barely escaped death, a dynamite explosion in a mine blowing to atoms ten men not three feet from him. He was taken from the mine blind, deaf and badly hurt, but finally regained his sight and partially his hearing. After two years of rest in Whitewater he recovered a little of his once magnificent strength. In 1886 he embarked in the real-estate business in Hermosa, Custer Co., Dak.; and at the first town election held therein, December 24, 1888, was elected justice of the peace and police justice. "He is a man of poetic temperament, refined and gentle as a woman, but with the heart of a lion." "He is possessed of vigorous intellectual powers and sterling qualities of character, which have made him a useful and respected citizen wherever his lot has been cast." He never married.

When 21 years of age he walked into the woods and cut, split and piled up his two cords of wood a day. At this time he met with a serious accident, which caused his death. He cut him on the shin bone, between knee and instep, and when it healed rheumatism and other diseases set in and he was sick and helpless most (11 years) of the time. He grew so fast and his ambition was so great that he over-worked and was used up. His mental powers were well developed and his memory excellent. Williamson's Belfast, 566, mentions the death August 26, 1863, aged 25, of Hezekiah Wight, and states he was the tallest person in that section of the state, being over 7 feet high. Note. The following sketch of Dr. Wight has been printed—the opening sentence refers to his grandfather, Joseph[6] Wight, (302). Ann refers to the wife of Barclay[7] Wight (666).

After his death his diary, which he had kept for many years, was examined, and the following entry was found: "Oct. 5th, 1834, cold and windy. Ann has got a boy, O Lord have mercy on us!" Ann was his daughter-in-law, with whom he then lived, and the boy was the subject of the present sketch, who with a hearty relish always enjoys relating the circumstance.

Like many others who have cut their way through the world, his literary advantages were limited, but he made the most of his opportunities at the public and high schools, till he was qualified to teach both the public and the singing schools in the vicinity. With a voice of unusual power, he was able by this means to enter upon the study of medicine in 1856, under the instruction of F. D. Lord, of Casco, Me., and Prof. T. A. Childs, of Pittsfield, Mass. He entered the Maine Medical School, at Brunswick, Me., where he passed through three full terms, and one term at the Berkshire Medical School, at Pittsfield, Mass., and part of one term at the Harvard Medical School. He spent a year longer than it was necessary to graduate, in the study of surgery, and was made prosecutor in both of the former schools, in which he acquitted himself with much credit.

He commenced the practice of medicine in his native town, (Casco), in 1861. He spent the winter of 1862 on the Potomac, where he had an opportunity of seeing much surgical practice. He returned to Casco and resumed his practice till 1865, when he removed to Gorham, where he has been busily engaged in the duties of his profession till the present time. Mrs. Wight is a well known musician and a successful musical teacher, and their home often resounds to charming music from themselves and their children.

Dr. Wight is an excellent surgeon. We have seen his work in numerous instances on capital operations, as well as in minor surgery. He is well supplied with instruments, and spares neither time nor money when a new one is wanted. Although he feels the weight of his responsibility when a severe operation is to be performed, yet he has the hand of a woman and the heart of a lion, two necessary qualifications in a surgeon. His work is always done neatly, and his own mechanical ingenuity is frequently put to the test with good success. As we have been an intimate friend of the family for a year and a half, and have seen so many instances of his skill both as a surgeon and a practitioner, we speak with the greatest degree of confidence of his success, which in some instances seemed to be very remarkable. In one instance he saved the leg of a boy who had been run over by the cars. It is exceedingly rare that a limb is ever saved under such circumstances, but the doctor tried his hand at it and succeeded in not only saving, but making a useful leg. In another instance a man had his leg badly crushed in machinery, between the knee and foot, including the heel. We believe in most cases it would have been amputated, but the doctor took hold of it, and by the greatest perseverance succeeded in saving the limb. It is rare that a man may be seen who had suffered amputation above the knee, walking in the streets in three weeks after the operation. We record only a few of the many operations which we have seen under his intelligent hand. He is amply supplied with medical works, which are his daily companions. We must record here the success which he has shown in detecting obscure diseases. This cannot always be done by the most skillful physicians, but we have repeatedly experienced his success in relieving suffering and cutting off the inroads of disease, and are glad here to make a public acknowledgment of his success in snatching us from the very jaws of death. His practice has been for many years very extensive. Twenty patients a day at his home has been no uncommon occurrence, besides his outside practice. This had led him to think too little of his pecuniary matters. In this respect, however, we believe he grows more thoughtful as he grows older, so that the same judgment which he exercises so well in his practice, is gradually developing itself in his personal affairs. Like most medical men he is sensitive on all matters pertaining to his profession, and will not readily brook an insult. While we do not intend in the least to underrate any other physician, yet we know of no other man between Portland and Montreal to whom we would sooner entrust ourself in case of severe sickness or suffering. He resides on Main St., near the public school house, in a house which he has recently purchased, and where he will be sure to have a splendid garden. He enjoys literary and scientific reading, and spends much of his spare time, even till the late hours of the night, in this direction.

He had contracts with most of the railroads near Springfield, for supplying them with wood sawn by horse-power. This business he carried on until 1869, when he transferred it to his brother Aaron[8] Wight (1816). While in this business in September, 1853, Emerson Wight lost both his legs between the ankle and knee by the wheels of a locomotive, which he was attempting to board. Careful nursing and artificial legs soon made him a man again, and his business progressed with the same ambition for success. Judicious purchases of Springfield real estate enriched him. "Mr. Wight was conspicuous for self-denying industry, for honest thrift, for kindliness and generosity in most unstinted measure, and for faithful and conscientious discharge of every duty and obligation. He was a man of good business instincts and judgment. . . . He was one of the best and truest of friends, and he has given a helping word and help more substantial than words to many a man in the hour of need" (Springfield Union January 1, 1890; Springfield Republican, January 2, 1890, where are long biographies and portraits). He represented Springfield in the legislature in 1869, '70, '71; was an alderman in 1872, 3, and was the only citizen ever four times mayor of Springfield, (1875, 6, 7, 8). He was present at the banquet at the quarter-millennial of Springfield, May 25, 1886, and his residence was noted as finely illuminated on this occasion of Springfield's joy. He made long journeys to California and the Sandwich Islands in 1887, 8, 9, but returned to sink and die. His active life went out January 1, 1890.—He married May 15, 1854, Margaret Denison Gleason, of Warren, Mass. She died in Springfield, April 30, 1858. 1. L. M.[9] Hartwick, an editor and lawyer in Pentwater.
2. Rose[9] Hartwick, born in Mishawaka, July 18, 1850, a poet and author. When a school girl, in April, 1867, she wrote the poem "Curfew Must Not Ring To-night." Concerning this production I quote:

"The well-known poem, 'Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night,' was composed by Rose Hartwick, of Litchfield, Michigan, at the age of sixteen. After arranging and altering several times she finally threw it aside as unsatisfactory. Three years afterward, being ill, and pressed for 'copy' by the Detroit Commercial-Advertiser, she sent the cast-off 'Curfew,' with an apology for its inferiority. It immediately became famous, greatly to her surprise, but not one cent to her pecuniary advantage." This poem has been translated into several languages, and is published in illustrated editions in England and America. In 1887 D. Lothrop & Co. published Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night, and other poems, containing many of her most popular ballads. The Yule Log, a Christmas collection of poems contains five from her pen. "Fred's Dark Days" is her story of her husband's childhood as a boot-black in the streets of Cleveland, Ohio. She also wrote "The Fenton Family, or For Mother's Sake" and "Nina Bruce, or a Girl's Influence." She has written serially and otherwise for The Golden Days, The Youth's Companion, Demorest's Monthly, The Brooklyn Magazine, The Independent, The Outing, St. Nicholas, Wide Awake, The Detroit Free Press, Our Continent, The Cottage Hearth, and others. In her own view her historical poem, "Remember the Alamo," is her finest effort. In a little more than a year the proceeds of her literary work were sufficient to build a pretty home in Grand Rapids, Mich. For further particulars of her life, see June, 1886, of Demorest's Monthly, and The Brooklyn Magazine. She has received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Hillsdale College, Michigan. She married September 11, 1871, Edmund C., born in Berea, Ohio, July 6, 1849, son of Lucian and Corinna (Pixley) Thorpe. In 1883, on account of his health, the family removed to San Antonio, Texas. He married March 12, 1884, at Baraboo, Wis., Sara Lenning, born July 12, 1855, eldest daughter of Charles and Margery (McLaughlin) Greenwood, of Baraboo, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa.

2302. WILLIAM WARD[8] WIGHT (William Ward[7], Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born January 14, 1849, Williams College, 1869, taught the ancient languages at the Delaware Literary Institute, Franklin, N. Y., for two years, and graduated at the law department of Union University, Albany, in 1873, with the degree of bachelor of laws. He began the profession of law in New York with his uncle, Edwin Mather[7] Wight, (1258) but was driven by ill health to other fields. He opened a law office in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1875, where he has practiced ever since, except during a brief trip to Europe, in 1880. He was the originator and promoter of the plan for a public library in Milwaukee, by turning over to that city the 10,000 volumes of the Young Men's Association. The interest felt since in the library by the citizens of the city, and its growth to many times its former extent in a few years, have justified the course taken. He was likewise the originator, in Milwaukee, of the Civil Service Reform Association, from which has since sprung the non-partisan board of Fire and Police Commissioners in that city. Of this board, Mr. Wight was appointed chief examiner, October 12, 1886, and resigned February 13, 1889. On December 1, 1888, he was commissioned a member of this board by the Mayor of Milwaukee, to fill a vacancy; on March 28, 1889, he was elected chairman of said Board, and on July 1, 1889, was re-commissioned for a full term of four years, his chairmanship continuing. On February 19, 1880, Mr. Wight was elected Secretary of the Trustees of Milwaukee College, and on February 16, 1887, he was chosen a trustee of said college, both of which positions he has held by constant re-elections since. He holds this year, (1889–90) the presidency of the Milwaukee Whist Club. He is a member of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, which after its destruction by fire as stated 901 Note, arose with new beauty. He is also a member of the Young Men's Christian Association, of Milwaukee, and is chairman of its gymnasium committee. On April 6, 1887, he was elected a resident (life) member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and on May 10, 1887, a life member of the State Historical Society, of Wisconsin. In 1887 he received the degree of A. M. from Williams College. He has printed the following books, all, however, of local or circumscribed interest: 1. A catalogue of the books belonging to the library of the Young Men's Association, Milwaukee, 1875; 2. Table of cases decided by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, Chicago, 1876; 3. Catalogue of the engravings and etchings on exhibition at the Milwaukee Exposition, in 1881, with notes, Milwaukee 1881; 4. Wisconsin Form-book, revised edition, Milwaukee, 1881; 5. The Wights, a genealogy—a volume, which will, to the author's great relief, bear the imprint of 1890.

Mr. Wight married in Milwaukee, June 29, 1876, Sarah Emily West, a gentlewoman of an amiable, sunny disposition and of deep, religious training. She died of small-pox in Milwaukee, February 1, 1877. On June 16, 1884, he married in Milwaukee, his remote cousin, Mary Olivia Brockway. She died of brain fever at eight in the evening of July 24, 1885, at the Sanitarium, Wauwatosa, Wis., and is buried at Ripon, Wis. She was of refined and delicate nature, with a mind carefully cultivated by study and by travel both in Europe and America. For detail of her many virtues and graces this volume even has scarcely space.

C—LAMBERT.

The Lamberts: This family runs as follows, presuming on the correctness of Lambert's New Haven, 205. I regret my non-accessibility to Wallis' Northumberland.

Rodolph de Lambert, a follower of William the conqueror, had Hugh, who by wife Matilda had Sir William Lambert, his heir. Sir William's wife was Gundred, daughter of William, earl of Surrey, by Gundred "fourth daughter of William the conqueror." (But that William I. had a Gundred is now doubted even by Burke—Burke's Peerage, ciii.) Sir William and Gundred had Henry Lambert, standard bearer to Henry II. This Henry Lambert had John, who settled in Skipton, Yorkshire, and had Sir Edmund. Sir Edmund's second son, Sir John, had a son Sir Thomas Lambert, who married Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Cressy. Sir Thomas and Dorothy had Henry Lambert, whose wife was Isabel, daughter of John Lambert of Preston, a great-grand-son of said Sir Edmund of Skipton. Henry and Isabel had Sir Nicholas Lambert, temp. Edward III. and Richard II, whose son Alan of Owton, Durham, was father of Sir William Lambert, husband of Joan Umfraville, above.

In addition I have unexamined Lambert references to these English works: Morant's Essex II, 556; Hoare's Wiltshire, I, ii, 203; Surtees' Durham, iii, 133.

2304. ARTHUR MERRIAM[8] WIGHT (William Ward[7], Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born April 20, 1860, is a stockholder in a company manufacturing shoe-button fasteners in Troy, N. Y. He is a trustee of Westminster Presbyterian Church in that city. He married December 1, 1886, Hattie, born March 7, 1861, daughter of Chauncey Betts and Charlotte Elizabeth (Crapo) Slocum. For her ancestry see Slocum's Slocum family 473. The following appeared in a local paper of the next day:

Arthur M. Wight, secretary of the Trojan buttou-fastener company and one of the best-known and best-liked young men in the city, was married yesterday by the Rev. N. B. Remick, to Miss Hattie Slocum, who will be a worthy life-partner. The flag of the Trojan hook and ladder company, of which Mr. Wight is a popular member, is flying to-day in honor of the event.

2312. JOSEPH ADDISON[8] WIGHT (Joseph Kingsbury[7], Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Peter[4], Daniel[3], Ephraim[2], Thomas[1]), born June 10, 1859, was killed in the New Hamburgh, N. Y., tunnel July 17, 1880. With his sister Margaret he was taking a short and accustomed cut to the station, by means of this tunnel, at its northern end. A freight train coming along while they were about midway, they stepped to the other track, but before the arrival of the freight the thundering of an express was heard upon the track upon which they had stepped. Addison, fearful for the safety of his sister, attempted to place her in a secure place, but she ran across the track and lay down in a ditch. Addison was caught up by one of the trains and tossed like a shuttlecock between them both. The character of this most exemplary youth becomes fairly evident from the following letter written by his father, and extracted from the Foreign Missionary of September, 1880:

NEW HAMBURGH, N. Y., August 2, 1880.

My dear Mr. Rankin.—My son Addison had the enclosed amount (twelve dollars) in his pocket-book when he was killed recently in the New Hamburgh tunnel. He had just begun to earn something for himself, and this was all he had. We do not feel like using it for any secular purpose, but to pour it out as an offering to the Lord. The Gospel is our only hope in his death. He sought to live for Christ, and when he led in our family devotions always remembered those who were preaching the gospel among the heathen. May this small sum be blessed by the Holy Spirit to the saving of some soul. Yours Truly, J. K. WIGHT.

2350. Edwin[9] Wight (Spencer[8], Jabez[7], Samuel[6], Joseph[5], Joseph[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born February 14, 1832, went on the stage in Chicago, Ill., in 1847, beginning at the lowest round. He flourished for 20 years as a comedian, being, as I have been informed, "very respectable in the comic." During the civil war he was manager at the new theatre at Nashville, and had it not been for the illness of his wife in that city in the spring of 1865, he would have been with Wilkes Booth at Ford's Theatre, in Washington, instead of the actor, Mudd, at the time the shot was fired at the heart of Lincoln. Edwin's acting has not been confined to comic parts. He has taken important, heavy roles in Shakspere's tragedies, and won applause in the acting. Having walked the boards for 40 years, he now confines himself to old man parts. In one such I saw him in Milwaukee, in November, 1886. He married in Nashville, July 5, 1864, Mary Ann Swisher, born in Mississippi County, Arkansas, July 5, 1846, daughter of Noah and Martha (Van Camp) Swisher. During the war Miss Swisher was noted at Nashville as a singing soubrette. She introduced there war songs and sang them with great acceptance. She still flourishes as an actress. Indeed, all of Edwin's children have at different times appeared upon the stage. Family residence, Chicago.

2354. SPENCER AMBROSE[9] WIGHT (Spencer[8], Jabez[7], Samuel[6], Joseph[5], Joseph[4], Joseph[3], Henry[2], Thomas[1]), born September 8, 1840, was adopted by a Mrs. Allison, of Allegheny City, in 1841, after the death of his surviving parent, and the disruption of the family. Mrs. Allison died when Spencer was seven years of age, and he was then placed in an orphan asylum in Allegheny City. Two years after, a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Robert Armstrong took him and gave him a home until the war broke out. In October, 1861, he enlisted as a private in 95th Penn. volunteers. At the battle of Gaines' Mills, June 27, 1862, he was wounded in both thighs and taken prisoner. Late in November he was exchanged, and in the next year re-enlisted and served till the close of the war. February 20, 1867, he married in Philadelphia, Isabella Anna McCorkell. Spencer resides at 4076 Spring Garden St., Philadelphia, in which city all his children were born. He is in the hardware business at 3947 Market St. Until May, 1888, Spencer was entirely ignorant of his parentage, and that he had any relative living in the world save his own wife and children. It has been one of the greatest pleasures in connection with my genealogical work, to discover the relationship existing between Spencer and his brother Edwin (2350) and to make these brothers acquainted after a separation of over 47 years.

K., 74th Illinois infantry, and was mustered out in 1866, as captain of Co. E. 42 U. S. Infantry, colored troops. After his marriage he and his wife resided in Macon City, Missouri. Upon the death of Mrs. Wight's father, in 1877, the Sherratts returned to Rockford, and occupied the old Wight homestead at No. 202 South First St., where they now reside. END.

CHAPTER XI.

American Wights not Connected or Unconnectible with Thomas[1] Wight.

3022. The name of Thomas Wight appears with those of Rev. John Wheelwright, Augustine Story, William Wentworth and Thomas Leavitt, as grantees, May 17, 1629, from the Indians of a portion of the present state of New Hampshire (Belknap's New Hampshire, I, 11.) There was in Exeter, N. H., in the early days a Thomas Wright, Wight, Wite, Wiet, (Register XXI, 316; XXV, 61), but I am certain, after much investigation that he was not our Thomas[1] Wight. See the orthographical variations in Pub. Docs., N. H., Vol. 1, 1620–1684. Because this Exeter citizen was not our Thomas, I refrain from consideration of this famous Wheelwright deed; the question of its genuineness is fully discussed and the authorities cited in a letter before me by Joseph Franklin[8] Wight, (1629). Wentworth's Wentworth Genealogy, 79, says of Thomas of Exeter, "Nothing further is known of him."

3023. Jacob, son of John Whight, was born in Hartford, Conn., October 18, 1645. (Register XII, 173).

3024. Mary Whight, of Hartford, and Jonathan Gilbert were married January 29, 1645. (Register XIII, 54).

3025. Lucie Wight, widow, and John Samuell, of Boston, were married there 24:10, 1652. (Register X, 223).

3026. Adam Wight was a creditor of James Astwood, of Suffolk Co., Mass., whose estate was inventoried October 25, 1653. (Register VIII, 275). But the name is spelled Adam Wright in Register IX, 40.

3027. Israel Wight was witness to two instruments in Boston, 1656. (Suffolk Deeds Liber II, 338, 341). Israel Wight was in Boston November 3, 1664. (Register VIII, 167.)

3028. Rice Wight, "bound to sea," made his will May 17, 1779, (Suffolk Prob. Rec., 78, 215, 216), leaving all his estate, both real and personal, to his friend, Andrew Hill, of Boston, and said Andrew's wife Elizabeth. Will proved July 9, 1779. This name Rice recalls the earlier English Wights of that name. See Chapter XII.

3029. Lydia Wight, of Medfield, married April 27, 1681, Samuel Cook, of Medfield. (Tilden's Medfield, 533). No children recorded. This Lydia has escaped earnest investigation.

3032.——Wight, of Cornwall, Conn., married Mabel, daughter of Samuel and Patience Eggleston, of Middletown.

3033. Among the grantees of Narragansett townships—grants confirmed in 1725—were: Bedford, Elezer Davis, assine to John Wight; Yarmouth, Jonathan Whight's heirs. (Register XVI, 145, 146).

3034. John Wight was the father of Eleazar (1742—1822) of Scituate, R. I., whose wife was Levina, daughter of Peleg Westcott. Eleazar's will, dated December 15, 1817—probated in Scituate, November 30, 1822, mentions his sons Sylvanus and Westcott and his wife Lucy. Lucy may be the name of a second wife or a misreading of Levina. Westcott Wight's will, dated September 4, 1848, probated November 13, 1848, mentions his brother Sylvanus and Moses Potter, Henry Varnum Wight and Israel Wight, whose affinity is undisclosed. Westcott's wife was Miss White. Sylvanus, Westcott's brother, born December 26, 1782, married Lucy White (sister of Westcott's wife), born February 26, 1786. Sylvanus served in the war of 1812. He died in Norwich, Conn., January 9, 1853; Lucy died in West Killingly, Conn., November 20, 1850. Children of Sylvanus and Lucy:

1. Charles, born May 5, 1806, died in Burrillville, R. I., 1877; married (certificate October 6, 1836) Rachael Dike Ballou, born in Burrillville, January 12, 1814. Children: 1. Mercy B., born August 9, 1846, married January 4, 1866, George W. Esten. (Ballou's Ballou Family, 1154.)

2. Cynthia (February 16, 1808–December 16, 1868), married Steven Salisbury and had among many, a daughter who married Col. Rob. McCloy, of Pawtucket, R. I.
3. Dilly, born October 24, 1809, a cripple, died unmarried in Norwich, June 17, 1852.
4. William W., born January 21, 1812, had at least two sons married: he died in Norwich, June 14, 1878.
5. George Anson, born in Scituate, December 31, 1813, and lived in Providence. Children: 1. Clara Adelaide, born March 12, 1842; 2. Estelle Campbell, born July 16, 1843; 3. George Henry, of Providence, born May 6, 1845; 4. Albert Anson, of Providence, born March 10, 1847; 5. Fred. Hosmer, of Providence, born September 4, 1855. Fred. H. Wight, clerk, died in Providence, April 26, 1885.

9. Susan C., born June 19, 1824.
10. Albert H., born June 6, 1827.
11. David, born August 19, 1828, married in Norwich, March 4, 1855, Nancy Barber Coit, daughter of Capt. Henry Coit of New London. David served as a musician in the war of 1861, and now teaches music and dancing at New London. His son Frederic Coit, born April 30, 1859, an accomplished musician, married October 29, 1885, Ora Belle Brown, daughter of William Leonard Marcy Brown, M. D.

The following from the Registrar's office, Norwich, may refer to descendants in this family: Edgar J. Wight married, January 1, 1866, Carrie Congdon, and had a daughter born July 18, 1870. Adelaide Wight married August 12, 1868, Delamber (?) Bates. William and Mary Wight had a son born September 23, 1862, and John Wight had a daughter, born July 6, 1866. John Wight, aged one year, two months, died September 18, 1856. Mary Wight died aged 75 years, February 7, 1863. An unnamed Wight, one day old, died September 22, 1862. Samuel Wight died 1862. Estella Wight, three years old, died September 18, 1873.

3035. The following probably belong to the Scituate, R. I., Wights:
NANCY WIGHT and Oliver Miller were married November 16, 1800. (Providence, R. I. Records).
Mrs. SARAH WIGHT, Quidnick, R. I.
RICHMOND WIGHT, son of Eber Wight deceased, married August 30, 1841, Ann P., daughter of Samuel A. Eldredge. (Scituate Records).
NELLIE F., daughter of Emma Wight, was born June 15, 1864. (Scituate Records).
RUFUS R. and LUCY W. WIGHT, had Ida Elizabeth, born September 14, 1866, and Nina Inez, born October 6, 1867. (Scituate Records).
SUSAN WIGHT, born in Rhode Island, died aged 40 years 1 month, February 15, 1861, in Mansfield, Conn., where she was a housekeeper.
JOHN WIGHT, of Providence, deeded May 1, 1820, a tract of land in Providence to Mary and Jemima Wight, single women. They mortgaged the land in 1821, and it was released in 1824. In 1851 land of Mary Wight was sold on attachment by the sheriff.

3036. LOOMIS WIGHT, a stove dealer, born in Vermont, and his wife Ellseph, born in Rhode Island, had November 7, 1863, a son Lewis B. Wight, born in Cranston, R. I.

3037. Providence, R. I., directory, 1886, has the following Wights: Edwin O., perhaps Oscar Edwin[8] (1748); Eugene, clerk; James, and Susan, a widow.

3038. In Providence R. I., occurred the following marriages:
February 19, 1860, Mariette H. Wight and Edward Austin.
March 26, 1868, Marcus Wight and Kate Benson.

3039. YELVERTON WEIGHT, of Coventry, R. I., made his will in 1815, naming his sons William and John, and his daughters, Elizabeth, wife of William Spencer, and Martha, wife of Reuben Fiske.

3040. JOSHUA WIGHT, was in Dunstable, N. H., in 1744, according to an old volume, which I have not at hand, but the name is Joshua Wright in Fox's Dunstable, 162, and should be so written.

3041. BENJAMIN and HENRY WIGHT in Stebbins' Wilbraham, 199, 222, etc. See 110 Note.

3042. SARAH WIGHT, of Medfield and Eleazar Thompson, of Medway, were married March 6, 1750. (Medway Records).

3043. RICHARD WIGHT, an orphan, left England and the school where a bachelor uncle had placed him, and landed—perhaps about the middle of the last century, in Baltimore. On shipboard he met, and he subsequently married, Elizabeth Bartholomew Joliffe, of Huguenot family, but descended, it is claimed, from the marriage of Col. Ireton with Bridget, daughter of Oliver Cromwell. Of the children of Richard and Elizabeth were two daughters (one the wife of a Barker of Baltimore, the other the wife of a Tonson of Washington) and sons Richard, Elias (who married sisters and moved to New York), and John and Rezin, who remained in Baltimore. Another son, or perhaps a grandson of Richard and Elizabeth was Augustus G. S. Wight. He removed to western Illinois about 1819 and finally settled in Galena. In 1821 he married Lucy Neville Calmes, great-granddaughter of Marquis de la Calm, who left France after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and settled in the Shenandoah Valley, Va. Augustus and Lucy had a daughter, wife of Hon. M. G. Johnson, a Galena lawyer, and an only son Calmes L. Wight of Galena, a soldier in the Mexican war. He married at Galena, April 18, 1846, Jane A. Stowe, daughter of Daniel and Augustus M. Stowe, and he died in Galena, April 5, 1849, aged about 24 years. His widow remarried. Calmes and Jane had Calmes Tonson Wight, born April 18, 1847, and Charles S. Wight, born August 9, 1849—the latter with the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. at Pittsburgh, Pa.

3044. Another descendant of Richard Wight was Rezin N. Wight of Baltimore, whose son Rezin Augustus Wight was born in Baltimore, April 17, 1836. The latter graduated at Harvard University, 1856, and later at the Albany law school. He was a lawyer in New York. From about 1872 he was a trustee of Vassar College. He began the compilation of a volume of Familiar Quotations, which John Bartlett succeeded to, finished and dedicated to Mr. Wight. Mr. Wight died in New York, January 6, 1890.

3045. On the banks of the Potomac lived David Burns, whose daughter Marcia married John P. Van Ness, a congressman, who about 1815 erected a mansion there. Ann Gertrude Wight, a cousin of John's wife, was long an inmate of the family and a participant of its hospitalities and honors. She had been educated in the Georgetown convent and had become its head. She is described as a woman of gentle manners, remarkable talents and much beauty. "Annoyed by the supremacy given to some French nuns in the convent she hastily left it, sought the home of her kinswoman, was absolved by the pope from all her vows except those of celibacy, and entered the gay world. The death of Gen. Van Ness without a will, left her penniless but with powerful friends. The daughter of the Empress Yturbide, of Mexico, had left to Miss Wight, whom she knew in the convent, by will, her share in a claim against the Mexican government. Miss Wight went to Mexico and demanded payment of this claim. Her demand was granted to the extent of a competence for life. After this she visited France in company with one of our ministers, returning at the breaking out of the civil war, to lend her influence to the Southern cause. She died in Richmond, after a career of unusual power in political, social and religious life," at the residence of Hon. John T. Mason, a short time prior to the civil war. (Milwaukee Sentinel, February 13, 1884; Townsend's Washington Outside and Inside.) I presume this lady may have been a descendant of Richard Wight (3043).

3046. JOHN J. WIGHT of Cockeysville, Md., has a son William H. Wight. Alpheus Wight is clerk in Cockeysville P. O.

Ryerson, was discharged at Castine, in September, 1814. His residence since has been in Belfast. Save for discrepancy in birth date this might be 650.

3061. The Pension office, Washington, has record of Nathan Wight, who married April, 1824, Ruth Durell, of Paris, Me. From my inability to locate Nathan among the Wights, and on the authority of Lapham and Maxim's Paris 590, I judge this name to be Wright.

3062. ROBERT WIGHT, of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, had by wife, Christina Cruikshanks, sons, Alexander, John and William. John, born 1800, married in Leith, June 1, 1826, Mary Gordon, born in Sutherlandshire, in 1808. In 1826 the newly wedded pair came to America. Their only son, William Wight, born October 30, 1828, in Bytown, near Ottawa, Canada, married there July 20, 1853, Lucy Louisa Cobb, born April 13, 1833, in Hawkesbury, Ontario. William and Lucy, in November, 1879, moved to Eau Claire, Wis., with their children, Allen, John and Mary Wight, and all are prosperous there.

3063. WILLIAM WIGHT and a brother came to America about 1790. The brother moved northwest, William lived near Hudson, N. Y., and married before 1793, Mrs. Rachael Ellis. He afterwards went to Kingston, Canada, and was lost to his friends. He had by Rachael an only son, who married. This son had three sons, including William H. Wight, of Hudson, and Lieut. Charles A. Islof (Isle of) Wight had a son John Fennel Wight, father of five sons, including James E. Wight of Hodgensville, Ky. This last says the maiden name of his grandmother was Webster, and of his great-grandmother Dorsett. James E. Wight's father died in his son's infancy. James E. graduated from Cecilian college, Ky., 1875, was admitted to the bar 1880, and is a lawyer in Hodgensville. Other names common in his branch are Amos, William and Charles.

He was discharged in December, 1856, at Fort Hawkins, Oregon. In 1866 he had been living for nine years in Lane County, Oregon.

3075. A gravestone at Richmond, Mass., is in memory of Frances Maria, wife of Erastus G. Wight. She died at Stuyvesant, N. Y., aged 35, January 4, 1834. Erastus was a physician in Stuyvesant, whose parents lived in Richmond. Erastus had at least Algernon and Jeanette Wight. The maiden name of Erastus' mother was Fleming. I cannot locate this family in my book. Knowledge of them reaches me through the courtesy of Mr. F. D. Richards, recorder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Salt Lake City, Utah.

3076. THOMAS WIGHT was born in Delhi, N. Y., 1839, was educated at Delaware, N. Y., academy and graduated 1864, at New York college of physicians and surgeons. 3080. JOHN WIGHT "who lived in New York and dealt in shoe findings on Division St.," married Mary Catherine Judson, born in Stamford, Conn., September 11, 1807. Two children John William and John Robert, died in early childhood, and are buried in a cemetery on First St., New York. (Phoenix' Whitney Family I, 709; II, 1510.) I have an idea this might be a first marriage of John[8] Wight (1382).

3081. LYMAN WIGHT, private in 21st Ohio regiment, war of 1861, is recorded in Surgeon General's office, Washington, as having died September 20, 1863. Save for discrepancy in death date, this might be 1141.

3082. J. S. WIGHT, private in 29th Maine, war of 1861, wounded in the service, was mustered out June 5, 1865.

3083. The card "Nathan & Wight, No. 339 Broadway, New York, U. S. A.," has been in my office.

CHAPTER XII.

An Essay at the English Ancestry of Thomas[1] Wight.

3093. I make an essay here upon the English ancestry of Thomas[1] Wight of Dedham. I premise that costly and careful, although not complete, investigations have been made, and that nothing positive can as yet be asserted. That Thomas[1] Wight of Dedham came to this country from the Isle of Wight is claimed in the following language, written about 1840, by Danforth Phipps[6] Wight (267):

"He was a native of the Isle of Wight, England, and was driven from his country by the religious persecutions of the time. My authority for the place of his birth and the cause of his coming here is, family tradition. When it is recollected that one of my father's sisters lived to the age of eighty-eight, and one to the age of ninety-one [126, 121]—a period half the length of time which has elapsed since the death of Thomas Wight—and that these circumstances were communicated to them by those of his descendants who were aged when they were young, the authority for this statement may be considered as deserving of credit as though it were derived from any written or printed document of his time" (Wight's Wight Family, 7).

That there were Wights on the Isle of Wight quite back to the probable birth date of Thomas[1] Wight of Dedham I personally know from the following circumstances:

On August 18, 1880, I arrived in Carisbrooke, Isle of Wight, and made diligent inquiry for the surname Wight. At that place and at others upon the Island I made close investigation and was assured by church-clerks, vicars, postmasters and others of wide acquaintance that Wight is not now known as a name upon the Isle of Wight. At Carisbrooke my search was particular. I first visited the churchyard adjoining the ivy-covered, square-towered stone church and scanned narrowly each gravestone. There was no such name as I sought. Later in the day I re-visited the churchyard where I became acquainted with the venerable clerk who was present at a burial. I made known my errand and told him my name. He confirmed the general statement that there were now no Wights there and said, moreover, that my search for ancient headstones with Wight upon them in that churchyard would doubtless be fruitless, as the custom had been to bury over, every century or so, owing to limited space. One layer of tombs would gradually grow over another. Greatly disappointed, I was turning to leave when I espied close up to the church walls the tops of two apparently ancient stones. Nothing of the inscriptions was visible. Obtaining the clerk's permission I took the spade which had just been used to bury the dead, and dug down in front of these two ancient stones, and there is now printed for the first time the inscriptions upon their faces. My perseverance had had its reward. The more modern stone ran thus:

Here LYeth the Body of William Wight who departed this Life January the 7th 1704 and in the
One and fortieth year of his age

And this was the other:

Heare lyeth the body of Marke
Wight Seenyor who departed
this life the 29
day of September in the year of ouer
Lord God 1694

I am glad to save these ancient inscriptions from the darkness of oblivion which was closing around them.

Additional confirmation of the presence of Wights on the Island, about the time of our Thomas[1] Wight, is furnished by Charles Frederick[9] Farlow (299), whose intelligent labor in the English field I mention under his name. He has sent me the following extracts from the Carisbrooke church records:

Edward Wight, baptized January, 1619; Samuel Wight and Mary Knowlton married Augnst 1, 1621; Mark Wight, baptized March 16, 1625; Mark Wight, baptized October 22, 1625; William Wight, baptized September 21, 1628. (The baptism of these two Mark Wights so near together would indicate the presence of two families at Carisbrooke.) At Newport, at the Record Commissioners, Mr. Farlow found the baptism in 1716 of David, son of Joseph Wight, of Carisbrooke, and in 1752 of John, son of David and Ann Wight. There also were recorded the death of James in 1794, and of another James in 1801.

Mrs. Harriet Wilson Wight (1338) found at Arreton, Isle of Wight, an inscription to the memory of Elizabeth, wife of John Wight, of Shide Bridge, who died, aged 58, July 22, 1742; also to Edward Wight, of Banbridge, who died September 7, 1717.

Two points seem, therefore, established: First, by respectable tradition that Thomas[1] Wight, of Dedham, came from the Isle of Wight; second, by written evidence that there were Wights upon that Island from the period of said Thomas'[1] probable birth down to the present century. The question now arises whether he or his family or ancestry was long settled upon this Island or whether they were recent arrivals there. In the absence of any evidence I incline to the latter opinion, and that the likeness between his surname and the far older name of the Island was but a coincidence. To this point I now turn:

At and before 1274 the Wight family was settled at Wight's Manor, West Cheyham, Ewell, Surrey. This manor "had been originally held in knight's service and suit of the King's Court at Ewell, but subsequently to 1155 it was held of Merton or Martin's Abbey" (Burke's Landed Gentry, 1739). This estate continued in the Wights until 1496 when it was sold to Sir John Leigh by William, son of Thomas Wight. After this alienation said William resided at Blackland, Wimbledon, Surrey—an estate "which he and his ancestors had likewise held by knight's service from the Abbey of Merton." This property continued in the Wights several generations after the alienation of Wight's Manor.

John Wight, of Blackland, was a great-grandson of said William. He married Anna Bray, who was the heiress of the estate of Braboeuf Manor in Surrey and whose lineage is shown in the following

PEDIGREE.

Anna Bray (the heir), wife of John Wight.

This pedigree is taken from Burke's Landed Gentry, 1739. It differs in some important particulars, however, from Manning and Bray's Surrey.

Of John and Anna (Bray) Wight were at least two sons. The second son, Thomas Wight, was a soldier and fought in Scotland with Somerset in 1547. Thomas married about 1559, Janet, daughter of John Cockburn, laird of Ormiston, and died about 1572. His widow settled at Ormiston under the protection of her father, who granted to her and her family a house and portion of land in the barony for her support. I conjecture that from Thomas and Janet may have sprung the Wights at 3062–3070 and those at 3095, 3099, 3102. The head of this family at Ormiston is Cathcart Boycott Wight, born November 27, 1849, son of Andrew and Louisa Mary Catherine (Boycott) Wight.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, gu., a chevron erm. between three bears' heads couped arg. muzzled sa., for Wight; 2nd and 3rd, gu., on a chief arg. three grenadoes fired ppr., for Boycott, quartering Bray, Jenyns, Braboeuf, Danhurst, Simpson, Brown and Scott. Crests—1st, Wight: In a mural crown gu. a bear's head arg. muzzled sa.; 2nd, Boycott: In a mural crown gu. an armed arm embowed, casting a grenado all ppr. Mottoes—Wight: Fortuna vectem sequatur; Boycott: Pro rege et religione.

I presume that the oldest son of John and Anna (Bray) Wight was John Wight, of Wimbledon, who, living in the time of Elizabeth, married Agnes, daughter of Robert Kemp, said Agnes being, through her mother, the heir of the Braboeuf estates (Burke's Landed Gentry, 1740). I do not know what relationship, if any, existed between Agnes Kemp and Anna Bray or how both of these women were heirs of the Braboeuf estate. An examination of Surrey pedigrees not accessible to me might clear up the matter.

Now, as to the descendants of John and Agnes (Kemp) Wight: There were five sons of this pair: Rice, Thomas, Ralph, Joseph and John. Concerning these, I proceed:

I. RICE WIGHT, the heir of Braboeuf, and husband of Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Needler, of Horley, Surrey. Rice was buried November 3, 1601. His wife was buried January 13, 1626–7. His will, now at Somerset House (1602, Book Montague, folio 82), says that he was of Erlington, Surrey, Parish of St. Nicholas. The will mentions children—Rice, Thomas, John, Barbara, Elizabeth, Katherine, Marie, Martha, Sarah, Winifred, Audrey and Alice.

John is residuary legatee and sole executor. The will also speaks of the testator's brothers Ralph, John and Joseph, and a sister Elizabeth, wife of John Armstrong. Among Rice, Sr.'s, children were:

1. John Wight, heir of Braboeuf, who died November 5, 1656. He married June 23, 1600, Ann, daughter of George Austen. Ann was buried September 23, 1629. John then married Ann, daughter of Rev. Henry Beadle, rector of Puttenham. John's heir, also John, baptized November 13, 1632, married Cornelia, daughter of Sir William Bowles. From them descends the present Lord of Braboeuf Manor, Albert Wight, born July 4, 1842. The arms: Gu., a chevron erm. between three bears' heads couped arg. muzzled sa. Crest—Out of mural crown gu., a bear's head arg. muzzled sa.
2. Rice Wight, ancestor of the Berkshire family. Rice had a Thomas. Thomas Wight, of West Hendretb, Berkshire, clerk, bachelor, married August 8, 1661, 30 years of age, Mary Wiseman, of the same place, aged 25.
3. Thomas Wight, ancestor of the Wights of Ireland. He had a son Thomas.

II. THOMAS WIGHT, ancestor of the Essex Wights.

III. RALPH WIGHT, who had a son Rice. Rice had a Thomas, born in Holland, naturalized in England, 15 Chas. II.

IV. JOSEPH WIGHT.

V. JOHN WIGHT.

Now, examining the Thomas Wights in the above statement to see if our Thomas[1] can be found: Thomas Wight of the Essex family and his descendants are not satisfactorily traceable, but I can find no evidence of any Thomas among them who did not remain in England; Thomas Wight, of Berkshire, cannot be Thomas[1], for Thomas of Berkshire married Mary Wiseman, and, besides, was born in 1631; Thomas of Holland cannot be Thomas[1], for Thomas of Holland would be too young. By this elimination I am left with Thomas, ancestor of the Wights of Ireland. This Thomas himself would be too old, but he had a son Thomas, and this Thomas I put forward, but with much diffidence, as Thomas[1] Wight of Dedham and Medfield. The theory is that he or his father traversed the short distance from Surrey to the Isle of Wight for settlement, and that eventually some of the family made their way to Ireland and some to America. The first Irish Wight of record was "Edward Wight, of Wightfield," who was sheriff of Limerick in 1675, and had eleven sisters, as Burke's Commoners, III, 205, states. There was a Wightfield on the Isle of Wight and an Edward was baptized at Carisbrooke in January, 1619. This Edward may have been the sheriff of Limerick and a cousin or nearer relative of our Thomas[1].

I have thus located tentatively our Thomas[1] Wight, presuming him to be of the Surrey family. I feel convinced he belongs there: 1. No other Wight family appears from which he could spring; 2. The dates permit; 3. Surrey is not remote from the Isle of Wight; 4. From the similarity of christian names. Observe the names of the sons of Thomas[1] Wight (page 3), born before settlement in Dedham: Henry, John, Thomas. Their names all occur, and especially John and Thomas, among the connections of John and Agnes (Kemp) Wight; 5. The father of Thomas whom I have selected is said by Burke to be the ancestor of the Wights of Ireland. The probable association of our Thomas with the Wights of Ireland has just been mentioned; 6. The fact that a Rice Wight (3028) was in New England in the next century would seem to show that the attention of the Surrey family was turned in this direction. At all events, I present this affiliation of our Thomas[1] Wight of Dedham, as a starting point for others to work from.

3094. The following traditions concerning our ancestry have reached me from the persons mentioned:

From George Edward[8] Wight (1506): There is a romance connected with Thomas Wight who settled in Dedham in 1636 which has been handed down to us by our fathers. In England he fell in love with a very wealthy young lady by the name of Roundy. Her father refused to let her marry him, as he was only a poor minister. He left and came to America. She sold her jewels, followed him to America and married him. Her father relented sufficiently to bequeath her a large sum of money, but the record of her marriage not being obtainable the heirs could not secure the estate.

From Jarvis Sherman[7] Wight (1195): "There was also a tradition that Thomas Wight was a derivative from William Prince of Orange." If this means the William who became King of England as William III, history condemns it as impossible, William not having been born until Thomas was along in years. But the tradition suggests another, which has reached me from more than one source, that the earliest Wight of the Isle of Wight was a natural son of one of the Stuart kings of Scotland. The statement is mentioned only because of the pertinacity with which it has been handed down, both here and in England.

CHAPTER XIII.

Wights of Great Britain not Otherwise Mentioned.

3095. Allibone's Dictionary of English Authors, III, 2711, mentions the following: Andrew Wight, author of Present State of the Husbandry in Scotland, 6v., Edinburgh, 1778–90; Rev. George Wight, author of The Mosaic Creation Viewed in the Light of Modern Geology, Glasgow, 1846, and Geology and Genesis, London, 1857; George Wight, author of Queensland, London, 1861; John Wight, author of Mornings in Bow Street, with drawings by Cruikshank; R. Wight, author of Notes on Cotton Farming; Robert Wight, M. D., surgeon of the East India Company's Madras Establishment, wrote many botanical books; Thomas Wight, author of History of the Rise and Progress of the Quakers in Ireland in 1653-1700.

3096. In the records of the corporation of Dartmouth is a small parchment deed in Latin, apparently of the beginning of the reign of Edward I, wherein is mentioned a messuage lying between the houses of Ewald Scot and William de Wight.

3097. The will of Daniel Wight, the younger, "Citizen and Distiller of London," made February 4, 1700, proved November 22, 1704, gives and bequeaths to his brother Samuel Wight and to his son Daniel Wight, "equally betweene them, the debt of three hundred pounds and interest thereof, due and owing unto me by Judgment from Thomas White, the elder of Horsham, in the County of Sussex, gentleman decd." (P. C. C., 244 Ash.) In the churchwardens' accounts of Horsham in 1700 and 1701, we read: "Re. of Mr. Wight For a Grave for Mrs. Wooder, 00.06.08." See Sussex Archæological Collections, XXXIV, 151, 155—being Genealogical memoranda relating to the family of White of Horsham, Steyning, Shipley and Cowfold, Co. Sussex, of Mitcham, Croydon and Reigate, Co. Surrey, and of London, by R. Garraway Rice, of the Middle Temple. For the pamphlet containing these memoranda I am indebted, as I am for other favors, to Mill Stephenson, Esq., 3 Plowden Buildings, Temple, London, E. C.

3098. Thomas Whight, married August 28, 1567, Annie Bright, baptized November 19, 1539, daughter of Roger Bright, of Bury St. Edmunds, Eng. Thomas and Annie had Margaret, Mary, Dorothy and Frances (Bond's Watertown, 98).

3099. The following appear in various volumes of Howell's State Trials:

I. 1072—Edmund Campion was "elected to St. John's College, Oxford, by Wite, the Founder," about 1560.

III. 118—"Robertus Wight nuper de Norwico smith," is mentioned in depraved Latin as living in the fifth year of Henry VII.

XXIII, 826—Alexander Wight was a baker in Edinburgh, 1794.

XXVI, 837—Major Andrew Wight resided at "Ormiston, in the County of Haddington," in 1797.

3100. I have seen notice of "Magna Carta cum statutis tunc Antiquis, etc., Square, 12mo., Wight, Londini, 1602."

3101. Pepys, in his Diary, is exasperatingly indefinite in his allusions to his Wight relatives. We know that his "Uncle Wight" lived in London; that his aunt Wight was "a silly, froward, ugly woman" (Pepys' Diary, V, 331); that his uncle and aunt "had cozens Mary and Robert" (Pepys' Diary, IV, 67); that there was a Mrs. Annie Wight and a Mrs. Margaret Wight. Of this latter we learn that she was a very pretty lady, whom it cost 12d. to kiss after the first, "yet I did adventure upon a couple" (Pepys' Diary, IV, 322). All this is very delectable information, but my preference would be to know the names of her kin rather than the price of her kisses. Pepys' Pepys Family, Pedigree III, mentions Edith Pepys, who married Thomas Wight of Deneton, Suffolk, but Edith was a very remote cousin of the garrulous diarist. Besides in another pedigree in the same volume, also in Pepys' Diary, in a pedigree in Vol. X, Thomas' name is given Wright.

3102. Alexander Wight was of Edinburgh, "an excellent lawyer, but of very homely appearance, with heavy features, a blind eye which projected from the socket, a swag belly and a limp" (Boswell's Johnson, I, 337, Note 1). He published in Edinburgh in 1784 An Inquiry Into the Rise and Progress of Parliament, Chiefly in Scotland, etc. Alexander Wight is mentioned as an advocate in Howell's State Trials, XXIII, 46, 87. He also wrote Law of Elections, an edition of which, quarto, two vols., was published in 1806 in Edinburgh.

3103. Mrs. Harriet Wilson Wight (1338) sends me the following reference to a recent visit to the ancient Church of St. Mary Magdalen, Tetbury, Gloucestershire: "There is a quaint old Town Hall and a pump that were given to the city by Rev. John Wight, vicar of the church for thirty-six years. He was a great benefactor to the place. His tomb has his coat-of-arms: Gules, a chevron between three boars' heads couped or. The inscription: 'John Wight, A. M., thirty-six years vicar of this parish and a sincere lover of it, which he manifested by many public charities as well as being the principal benefactor and promoter of building this church, which was opened October 7, 1781. The said John Wight departed this life at the age of 70 years, November 24, 1777.' The church was built in 1400, but was so out of repair when Mr. Wight went there that he built it nearly all over at his own expense. There is also mention made of his sister Ann and of a Robert Wight."

3104. From the same source: "There are in the crypt in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, the graves of the Rev. Moses Wight and his wife Ann, who both died in the last century. He was a canon of the cathedral."

3105. JAMES LANE WIGHT, Esq., J. P. of Tedstone Court, Herefordshire, died in 1885. His wife was Sarah, daughter of John Knill of Blackheath, Kent.

3106. Elizabeth, daughter of John Wight of Etching-Abbotts, Hampshire, married George Morecroft of Churchill, Oxfordshire, who died in 1661.

3107. Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Wight of Ibstoke, Leicester, wife of John Danbynge, died August 29, 1661, and has a monument in Westerham Church, Gloucestershire, 3108. JOHN WIGHT of St. Botolph, Aldgate, London, butcher, bachelor, married January 31, 1622-3, the widow, Frances Stubbs, of Plesby, Essex.

3109. RICHARD WIGHT was purser of the New Africa March 20, 1693-4. He would seem to have been in Ireland, if not a resident there.

3110. MATTHEW WIGHT, citizen of London, made his will in 1625, bequeathing to St. Olave's, Southwark. He gave a legacy to his brother Christopher (1625, Clarke, fol. 98).

3111. DANIEL WIGHT made his will January 3, 1620, bequeathing to his father Daniel, then to his mother Grace, then to his next of kin (Swan, fol. 21). This Daniel, Senior, is probably Daniel Wight, "minister of God at Daventry," whose will, made in 1626, mentions his wife Grace, his children Thomas, William, John, James, Nathaniel, Samuel, Elizabeth, wife of Elias Whitehead, Deliverance, Ann and Mary (1640, Coventry, fol. 135).

3112. JOHN WIGHT, citizen and draper of London, mentions in his will, made about 1580, his son Thomas and his daughters Anna Wilson, Martha Mylls and Katherine (1589, Leicester, fol. 63).

3113. The will of John Norton, made in 1612, mentions Thomas Wight, late citizen and draper of London, and the latter's children, Lucy and Thomas (1612, Capel, fol. 5). Again, there is the will in 1641 of William Wight, citizen and draper of London, which mentions his sons John, Daniel and Thomas, and daughters Susan (wife of Francis Gilbert), Martha and Ann (1645, Rivers, fol. 94).

3114. THOMAS WIGHT, of the city of London, gentleman, made his will January 16, 1633 (1634, Seager, fol. 4). This will mentions his uncles Bartholomew and Robert Hungate, and Leonine, a son of said Robert. It also mentions a brother-in-law Henry (name in doubt, but resembles Nevill, see 3115). Also are mentioned his brother Adam Washington Wight, and Henry, son and heir of his brother Gabrielle Wight. There appear to be three "cousins," Gabriel, Ellen and Ann. The testator had also a sister Ann, wife of John Beale. These had a son Richard Beale. Thomas' realty was in Flamstead, Hertfordshire.

3115. THOMAS WIGHT of Betchworth, Surrey, married Rosamond Nevill. He purchased land of Sir Philip Conyngsby in 1603. In Collectanea Topographica et Genealogica, IV, 109, this occurs:

On gravestone in St.-Dunstan's-in-the-West in London in South Alley, directly below the little east door, is a brass plate infixed containing a gentlewoman's picture, a coate of arms and the inscription, 'Here lyeth Rosamund, the daughter of George Nevill, Gent., and late wife of Thomas Wight, citizen and draper of London, a very Godly and vertuous woman, by whom he had issue 5 sounes and 3 daughters, whereof remained alive at her departure one sonne and one daughter. She departed out of this life ye 6th of December, 1604, Aetatis 36.' Arms of Rosamund, wife of Thomas Wight and daughter of Nevill, Gu., a chevron erm. between three bears' heads, erased (a) and muzzled (s), within a border engrailed (of the Last) for Wight (or White) impaling Nevill Gu. a saltire ermine.

This plate, dated 1656-7, was not replaced when this church was restored in 1833. The church record states that Rosamund, the wife of Thomas Wight, draper, was buried December 13, 1604. There are no other Wights recorded at St. Dunstan's, but there is there a baptism February 2, 1602-3, of Mary, daughter of Wm. Whyte, Taylor. The surviving son of Thomas and Rosamund, Gabriel Wight, stationer, of Betchworth, married (Col. Chester's Marriage Licenses, 1463) "Mary Campion of Great-All-Hallows, Thames St., London, spinster, daughter of Abraham Campion, deceased, at Great-All-Hallows aforesaid, 29 June, 1615, Bishop of London's office." Gabriel died December 20, 1621 (Morant's History of Essex, I, 6). Of this marriage was Henry Wight of Gresham Hall, Barking, Essex, who was buried there December 26, 1698. His mother had again married—her second husband being Sir Edward Gresham. Her will, March 1, 1668, mentions her sons, Sir Marmaduke Gresham and Henry Wight (Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica, II, 48). Henry Wight married Margaret Hutchinson. From this marriage was issue whose descendants—but on the spinster side only—still survive.

There is, without a doubt, a close connection between the Wights mentioned at 3111-3115, but I shrink from attempting to construct a pedigree. Perhaps all of them belong with the descendants of THOMAS WIGHT of Essex (3093). The arms at 3115 are certainly the same as those used by the posterity of John Wight of Blackland, page 317.

POSTSCRIPT.

7, Note 2. My interest as a descendant of the Morses leads me to a closing reference. In Dedham Hist. Reg. I, 79, mention is made of a very late Memorial of the Family of Morse, compiled by Henry Dutch Lord. By this book a different origin is given to Samuel Morse, the emigrant, from the one extracted by me from Register XIX, 264. In the records of Dedham, Eng., are given the marriage, February 15, 1586, of Richard Morse and Margaret Symson, and the baptism, July 25, 1587, of Samuel, son of Richard Morse. As our Samuel died December 5, 1654, aged 67, there is some reason for believing that Samuel, the emigrant, was identical with Samuel, son of Richard.

THE INDEXES.

——Index-learning turns no student pale,
Yet holds the eel of science by the tail.
—Dunciad, Book I, line 279.

The indexes are in the following order:

I. Index of Christian names of Wights.
II. Index of names of persons marrying descendants of Thomas[1] Wight.
III. Index of pedigrees of some intermarrying families.
IV. Index of places of residence mentioned.
V. Alphabetical list, with imprint, of authorities cited.

Note that the references are not to pages but to the full-faced figures on the left side of the pages.

INDEX I.—Of Christian Names.

Note that this is an index to Christian names of those descendants only of Thomas[1] Wight, who bear the name Wight or were born Wight. Christian names of Wights in Chapters XI, XII, XIII, are included. The references are not to pages, but to the full-faced figures on the left hand side of the pages. Where a person has more than one given name, the second name is indexed indented under the first name. Thus Perry, indented under Aaron, followed by 2709, means that Aaron Perry Wight is found at No. 2709. These names are spelled as they are sent to me; I cannot discriminate between the real names and nicknames.

INDEX II.—Of Intermarriages.

Note that this is an index to the full names of persons who have married descendants, herein recorded, of Thomas[1] Wight, whatever names those descendants may bear. Intermarriages contained in Chapters XI, XII, XIII, XIV, are also included. The references are not to pages, but to the heavy-faced figures on the left hand side of the pages. Where more than one person of the same sirname is given, the Christian names are indented under the sirname, in proper alphabetical order.

INDEX IV.—Of Places.

Note that this is an index to places of permanent residence mentioned in this volume—not to places connected only temporarily with the persons chronicled. The references are not to pages but to the heavy figures on the left hand side of the pages. Points of the compass prefixed to names of places are disregarded in indexing. There may be more than one mention of the same place under a number, but a single reference does for all. Countries and states are indexed alphabetically, and minor municipalities are indented alphabetically under those countries and states.
